Raft, the debonair young fellow who is soon to be a picture star, gained himself a lot of new fans through his appearance at this house. His bit includes gagging with Murray, a bit with Miss Brian and Murray and his own specialty or a snappy and well performed rhythm dance, in which he was backed up by the Bines girls. The audience would have liked more.—E. D.

Stone and Gibbons Revue

New York Triboro

A first class flash dance act, featuring girl and boy principals and a four girl ensemble. The act offers every conceivable kind of dancing but with acrobatic predominating. These good looking youngsters work hard throughout their act and give the audience everything they have. The fine applause at finish proved the audience's appreciation for their entertainment. —E. D.

Stone Vernon Four

New York Capitol

The Stone Vernon Four offer an adagio dance that should please any audience. The girl is graceful, attractive and nervy, and is almost constantly in the air with never a dull moment. This quartet can capably fill any dance spot.—H. P.

Dancing Moderns (9)

Baltimore Hippodrome

Here is a fast moving act starting with a song, "We Are Moderns," by the three Dancing Moderns, curtains parting on full stage with special drapes representing a pearl garden with the Six Dancing Rochets in novelty high kicking and soft shoe steps, joined by the Three Dancing Moderns in a song, closing with three in tap work in one, then full stage again with the Six on in novelty dancing, the three do a modern dance based on an old Egyptian motif, followed by the Six in a skirt dance, joined by the three and eight in finale.

REVIEWS OF STAGE ACTS

DANCERS

Fox San Francisco

Mae Murray appears in a gay Parisian revue that lasts 40 minutes. She dances a coquetish chase dance with a male sextette, does an Argentine tango, and, as a finale offers the delightful Merry Widow waltz. She wears many gorgeous gowns and seems to please the women patrons especially. Included in her act is a song recitative.

Rena and Rathburn

Dallas Palace

Appearing as two staggering inebriates, this man and woman indulge in a rough and tumble novel acrobatic dance of the Apache order with the woman falling in some sensational splits, while the man with legs folded performs a series of somersaults and finally propels himself from the stage while in this contorted shape. The act performed with abandon, is interesting and went over well.

Gomez and Winona

New York Roxy

This dance team goes through a routine which includes ballroom, Spanish tango and adagio, combined in one. The dance was a feature in Billy Rose's "Crazy Quilt" and is well received.—H. P.

Jack Lester

Brooklyn Fox

Though this fellow is billed as the original triple rhythm dancer, he does little, in the two scenes built for him, to prove his ability. He did dance, and actually did a little triple rhythm dancing, but he left most of the work for the line girls who were backing him.

New York Palace

Featuring the Ganjou Brothers and Louise Gay, supported by Billy Hendricks, Miss Fourniere and Miss Devile, this act is an adagio dance in a Colonial setting. A little different, this spot on the bill got a nice hand.—H. P.

ACROBATICS

Walter "Dare" Wahl

New York Capitol

"Dare" Wahl is an acrobat who compares with the best. With his partner, he goes through a series of comical turns, flops and whatnots, and the audience sees four arms and four legs entangled in the most ludicrous fashion. The audience clamored for an encore and Wahl favored with some straight acrobatics, including a one-hand stand that's a wow. This act is good anywhere at any time.—H. P.

Runaway Four

New York Paramount

These four boys are really acrobats and tumblers, but have injected so much comedy into their act they find little time to do their specialties. They dance, sing a little and do many things to bring laughter to the audience, besides one good bit of acrobatic work and tumbling. They did well and the show caught.—E. D.

COMEDY

Ken Murray

New York Paramount

This well known stage and screen comedian works throughout the "All In Fun" show as master of ceremonies, band leader, gagster, and in his own spot and with both the stars, Mary Brian and George Raft.

Murray opens his act with many laughable gags and stories. After five minutes of working alone, Milton Charlston as his stooge comes on the stage from the orchestra and then the fun really begins. Murray gags with Milton and tosses him around at the least provocation. He also appears with Miss Brian and with Raft, separately and together.

Here is a versatile comedian who is entertaining to any audience.—E. D.

Mills and Robinson

Brooklyn Metropolitan

Personable boy and girl team presenting smart chatter and gags. Mills plays straight for Flo Robinson's dumb talk, and also offers some well played violin solos. Miss Robinson's eccentric rhythm dancing earns a lot of applause. The act runs 15 minutes, and is chock full of entertainment and laughs.—E. D.

Sammy Cohen

New York Palace

Sammy Cohen, screen comedian, has a surefire act. There are laughs throughout, especially a shadow boxing bit which is a howl. Doris Roche (Mrs. Sammy Cohen) has a winning personality and sings "Keepin' Out of Mischief Now," gaining her share of applause. This act can fill any bill effectively.—H. P.

Roscoe Ates and Daughter Dorothy

Baltimore Hippodrome

Here is an A-1 comic act that gets them laughing and keeps them that way until the very end without a dull moment. Ates goes into his stuttering chatter and is interrupted by Dorothy. They keep up a rapid fire dialogue with some novelty steps and a song by Dorothy and violin notes by Ates who went down into audience making friends with the kids. Got an ovation and they stopped the show.

Bob Hope

New York Palace

Bob Hope offers an act full of laughs. Employing two stooges who continually keep the audience in good humor, the comedian follows this advantage with quips and gags and gains a hearty response from the audience.—H. P.

Milton Charlston

New York Paramount

This able comedian first works as stooge for Ken Murray and gets plenty laughs and applause for his work. His funny appearance is in decided contrast to his fine singing and dancing, which he does as his own specialty later on in the show.—E. D.

Al Bayes & Harvey Speck

Milwaukee Wisconsin

These two lads start out a bit slow but warm up to their task of comedy dancing and patter in fine fashion. Their wisecracks for the most part are fresh and their dancing original. They bow off to a good hand.

SPOTS & SHOTS ON BROADWAY

Lew Brown, the songwriter, didn't like what Jerry Wald, radio critic of a daily tabloid, wrote about him, so meeting Wald in front of Lindy's, he said it with five clenched fingers. The next day, in his column, Jerry apologized—now they're friends again.

We piped one of the early straw hats on the rialto the other afternoon and under the chapeau was none other than Jack Mulhall with that famous Mulhall smile. You'd smile, too, if you were on your way to Europe for a couple of months.

That chubby-faced lad, on a window sill at the Walker-Seabury tilt, was none other than Morton Downey.

Charlie Tobias, Sidney Claire, Al Sherman, Percy Weinrich, Vincent Rose, Murray Mencher and Al Lewis, otherwise known as "Songwriters on Parade," opened this week at the Earle in Washington. It may interest Mr. Hoover, who asked for a "cheer up" song recently, to know that these lads have written one. It is entitled "O. K. Beer."

Stubby Kreuger will soon trek west where he may join Mack Sennett. With so many bathing beauties, Sennett may need an actor who can swim as well as Stubby.

The reason why Sid Weiss deserted the ranks of faithful contributors to Broadway columnists is because that worthy is doing a pillar about the Main Stem for a daily up thar in Westchester.

Florence Case, 16-year-old Radio star, opened last week at the Branford, Newark, and is wowing the cash customers. She ought to, having looks, personality and a sweet voice.

The Palace has adopted a new morning low price of 25 cents. A few more price reductions and some of those actors who congregate outside may be financially able to take in the show.

Billy Barry, songwriter, and his partner, Jack Bain, are creating a lot of talk with their act at the Stork Club on Park Avenue. This harmony team is auditioning for Radio.

Change in Orchestra Leaders

Rube Wolf has returned to the Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, and leader of the Warfield Joy Gang and master of ceremonies. He succeeds Hermie King, who goes to the Paramount theatre, Oakland, taking the place of Louis Kosloff, who returns to southern California.

OVERTURES

FREDDY MACK (Brooklyn Fox) conducted his 20 piece orchestra in the overture, "Il Guarany," from the opera of the same name. The young and personable leader proved his and his men's versatility by their fine playing of this difficult composition and in putting it over equally as well as they do those in the lighter vein. Heretofore this orchestra has usually featured the novelty type of overture and their change to the present type is being welcomed by the discriminating music lovers who frequent this house.

LEON VAN GELDER (Jersey City Stanley) introduced an overture entirely different from any heretofore reviewed. Though the main theme of it was musical, the audience was being sold on the advantages of living today. The overture commemorated Memorial Day, building it up with an appropriate musical background as historical scenes were shown on the screen.

As the music was played and scenes on screen shown, a story, in trailer form, was cunningly woven in. Through all this waving of flags, etc., the dynamic personality of Van Gelder, though slight in stature, predominated. His timing and leadership are of the best. The applause that greeted the leader and the boys' efforts at the finish showed the audience appreciation of their efforts.

MARK LEVANT (New York Astoria Triboro) presented compilation of "Indian Melodies" for his overture this week. The outstanding offering in this nicely played overture was Mr. Levant's violin solo of "Indian Love Call," which earned a great reception from this audience.

WALT ROESNER (San Francisco Fox). This week's musical offering of the Fox Concert orchestra harkens back to the classics, with an overture made up of selections from the works of Saint Saens. There are selections from "Samson Et Dalila" and "Suite Algerienne," with "Dance Macabre" offered at considerable length. The organ is used to advantage in the stirring finale.

JOE FULCO (New Orleans Loew's State) takes a heavy hand with his Music Week overture of "The Desert Song." He opens with full orchestra, then features Anthony Scaglione with a sax solo of "One Alone." Full orchestra follows broken by a trumpet duet by Leo and Lucian Broekhoven, the overture closing with the stirring "Ho."

UP AND DOWN THE ALLEY

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Sweet little Mary Brian surprised the cash customers at the Paramount last week by doing some real hot dancing and did the audience go for her? . . .

George Raft, who was also featured in the show, looks a great deal like the late Rudolph Valentino, and incidentally it was Valentino who tried to "sell" George the idea of going into motion pictures . . . We have often heard performers tell of having lived or been born on the site of the theatre in which they are working. . . . George, when he tells the audience he was born just around the corner, is not kidding, he really was.

Little Bernice Stone, who has been ill for the past year or so, is back in show business. . . . Bernice used to be known as Peanuts, in the dance team of Peanuts and Popcorn, way back when. . . . She is now the star of Stone, Gibbons & Co., and playing Loew time. . . .

Sammy Cohen, the "American Beaut," and his partner, the beauteous Doris Roche, have just celebrated their second wedding anniversary. . . . They are featured at the Palace this week, with Loew vaudeville time to follow. . . .

Freddy Mack, the popular master of ceremonies and musical director over at the Fox, Brooklyn, is back on the job again after a minor operation . . . and looking better than ever, girls. . . .

Paul Lobit, of New Orleans, firmly believes he is the first pianist to play rag time and he backs up his contention with data of 38 years ago when he was known as "The Original Ivory Tickler". . . . Yeah, so what? . . .

Bernie Cowham, the much adopted son of Long Island, is back at the Keith in Flushing, where he has been featured organist for three years. . . . For the past month Bernie was at Fred Weiler's Victory theatre in Bayside, West, drawing them in at every performance. . . . It was due to the insistent demands of Manager Hawkins of the Keith and the thousands of "Bernie" fans in and around Flushing that he is back.

With Sammy Smith, a ringer, in the box, Witmark baseball nine, managed by George Fiantadosi, took Sime Siverman's Variety team over the bumps to the tune of 21-4 last week at Central Park. Buddy Morris relieved Mr. Smith at the end of the seventh and held the losers to two hits. Young Brookhouse hit the lone homer of the game. Ruth Etting and the "Colonel" were interested spectators.

S'long. . . . . . ED DAWSON

ORGAN SOLOS

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD (New York Paramount), at the twin pit consoles this week, presented an organ concert of "Mother" songs. This presentation would have fit in better for Mothers' Day than for Memorial Day; nevertheless the production was well presented and the audience liked it. Opening with that popular hit, "My Mom," played by the Crawfords as a duet, Julian Oliver then sang "Mama Mia," in Italian, as Mr. Crawford accompanied him. Miss Miriam Lax followed with "Mutterchen," in German. Jesse offered a solo of "The Russian Lullaby," with Helen following with a solo of "Mother Machree." "Petite Mamam," sung in French by Oliver, and "My Yiddishe Mamme," by Miss Lax, were accompanied by Crawford. As a grand finale, both of the Crawfords played "My Mom."

ADA RIVES (New Orleans Loew's State) presents "A World Cruise" as her solo, the songs representing the different countries. "Oui, Oui, Marie" brings the cruise to France and "Oh, Marie" takes it to Italy, with the audience singing. "Somebody Loves Lou" follows, then every one is transported to Cuba for "The Cuban Love Song," which scores a hand on its own. Miss Rives then announces through the screen horns that the voyage ends in Germany. "Auf Wiedersehn," popular but a bit unsingable as far as this audience was concerned, brought the solo to a close with a nice hand.

HAL BECKETT (Brooklyn Fox) this week offered an organ solo of request numbers that included "Nobody Else Is Around," "Lazy Days," "Kiss Me Good Night," and "Somebody Loves You," for the audience to sing, and a vocal solo by the singing usher, George Kaye, of "In My Hideaway."

ARSENE SIEGEL (Detroit Fisher) has a clever solo entitled "Things I Never Knew Till Now," against a background of Winchell continuity slides. Siegel's numbers, played with an inviting swing, are "Rain On the Roof," "Auf Wiedersehn," "Whistle and Blow Your Blues Away," a parody on "Penthouse Serenade" and "Somebody Loves You."

Grauman, Undecided, to Coast

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1931, unless otherwise specified.

Now they're "shooting" it on location, too

FOR some time after its announcement, Eastman Super-sensitive Panchromatic Film was used chiefly under artificial light. Now many cameramen are "shooting" it on location, too ...for these reasons: (1) Its speed substantially lengthens the photographic day...(2) It offers special advantages in photographing certain types of scenes and costumes...(3) In all scenes it yields that subtly superior quality which marks the most advanced motion picture photography...(4) It gives the cinematographer a single negative medium for all purposes...a medium which, once fully understood, affords a range of possibilities bounded only by the user's imagination and technical skill. Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

3 ways that LIVELY is a good

1. You don't have to renew carpets by the Bigelow Weavers so often. Laboratory tests and actual use prove they wear longer. Their strong, resilient tufts of Lively Wool do not mat down and destroy the pattern. That's why they keep their fresh beauty longer in spite of heavy traffic.

2. Lively Wool springs back underfoot, is softer and more resilient to walk on, deadens noise. By making patrons more comfortable, it helps to bring them back again.

WOOL
investment!

WHEN you're buying carpet, ask yourself three questions that have a direct bearing on profit and loss. How soon will I have to replace this carpet? Will it be easy to keep clean and attractive? Will it please my patrons?

No matter what you pay, carpets by the Bigelow Weavers give you the most for your money on all three of these counts. They're made of Lively Wool—The Bigelow Weavers' blends of many wools selected for toughness and resilience. That's why they keep their beauty longer, are softer to walk on and easier to clean!

Those are the reasons why you find Bigelow fabrics in 90% of the country's leading hotels and in representative theatres from coast to coast. For example: Waldorf-Astoria, Bowman-Biltmore, Statler, Greenbrier, and Knott Hotels; Earl Carroll theatre, Paramount houses in New York, Boston, and Amarillo, Alhambra in Sacramento, State Lake in Chicago, New Erlanger in Atlanta.

3. Carpets of Lively Wool are easier to clean—the tufts do not mat down and hold dirt. That saves money in maintenance.

A Way to Learn From the Other Fellow's Experience

an editorial

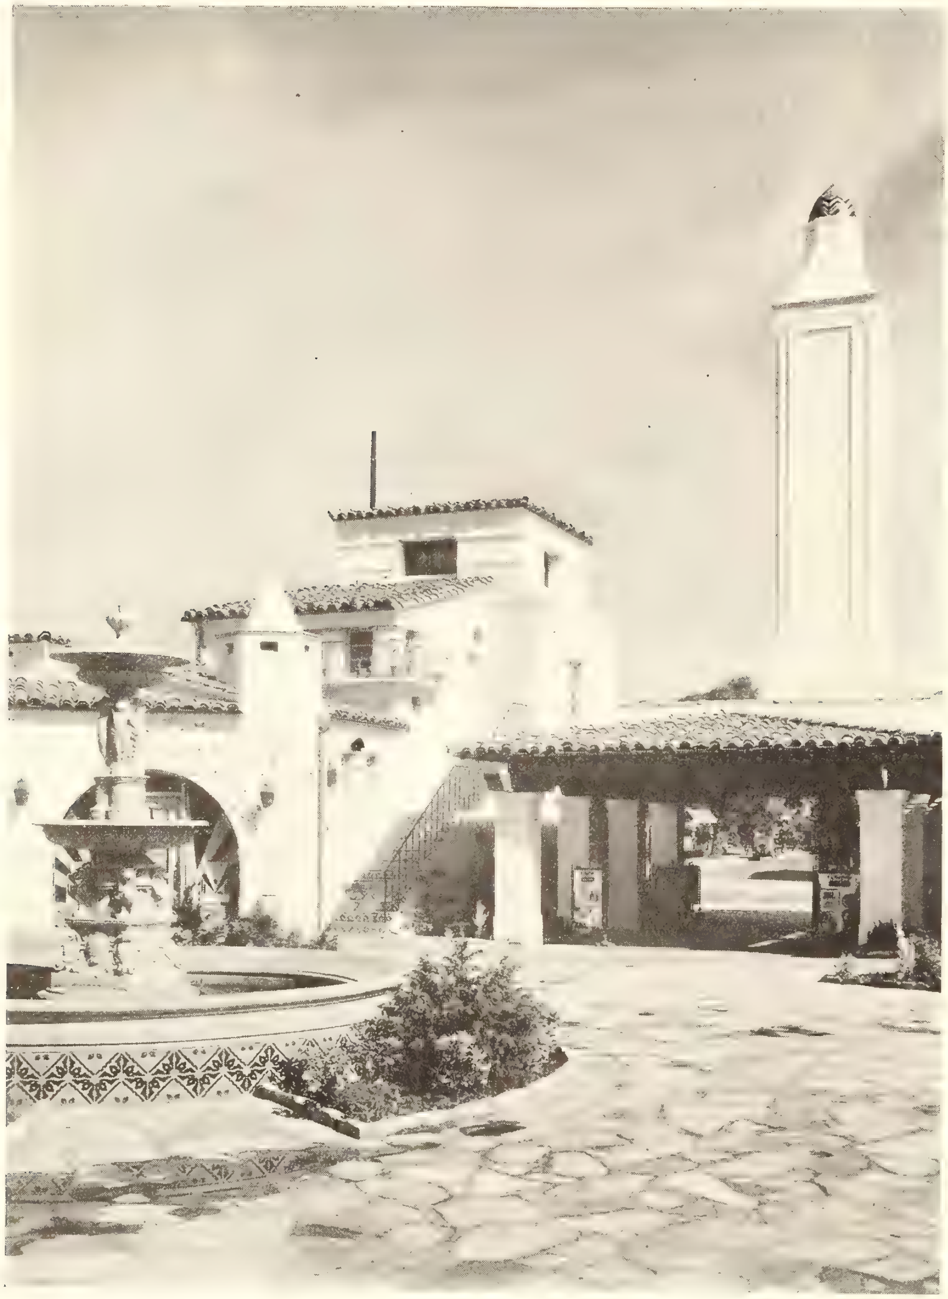
ELSEWHERE in this issue appears what, in editorial parlance, we choose to call a "featurette," a name that doesn't mean a great deal except in the light of the material therein, which in this case is a letter to this publication. Ordinarily, even a letter thought worthy passing on to other readers would be presented merely rather casually as just that—a letter. The communication in question, however, is, in our judgment, to be regarded as more than that—we call it a "little feature."

As such, Mr. D. R. Goldie's letter represents a type of editorial material that we should like to publish more of. It represents the direct experience of one who has just gone through a specific phase of physical operation of the theatre. And while this publication is much concerned with the principles and the theories having general application to theatre building and operation, it is just as interested in the device or method contrived by the theatre management itself in any specific instance. We can well listen to the "expert" concerning problems in his special field. But although he may not know science, the theatre executive does—like his brother in the realm of art—know what he likes, and also what works for him!

Mr. Goldie, who operates the New American theatre in Cherokee, Ia., astounds us early in his letter on his air conditioning installation, with the statement that "from all the data looked over from seven larger companies furnishing this equipment, we could in no town in the United States find where a real job of refrigeration had been installed." Now, were the "expert" to write that in an article for us, we should require some pretty heaving "experting" to back it up. But Mr. Goldie operates the theatre for which air conditioning equipment was sought, and being the customer, he is right. He is right in the sense that he knew what he wanted, and he was the one who had to decide when he got it.

He then ably describes what he actually did to effect air cooling for his theatre, adding in a kind of postscript, "we feel that we are sort of pioneering in refrigeration in small towns, and enough knowledge may be gained by our success or failure either to help or forestall other exhibitors from attempting the same thing." This thought is the one we have special reference to here.

We can think of no better way to serve our purpose than to include among our functions that of a clearing house for the practical ideas of those who run the theatres. Somehow the politics of this business can arouse exhibitors to "take pen in hand" upon very slight provocation. We think that straight-forward, clear reports on the devices and methods contrived and found workable by the owner or manager or technician in the physical operation of his theatre would be more helpful, since they contribute to a habit by which one theatre operator can participate in, and learn from, the experiences of his fellows. Mr. Goldie has suggested an excellent way for readers to employ this publication for their benefit, and we will gladly do our part if theatre operators wish to take advantage of it.



Left: Looking from the courtyard through entrance pylon toward the street. The courtyard is paved with flagstone, and is landscaped with flowers and shrubbery. In the center is a large fountain embellished with tile laid in a colorful pattern.

Looking through an arch of the theatre building proper, from the driveway of the porte-cochere, and toward the staircase that leads to the mezzanine level. Through these arches the patron enters the auditorium directly from the courtyard.

ADAPTING SPANISH STYLES TO MODERN THEATRE NEEDS

The new Fox Florence in the Los Angeles area, reminiscent of the historical California hacienda

THE FLORENCE theatre in Los Angeles, is not the first of its kind, but it is one of the most interesting of those adaptations of Spanish motif and method to modern theatrical purposes that one finds mainly in California—where, it may be added, things Spanish have an authentic historical and climatic reason for intruding upon the American scene. The Florence is a new Fox West Coast house located in a community of Los Angeles county, the residents of which are largely of the laboring class.

The building is of concrete construction with over-all dimensions of 132-345 feet. Exclusive of the site, it represents an investment of approximately $200,000, while the equipment and furnishings cost $50,000. Construction was under a general contract.

The Florence seats 1,700, with 1,400 chairs on the main floor, and 300 in a shallow balcony. Chairs (by National Theatre Supply Company) are full-upholstered.

The projection room measures 14 x 35 feet and has all rooms adjoining for all auxiliary equipment. The angle of projection is less than 18°. The walls and ceiling of the projection room are painted green. Equipment includes three projectors, one spot and one effect machine. The maximum screen size possible is 35 x 50 feet.

Air conditioning is by means of a plenum system, with circulation capable of supplying both heated and cooled (spray-chamber) air. The fuel used for heating is gas.

The entire auditorium is surfaced with acoustic plaster. Lighting is mainly by means of ceiling and bracket fixtures, following early Spanish methods and patterns. The fixtures are of wrought iron. Stage facilities are provided for full-sized productions.

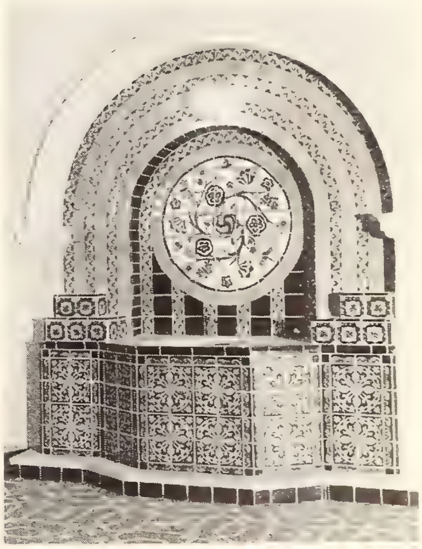
The Florence—to give this structure a prototype—spreads itself over a large plot in a manner reminiscent of the hacienda. The site has a frontage of 150 feet, and it extends back 1,000 feet. The first 200 feet are used as an approach and main court yard. The structure devoted to the theatre itself occupies about 200 feet of this depth, with the balance of the area being devoted to an enclosed automobile parking space, patterned after the Spanish patio, though on a much larger scale.

The architect was S. Charles Lee of Los Angeles, while interior decorations were executed by the Robert E. Power Studios of Los Angeles.

THE APPROACH to the Fox Florence first appears as a massive Spanish shop building. Through an open passage one enters a circular patio one hundred feet in diameter and paved with desert flag stone. In the center of the patio stands a large carved stone fountain on the top of which multi-colored lights play down on gay beds of California flowers.

Right: An elaborate decorative feature in the main foyer, located at one end and effecting a rich contrast to the essential white plainness of the wall treatment. The fountain is entirely of imported tile, and brilliant with many colors.



On the extreme right side of the patio is a covered portico, designed as a solution to a modern problem. Patrons of the theatre may drive their cars directly into the sheltered portico, where an attendant parks them in the adjacent 300-car auto park. If patrons prefer to park their own cars, they may walk from the park to the patio on a covered esplanade, which furnishes adequate protection in inclement weather.

All around the patio are shops, the clientele of which is expected to bring traffic into the inclosure and directly under the influence of the theatre box office.

The auditorium itself is entered through three great arches, which lead into the main lobby, and by a brightly tiled stairway outside the building to the balcony. There is, of course, another stairway inside the theatre for use in rainy weather.

Directly off the main foyer is a general lounge, treated with beamed ceilings and wood paneled walls.

This theatre is constructed so that not only the present large screens may be used, but provision is made for any future extra-large pictures, and television also if it becomes commercially practicable.

The balcony of the Florence represents an unusual bit of construction in that it is entered from the rear and every patron steps down to his seat instead of going up from the cross-aisle.

Plaster ceiling of the auditorium.

The main foyer is done in a style typical of a Spanish entrance hall, with a drinking fountain of imported tile, Spanish furniture, potted plants, imitation wood and Spanish carpet effects. The main lounge employs real wood at wall panels, with ceiling beams finished in a driftwood effect. Walls are surfaced in a parchment material. Wood effects are also used in the foyer area where the main stairway leads to a mezzanine balcony. This wood effect is achieved on concrete beams.

The beams of the auditorium are also decorated to represent old wood. The sidewalls, ceiling and beams are finished off in acoustic plaster. The walls are left very plain, with only here and there a decorative element introduced against the white background, such as a balconied plaque and the organ grilles. Against this plainness is contrasted the elaborate modeling of the facia of the balcony. The acoustic plaster surfacing is simply treated to give a cast-stone effect.

The general character of the exterior has been noted. Opposite the main entrance is a porte-cochere permitting access to inner area of automobiles for both unloading of passengers at theatre entrance and parking. The courtyard is typically Spanish and is covered with flagstones. The yard is landscaped with shrubs and plants, and has as a dominating feature a monumental fountain in its center.

Patrons enter the theatre from their cars, or from the protected sidewalk, either on the main level, or directly to the mezzanine level, reaching the latter by means of an outside staircase. The latter is brilliantly tiled, while alongside it the exterior wall is embellished with Spanish lanterns.

A wall feature in the auditorium.

On the street side of the ground level are stores. Offices are located on the second floor of the street side of the structure, in a portion separate from the main body of the theatre building proper.

It is at once recognizable that the pattern of the Florence does not lend itself to adoption in more than a few sections of the United States. The design of the Florence, however, does represent a modernization of historical forms without arriving at merely the bizarre. The Californian scene—and perhaps spirit as well—grants such a style authenticity.

MODERN SEATING AND CHAIR MAINTENANCE

VIII—An Architectural Point of View

By BEN SCHLANGER

The relationship to proper theatre seating of those who initially create seating conditions, discussed in a final contribution to this symposium

THE PROPER arrangement for seating in a theatre is far more important than most persons concerned with the problem seem to realize. I have recently had the honor of meeting one of our foremost showmen, whom I was trying to impress with the fact that a new theatre project with which he was closely associated, would contain many undesirable seats in certain parts of the theatre. His answer was that those seats would be all right, since he could always manage to fill such seats up. The seats in question may not have been impossible to sit in and view a performance, but then they were far from desirable.

This is an example of the fallacy of gauging the quality of seating with the pulling power of the showman. Many changes in showmanship and policy of entertainment may take place in the life of the theatre structure, and although the seats in the theatre amount to just so much furniture, their position is just as fixed as the masonry walls of the structure itself. The simple mathematics that good showmanship plus poor seats, or even that good seats plus poor showmanship will measure success, is a dangerous policy in any case. The final goal should be perfect showmanship and also perfect viewing conditions. More than just occasionally, entertainment will fall down in quality, and at such times perfect viewing conditions will prove advantageous.

Ideas in seating cannot be tested in the laboratory in order to arrive at the proper solution. Neither can one expect to receive public opinion upon such matters. The theatre patron may feel discomfort for many reasons and yet make no complaint of being uncomfortable. But the patron will, on the other hand, be quick to appreciate improved viewing conditions, and will frequent the theatre that offers them.

The problem of seating must be correctly solved before the lighting, ventilating, acoustic and decorative requirements are determined in theatre planning. The improper treatment of the seating problem leads to faulty conditions in the other requirements of theatre design. A survey of many existing theatres would show that a better seating arrangement would also have resulted in considerable improvement of the various other factors. Heretofore, the problem seems to have been limited to consideration of back to back chair spacing, aisle arrangement and chair construction. Having limited the design to the consideration of these conditions, has created a situation in which the broader aspects of efficient seating design have been ignored. These aspects should include an analysis of:

Size of screen and location of seats therefrom.

Areas most valuable for seats.

Floor slopes in relation to chair design.

OCULAR COMFORT

THE GENERALLY accepted practice of overlooking the matter of eye-strain, since the patron does not openly complain, is not a wise one. The patron does react to eye-strain, of which, however, he is hardly conscious. As a matter of fact, the ordeal of adjusting the eye to accommodate vision cannot be tolerated for more than a few seconds by the spectator. An adjustment takes place in the position of the whole body to relieve eye-strain in the front orchestra seats by slumping down in the seat, or in balcony seats, by bending forward. And so the factor of eye-strain is more directly related to the placing and construction of seats than is generally assumed.

BODILY COMFORT

Since eye-strain transfers itself to uncomfortable posture, the problem of complete comfort is one of seating. The oft repeated mistake of assuming that a well upholstered seat and back of a theatre chair answers all the needs of comfort, has, if anything, created the erroneous impression that the seating problem is a solved one. Actually, there is great deal of improvement in seating yet to be looked for. The theatre architect is now the one who must improve seating, since the chair manufacturer has reached the limit of improvement in chair design for present conditions.

Serious analysis of the function of the seat and the back of the theatre chair will show that a great number of the chair backs on balcony levels might just as well not exist, because the body receives no support whatsoever from them; and also that a great number of chair backs of orchestra seats are impediments to the assumption of the correct posture for ocular comfort. The old Greek theatres had seats without any back rest but at least they did not fool themselves.

The correct angle of the back of the chair in relation to a vertical line of gravity is of prime importance. This correct angle should actually be different in each row of chairs. This difference in angles should not require any special adjustments in the construction of the chair. The problem of the chair-seat itself and the floor that supports the chair is also highly important, but can only be solved after the correct angle of the back of the chair is established.

This is not the process on which the seating arrangements is based at the present time. However, scientific seating will not be achieved until this consideration is recognized. The enlarged screen will probably be the factor that will soon force this problem to the attention of all those concerned.

SIZE OF SCREEN AND LOCATION OF SEATS

THE DISTANCE from the first row of seats to the screen and the distance from the last row of seats to the screen is entirely fixed by the size of the screen. The tendency to place seats too close to, or too far away from, the screen in order to increase the seating capacity, is detrimental. The patron who is subjected to ocular and bodily discomfort in seats at improper distances from the screen is far from a satisfied patron. It is a fallacy to increase the seating capacity in this way with worthless seats. If the exhibitor is just trying to seat a patron temporarily it would be far better to provide seats in a comfortable lounge room or space, until a good seat in the auditorium is available.

AREAS MOST VALUABLE FOR SEATING

Given a specific volume of cubic feet of enclosed area, with a screen at one end, certain portions of this area obviously must be more valuable for chair positions than other parts. Actually, however, these valuable areas are usually the unused areas. This is not so much so in the horizontal plane as it is in the vertical. That is, the levels which are nearest the focal point of important action on the screen are usually

THE DENVER ORPHEUM: A MODERN DESIGN

A new RKO combination theatre seating 2,500 and definitely following in a theatrical interpretation the spirit of contemporary patterns

View of the auditorium at the left forward wall, emphasizing the element of movement which characterizes the general design, ceiling and walls being drawn into one basic pattern representative of the entire theatre.

STRIKING OUT along vivid and original lines, the new RKO Orpheum theatre in Denver represents an adoption of modern architectural forms rather more whole-hearted than usual in the general commercial theatre field. It is one of the group opened by RKO during the last several months. The seating capacity is 2,596.

The erecting and owning interests are the Denver Orpheum Company. The building contains commercial space as well as the theatre. Over-all dimensions of the building are 125 x 175 feet. It is of steel construction, with terra cotta facing. Construction was under a general contract.

The Orpheum is located in the main business section of the Colorado metropolis, which has a population of 288,000. The architects were C. W. and George L. Rapp of Chicago and New York.

The auditorium is of the two-floor type, with 1,574 seats on the main level, 298 in loge sections, and 734 in the balcony proper. The main floor has 36 rows, while the second level has a total of 22 rows. All chairs are of special design, following RKO's recently adopted standards, with full-upholstering. The chairs are by the American Seating Company.

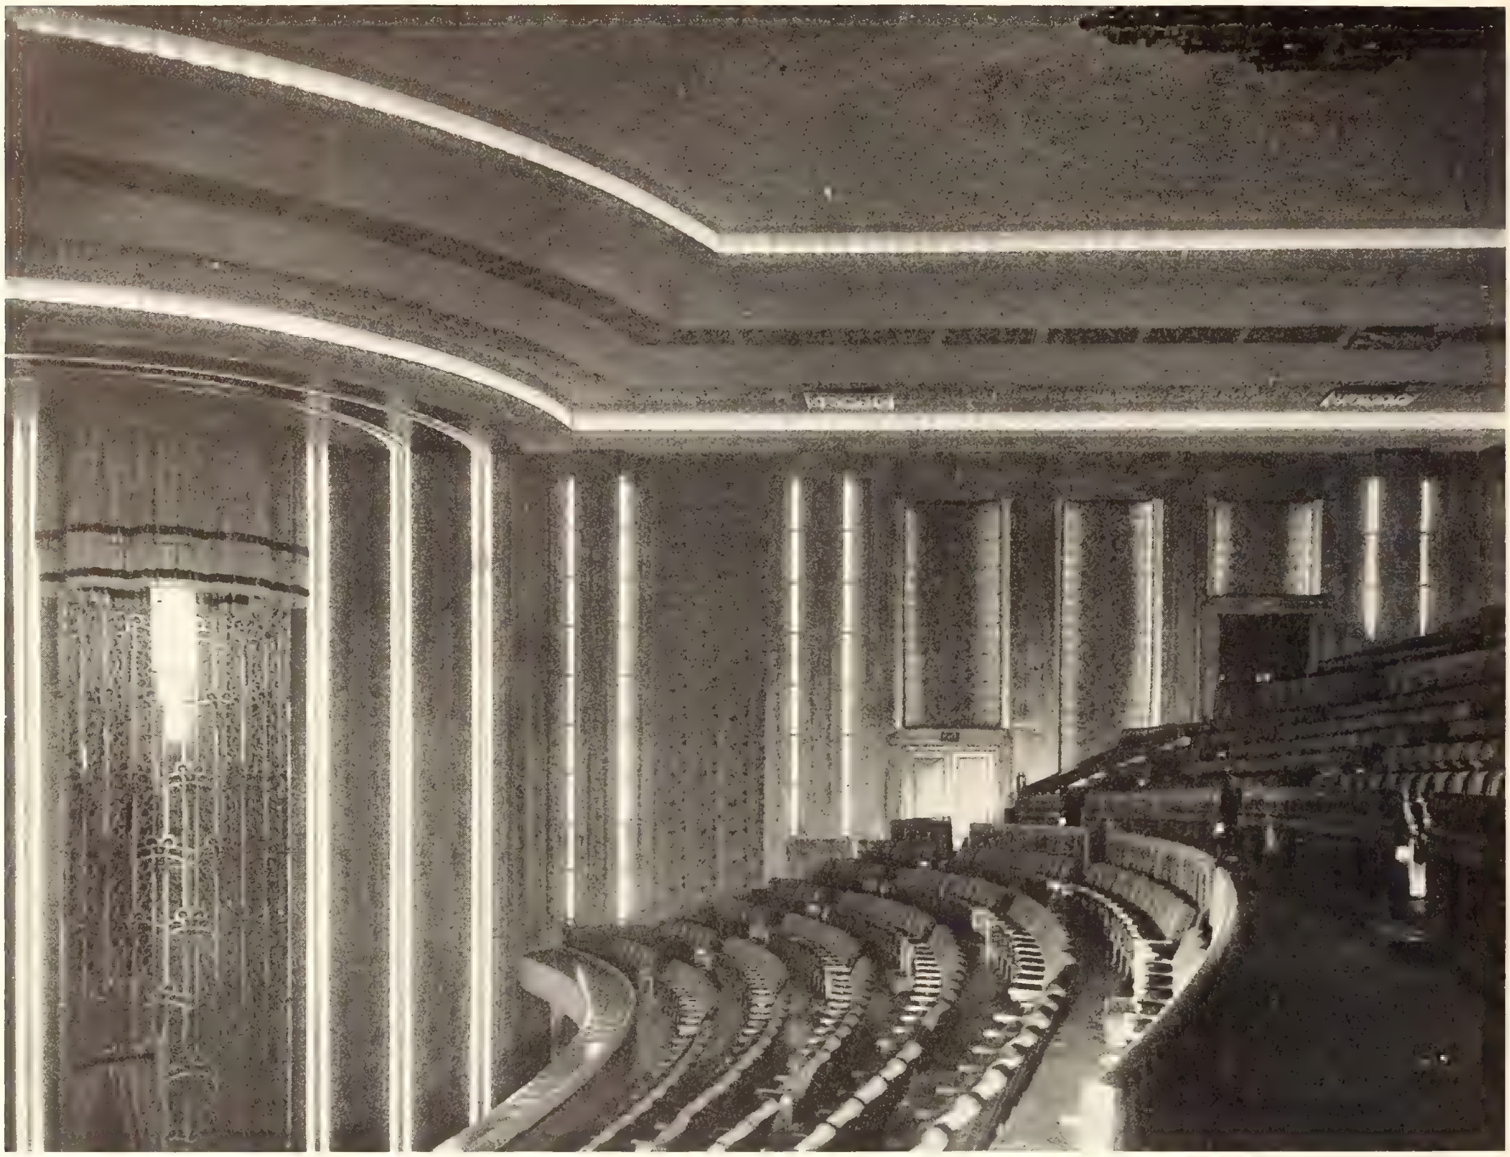
The projection room, which is of the usual location, measures 17 x 39½ feet. The motor-generator and all other auxiliary rooms adjoin the projection room. The latter is painted a light gray. Equipment includes three Simplex projectors, two spots, and one Brenkert effect machine. The sound system is RCA Photophone.

The Orpheum has a proscenium opening measuring 60x34 feet. The maximum screen size is 29x22 feet. Normal screen distance from the first row of seats is 25 feet. The angle of projection is approximately 20°.

Air conditioning is provided through a plenum system, with Carrier cooling and centrifugal ventilation. Air circulated through this main system may be either heated or cooled before introduction into the auditorium. The heating plant uses coal.

Acoustic conditions were essentially treated in the forms and materials employed in the auditorium design. Besides the carpets and seats, further absorptive elements were provided in fabric surfacings having decorative value along the walls. The projection room ceiling and facing is surfaced with acoustic plaster.

The auditorium is provided with three-color lighting on a dimmer control system capable of effecting changing blends of color by means of bands of lamps set in coves.



Treatment of the auditorium toward the rear, as seen from the balcony.

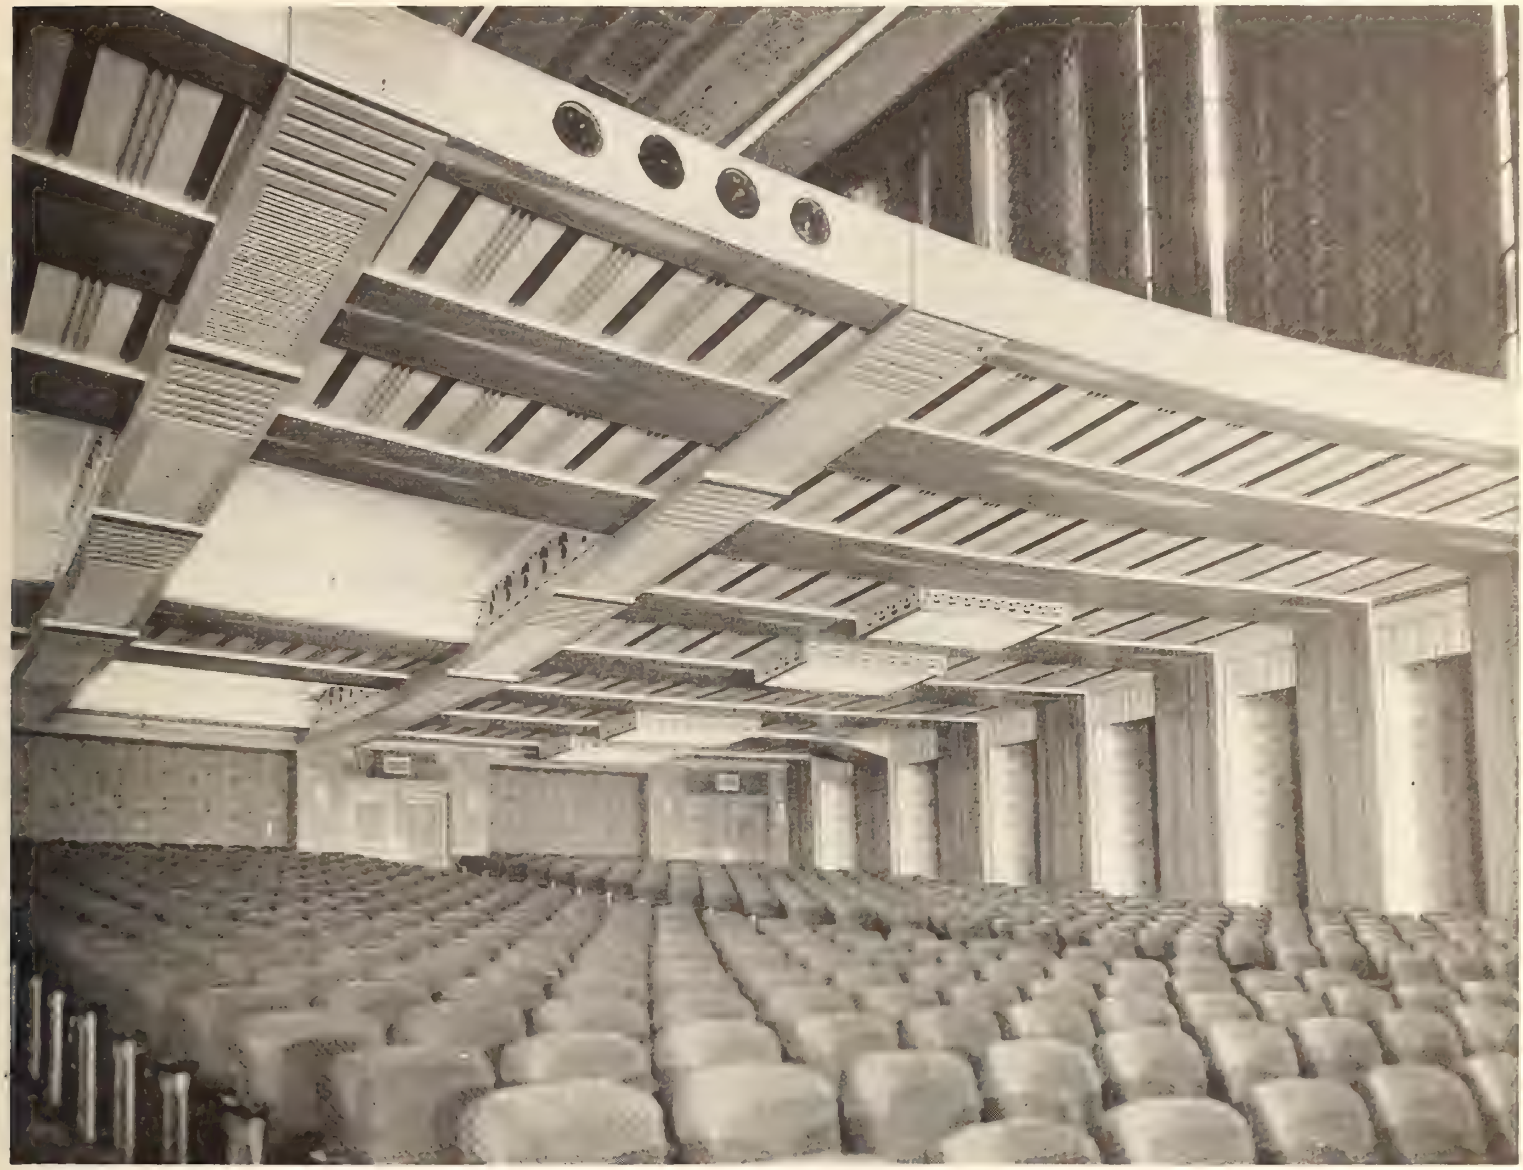
A DEFINITE attempt has been made in the decorative style to give the effect of warmth and comfort as one enters. For that reason, both the grand lobby and the auditorium were done in walnut. The carpeting used in both the lobby and the auditorium is of walnut leaves.

The architecture of the interior of the theatre is in the modern manner. An attempt has been made in the lounge rooms and cosmetic rooms to give a home-like appearance rather than to spread gold and crystal over everything.

In the auditorium, the form of the ceiling emanates from and repeats the plan of the theatre itself. Between many fin-like levels of the ceiling are placed lights, and these cast over the entire auditorium a soft glow. Noteworthy is the omission of the proscenium arch frame. The theatre comes abruptly to an end, and there is the stage.



The auditorium at the rear of the main level, showing the fin treatment at the soffit of the balcony.

The soft colors of the carpet are repeated in the fabric on the walls. These fabrics, plus the wood decoration, help the acoustics as well as give a warm-looking appearance to the auditorium.

The organ grilles is the full height of the auditorium, and incorporated in them at the top are immense lighting fixtures. Surrounding the grilles on the side walls are channeled lights, which form an integral part of the side wall decoration.

The Orpheum might be called the "silver theatre," because white metal is used lavishly throughout the interior, as well as on the doors of the lobby. This is in recognition of the silver mining industry of the state.

Colorado marble is likewise extensively used. It forms the walls of the box-office lobby and lends richness to the interior, blending with the silver railings of the staircase leading to the balcony from the grand lobby, and the prevailing color scheme of walnut, henna, dull tan is bathed in a diffused glow from concealed lighting fixtures. Reds and golds in great profusion were omitted. Ceilings of the lobbies and of the auditorium are of white metal, appearing slightly golden in a soft light.

The grand lobby extends the entire width of the theatre, providing ample room for patrons entering or leaving the theatre auditorium, which is parallel to Welton Street, with the stage facing Sixteenth Street. (The stage of the old Orpheum, erected on the same site as the new, faced in the opposite direction from the other.

Large mirrors, some built into the walls, are on either side of the grand lobby and also on the wall of the mezzanine. Henna-hued carpets cover the floors of the lobby, the mezzanine and the theatre aisles. Heavy draperies in the lobby are of the same color.

In the basement is the main lounge, while still others are on the mezzanine. Cosmetic rooms are located off the basement lounge and on the mezzanine level.

All lighting fixtures are concealed, casting a glow from coves along the walls. The auditorium ceiling, of buff color, is devoid of ornamentation except for three air distributors in the center.

The proscenium arch is of severe, modernistic design and its width and height are impressive, surmounting the largest stage in Denver. The stage is 34 feet deep from footlights to back wall, 64 feet wide and 84 feet to the uppermost gratings.

Special H-W seats were designed, built, and installed in the Thalia, (Broadway at 95th) New York City. This house, designed by Ben Schlanger and Raymond Irrera, incorporates the revolutionary seating idea of Mr. Schlanger's . . . namely the reverse slope.

The reverse slope (which gives greater seating capacity in less cubic content) is a new and unusual idea. It requires new ideas in seating, sight lines, and chair construction. Working in close cooperation with the architects and creators of the reverse slope idea, Heywood-Wakefield produced special seating which perfectly and admirably fitted the needs of the Thalia.

No matter how large or how small your seating or reseating problems may be, it will prove well worth your while to consult the nearest Heywood-Wakefield theatre sales office. You'll get all of the benefit of a progressive, experienced organization which built hundreds of thousands of seats for Publix, Roxy, Schine, and a host of other leading showmen.

LATE RULINGS IN THEATRE CASES

By LEO T. PARKER

Recent litigations involving theatres selected and analyzed for the guidance of theatre owner and manager

MANY COURTS have held that a contract is void and unenforceable if it contains a clause which has been declared invalid by a higher court, particularly if such clause is a vital part of the contract. The latest higher court case involving this point of the law is Fox Film Corporation v. Tri-State Theatres (6 P. [2d] 135).

The facts of this case are that a theatre owner entered into a standard form contract with a film distributing company by the terms of which the theatre owner agreed to accept and exhibit a specified number of films over a stipulated period of time. Soon afterward in another litigation, involving the standard form contract signed by another theatre owner, the Supreme Court of the United States held a clause known as "Section 19" in the contract to be invalid. The first mentioned theatre owner refused to fulfill the contract, or accept and exhibit the pictures contracted for. Therefore, the film company filed suit against the theatre owner to recover damages.

Section 19, provides that in the event of disagreement between the film company and the theatre owner such controversy should be submitted to a board of arbitrators. This section of the contract, also, provides that if the theatre owner failed or refused to consent to submit to arbitration any claim or controversy arising under this or any other standard exhibition contract the film company may demand payment by the theatre owner of an additional sum not exceeding $500, and in the event the theatre owner refused to pay this additional sum the film company had the privilege of canceling the contract within seven days.

During the trial the counsel for the theatre owner contended that the latter was not liable on the grounds that the whole contract was made void by the decision rendered by the Supreme Court, which held "Section 19" invalid.

It is interesting to observe that the higher court held that Section 19, in the contract invalidated the remaining portion of the contract, which relieved the theatre owner from liability for failure to accept and exhibit the films. This court stated the following important law:

"Had the pictures involved in this case been accepted and used by the exhibitor, perhaps then an obligation would have arisen to pay. . . . . We think the contract, at least as alleged, is a part of the illegal combination. . . . . In conclusion, as we understand the law, a contract which is within the prohibition of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act in whole or in part is not only illegal but its execution is unlawful. . . . . A careful examination of the opinion by the Supreme Court convinces us that this general contract, and the agreement and combination they evince, was adjudged to be in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act and consequently illegal in toto."

WRITTEN CONTRACT SUBSTITUTED BY ORAL AGREEMENT

IT IS WELL established law that a valid written contract cannot ordinarily be varied or modified by oral agreements. However, it is well settled that a written contract may be cancelled by oral agreement. Also, an oral agreement is valid by the terms of which the contracting parties agreed to enter into a written contract regarding their obligations, although one of the parties later refuses to sign the written contract.

For instance, in Taylor v. Stanley Company of America, (158 Atl. 157) it was shown that a man named Taylor entered into a written contract with a theatre owner by the terms of which the latter employed Taylor to act as general manager of all his vaudeville and moving picture theatres at a salary of $22,500 a year for a period of ten years. Later the theatre owner leased his theatre to a company under a contract by which it was agreed that the company should assume obligations to continue to pay Taylor the salary specified in the original agreement. It was orally agreed between Taylor and the purchasing company that a written contract would be signed by which the employment of Taylor should continue. However, this written contract was not made and subsequently litigation developed between Taylor and the purchasing company.

During the trial it was contended that the oral contract was not valid and binding because the written contract agreed upon had not been signed. However, although the lower court held Taylor not entitled to a judgment, the higher court reversed this verdict, and stated the following important law:

"If it appears that the minds of the parties have met, that a proposition for a contract has been made by one party and accepted by the other, that the terms of this contract are in all respects definitely understood and agreed on, and that a part of the mutual understanding is that a written contract embodying these terms shall be drawn and executed by the respective parties, this is an obligatory agreement, which dates from the making of the oral agreement and not from the date of the subsequent writing."

STATE STATUTE STRICTLY CONSTRUED

THE COURTS have consistently held that all laws, such as state statutes and city ordinances, which require payment of license fees for the conduction or exhibition of theatre performances, must be strictly construed. The latest higher court case involving this point of the law is McHugh v. Mulrooney (179 N. E. 753).

The facts of this case are that a state Legislature enacted a law, as follows:

"A person who, within this state, engages in, instigates, aids, encourages, or does any act to further a contention, or fight, without weapons, between two or more persons, or a fight commonly called a ring or prize-fight . . . . at which an admission fee is charged or received, either direcly or indirectly, is guilty of a misdemeanor."

The owner of a place of amusement engaged certain amateur boxers for an exhibit and failed to pay a license fee. Suit was filed against the owner of the amusement place on the contention that he was liable to conviction because he had failed to comply with the above mentioned law. The counsel for the latter contended that the above mentioned law should not be interpreted to include boxing or sparring matches of strictly amateur boxers, and the higher court upheld this contention. In holding the owner of the amusement place not guilty of violating the law, the court said:

"If the Legislature intends to make amateur exhibitions, to which an admission fee is charged, subject to the control and regulation of the state commission and to all the provisions of the act, it must do so in clearer language than has been used in the present law."

VALIDITY OF SUNDAY CLOSING LAW

PRINCIPLES OF ILLUMINATION IN MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

By W. B. RAYTON

The theory underlying the functioning of the lens system explained in an effort to give the projectionist a more comprehensive understanding of the problems encountered in projection illumination

[The following article is the outgrowth of a discussion between F. H. Richardson and the author, who is associated with the well known optical firm of Bausch & Lomb, and who is one of the leading figures in the science of optics. The article was prepared for BETTER THEATRES in response to Mr. Richardson's suggestion that Dr. Rayton's conception of the principles of motion picture illumination be thus described for the benefit of the practical projectionist.]

EVERY PROJECTIONIST is interested in getting the brightest possible screen picture obtainable with his equipment. Most projectionists are curious as to why their particular equipment cannot be forced to give a degree of illumination beyond a certain maximum value, and as to why there should be limits beyond which the designers of equipment seem unable to go.

To meet the first of these ambitions it is necessary to understand that dusty and greasy optical surfaces absorb light, and that first of all, mirror, condenser and projection lens surfaces should be kept scrupulously clean. It is also necessary either to have acquired through experience a thorough knowledge of how to adjust the relations between the arc, the mirror or condenser, and the projection lens, so that maximum illumination is obtained, or else to so thoroughly comprehend the fundamental principles of illumination that the adjustment could be carried out from these theoretical considerations without the necessity for the possession of previous experience.

He who has had the practical experience and who also has the thorough comprehension of the theory is in an enviable state, indeed, for he is not embarrassed when confronted by new problems merely because they have not been met in his previous experience, nor is he lacking in the confidence that practical experience contributes to him who is accustomed to solve his problems by the application of mathematical and physical laws.

The fundamental factors governing the brightness of a motion picture image are neither numerous nor difficult to remember. To employ them in design in such a way as to make accurate predictions as to how bright a picture can be produced with a given equipment, is extremely difficult for some of the factors are very complex. To use them in getting the best out of one's equipment is, on the other hand, a relatively simple matter. We all know that to get maximum speed out of our automobile the timing of the spark must be advanced to just the right point, the compression in the cylinders must be good, and the air pressure in the tires must be up to a certain level, and we can see that these conditions are met without being an automotive engineer. It is a different problem, however, to compute at just what instant in the stroke the spark should occur, just what bore and stroke and compression the engine should have, and the size and pressure of the tires required to produce a car that will run precisely at a predetermined maximum speed. We do know enough about it, however, to know that on these and other similar factors the maximum speed of a car depends. In the same way it is possible and no more difficult to understand the factors on which the illumination of the screen image is ultimately dependent.

The first of these is the size of the picture. There is only a certain amount of light leaving the projection lens. If we spread this over 75 square feet of screen, for example, twice as much light will be available for each square foot as would be available if the picture covered 150 square feet. Since the area of the picture is the product of the width and the height, doubling the width is equivalent to multiplying area by four, so that if we double the width, the amount of light available for each square foot of picture drops to one-fourth of its former value.

Figure 1.—Small area, A, of an assumed self-luminous screen gives off light in all directions. The amount of light picked up by lens B depends on the diameter of the lens and the brightness of A. The amount of light concentrated in the image A' depends on the amount of light received by the lens and the light losses in the lens.

Figure 2.—Diagram of a complete projection system, representing screen, projection lens, film aperture, condenser, and light source (arc). With the arc crater at B, the full aperture of the projection lens is used as indicated by the full lines. With arc at A or at C, only a part of the aperture of the projection lens is used as indicated by the broken lines.

the free aperture of the projection lens. In studying the effect of lens aperture on illumination it is very helpful to make use of the principle of the reversibility of a light path. In any optical system object and image are interchangeable, so that in a projector, if the film is focused on the screen, the screen is just as accurately focused on the film. This can easily be tested by holding a lamp at the screen and observing that an image of it will be formed on a piece of film in the projector aperture.

Suppose, therefore, we assume the screen to be self-luminous, and think about the performance of the optical system in a direction opposite to our usual custom. From each point of the screen, light is emitted in all directions, as indicated in Figure 1. The amount of light a projection lens at B can pick up depends on its diameter. The brightness of the image A' of the area A, would depend on the amount of light the lens can pick up and concentrate in the image, and this is strictly limited by the diameter of the lens. Nothing we can do to the lens can exceed this limit, but if for any reason we do not use all of the lens, we fall short of the limit. Such a case would arise if we put a stop in front of the lens with an aperture smaller than the aperture of the lens, and as we shall see presently, it can also occur if the combination of illuminant (arc or incandescent lamp) and light collecting element (condenser or mirror) are not properly designed and adjusted.

Referring again to Figure 1, there is one other factor governing the amount of light collected by lens B. That is the brightness of A or, in other words, the amount of light given off by A. The brighter A is, the more light is contained within the cone intercepted by B. Assuming no losses of light in the lens, the brightnes of the image A' would depend only on the light collected by the lens, but unfortunately light is lost by reflection at each surface of the lens and is also absorbed by the glass. The amount of light actually concentrated in the image A' is therefore equal to the light collected by the lens less the light lost in transmission through the lens.

We have now introduced in elementary form all the essential factors controlling the illumination of the screen picture; viz., (1) size of picture, (2) aperture of optical system, (3) brightness of light source, and (4) losses in the system. You may not recognize them fully from the preceding paragraph, but we will try now to get a little closer to actual projection systems.

Of the four factors governing the illumination of the screen image we have said all we shall say about size of picture, the first factor, and concerning the fourth, losses in the system, there is little that can be said with profit. They are unavoidable, but clean optical elements reduce these losses to a minimum. The two factors remaining are (2) the aperture of the optical system, and (3) the brightness of the light source. Of these, the effect of the latter is not difficult to comprehend since it is parallel to so many experiences of daily life. For example, the amount of light falling on a surface exposed to the light of the sun would be 10,000 times as much as would fall on the surface when exposed to a candle flame at a distance of one foot. At a distance of a foot a candle flame appears much larger than the sun, hence the difference is due to the difference in brightness between the sun and the candle.

It is with respect to (2) that practically all of the confusion occurs in writing, talking and thinking about this subject.

Let us continue our investigation, still imagining the light to proceed from the screen to the projector. In Figure 2, we have added a condenser system to the elements shown in Figure 1. In Figure 2, the full lines outline a beam of light imagined proceeding from the screen to the lens. It is brought to a focus at or near the center of the projector aperture, and Delicate, high overtones that give realism to soprano singing and violin playing come through Syncrofilm undistorted. Given only a moderate degree of acoustical efficiency in a theatre, Syncrofilm will charm the audience with pure, natural highs as well as full, true lows.

SYNCROFILM

More light is the secret of Syncrofilm's extraordinary performance. Four times as much light as usual is thrown through the sound track by Syncrofilm. Every slight shading of either line or density recording is cast distinctly on the photo-electric cell. Only Syncrofilm does this.

That perfect reproduction is what brings patrons back. They get real enjoyment from voices that express the emotions the actors are registering. They see musicians and hear real music. When a toast is drunk they hear glasses clinking, not anvils being pounded.

from that point diverges until its falls on the condenser. The converging effect of the condenser brings the beam to a focus again at B. By the principle of reversibility stated above, a light source at B would therefore be imaged by the condenser near the center of the film, and again by the projection lens at the screen. And it is to be noted that a very small source of light at B suffices to fill the whole aperture of the projection lens with light. Let us assume, however, that the light source is as large as the short vertical line at B and that it be moved forward towards the condenser to a position A. At this position of the source the full aperture of the lens cannot be filled with light but only so much as is indicated by the broken lines. The same will be true if the light source is moved back to the position C. In order that the full aperture of the lens be filled with light with a light source at A or C, it is necessary that it be as large as the cross-section of the full beam of light at those places.

IT MAY BE objected that the light given off by a light source at A is not confined within the space between the broken lines, and it may appear that light leaving the source outside the broken lines would find its way to the object point on the film and thence to the lens to fill up the region between the full and broken lines. It is true that light is given off in all directions by a light source at A, but it is nevertheless impossible to make use of it. Here is where the reversibility principle is particularly helpful. If the ray of light which proceeds from the edge of the objective to the center of the film aperture and thence to the condenser does not strike the light source after passing through the condenser, no ray can be found which, arising in that light source and passing through the condenser, will follow that precise path, which takes it through the center of the film aperture and the edge of the lens. This is an important point, because unless you are completely satisfied that it is true, not because someone says it is, but because your own reason tells you it must be true, you will not acquire by reading this article any comprehension of the theory of illumination sufficiently thorough to be of much value. Conviction as to the truthfulness of the above statement involves only belief, (1) that light travels only in straight lines in unobstructed space, such as that between the lens and the condenser, easy to believe because confirmed by so many evidences in daily life; and (2) that when a ray of light such as one of the full lines in Figure 2, strikes any ordinary optical element—lens, mirror or prism—there is only one possible path that it can take through that element and beyond it. The second of these is not so readily confirmed through observations in every day life, but can be proved by simple experiments.

Figure 2 deals only with the question of illuminating the center of the picture. Illumination of the margin of the field is another matter. It will be taken up presently, but before leaving this point one or two important conclusions should be emphasized. (1) A shift of the light source back and forth along the optical axis will reduce illumination at the center of the picture just as soon as it has been moved to a point where it is smaller than the diameter of the beam of light required to fill the aperture of the projection lens. (2) A condenser (or mirror) whose diameter is too small, or an arc too close or too far from the condenser, has the effect of reducing the effective aperture of the objective just as certainly as a physical stop put in front of the lens. (3) If a projection system meets the conditions of Figure 2, increase in illumination at the center of the picture can not be secured except by (a) increasing the brightness of the source, or (b) using a projection lens of large aperture and a new illuminating system competent to fill the aperture of the new objective.

SO MUCH for the center of the picture. Turning to Figure 4, it will be found that, in addition to the detail shown in Figure 2, a beam of light has been added coming from a point at the margin of the screen. If we will have maximum illumination at the margin of the screen, the full aperture of the projection lens must be utilized here as well as for the center of the picture. To satisfy this condition it is necessary, as before, that the condenser or mirror, and the light source, be large enough to intercept the entire cone of light. Assuming for the moment that there will be no trouble encountered in meeting these conditions, it should be pointed out that it is impossible to get as much light at the edge of the picture as at the center, if the lens is fully utilized for the center of the picture. This is due to the fact that the area of the lens actually appears smaller when viewed from the edge of the picture than from the center. To study this effect, hold a projection lens at arm's length and rotate it about a vertical axis while you look at the aperture of the front lens. The vertical diameter remains unchanged, but the horizontal diameter constantly decreases as you rotate it.

The assumption of a moment ago, however, is not justified, for with the light sources available it is impossible to accomplish the ideal conditions shown in Figures 4 and 5, for it is impossible to make condensers, and impractical to make reflectors, large enough. The real state of affairs is about as shown in Figure 6, wherein is represented not the average, but the best conditions attainable at the present time with a condenser. The condenser is large enough so that with an appropriate adjustment of the position of the arc the projection lens would be fully utilized for the center of the picture, but this setting would involve a loss of light at the margin of the picture, due to the fact that the light source is not large enough. The arc is, therefore, usually advanced a little towards the condenser in the interest of more even illumination.

This advance is shown in the figure to have been carried to the point where the crater of the arc is not quite large enough to permit the aperture of the projection lens to be filled with light in imaging the center of the field, but it is very nearly filled with an arc in the adjustment shown. The condenser is not large enough, however, to transmit the complete oblique cone of light, therefore the illumination on the screen at best can not be even over the whole picture. Some reduction of brightness at the margin is tolerable, however, and even with an empty film aperture, very considerable decreases in illumination from center to edge will be imperceptible to the eye if the transition is not abrupt.

When we say it is impossible to make condensers large enough, the reasons will be perfectly obvious to lens designers, but they may not be so obvious to others. The effect of the condenser is derived from the curved surfaces—the more strongly curved the surfaces are, the more powerful the condenser. The conditions to be met by the designer determine the curvatures of the surfaces, and the curvatures of the surfaces determine the maximum diameter, as anyone can prove by a few minutes experimentation with a draughtsman's compass.

WE HAVE now thought our way through the basic theory of illumination of a motion picture image. The two most important factors are the aperture of the projection lens, and the brightness of the light source. The next most important are the size of the condenser or mirror, and the size of the light source. Maximum illumination at the center of the field can be easily secured. Illumination at the margin equal to that at the center is practically impossible to produce. The method of looking at the problem employed above is by no means the only method available, but it is the writer's belief that it offers by far the easiest route to follow to a satisfactory comprehension of what goes on in a projection system.

This method of viewing the subject enables one who comprehends it thoroughly to dispose very readily of several troublesome questions without falling into the errors so frequently encountered. One such is the question of the light spilled on the cooling plate. There is an almost universal belief that any light falling on cooling plate outside the area of the film aperture represents a loss of such a nature that a better designed condenser or mirror could convert it into useful light. This is based on the incorrect idea that all light that can be got through the aperture must necessarily contribute to the brightness of the picture on the screen. As a matter of fact, any light getting through the projector aperture is useless unless its direction is such that it also can get through the projection lens. If the illuminating device is theoretically perfect there will be still light spilled around the film aperture, whether much or little (depending on size of source) and whether it is a reflector or a condenser type lamp, but whether it be much or little, nothing can be done to make it useful. Inasmuch as we are assuming a theoretically perfect illuminating system, the latter must be delivering to the objective every possible ray of light that the latter can combine into an image on the screen. If any of the spilled light is to be manipulated in any way so as to reach the screen, its path (at least after getting through the film gate) must coincide absolutely with the path of some of the rays of light already there. If this coincidence occurs for part of a path, however, it must occur for the whole path from light source to screen, therefore the plan of making use of the spilled light reduces to an absurdity.

FOR A SECOND problem, consider the angle of "pick-up" of the condenser or mirror. Referring to Figure 7, the angle bounded by the broken lines joining the light source to the edge of the condenser is the pick-up angle. This beam of light is converged by the condenser to the center of the film aperture and from that point diverges towards the projection lens. It is easy to see that the angle of the cone of light is too large for the projection lens. The greatest pick-up angle the projection lens can transmit is that contained between the full lines joining the condenser and the light source. As a matter of fact, you will not find such a case in practice as is depicted in Figure 7. That, however, does not eliminate the desirability of understanding the relation between pick-up angle and illumination, and that increasing this angle will not increase illumination after it reaches a value determined by the aperture of the projection lens.

One factor about which we have said but little up to this point is the size of the light source. Turning again to Figures 4 or 5, it is evident that if the light source were smaller, the beam of light coming from a point at the margin of the field could not strike the arc. Reversing the direction of the light and considering an actual projection system, no light from the arc under these conditions could reach the edge of the picture. If, on the other hand, the light source were larger, it could accomplish no useful purpose. It would consume more current without benefit.

If you can apply the principles outlined above so as to demonstrate the truth of the last statement, you have acquired a workable comprehension of the theory of motion picture illumination.

ANSWERING A PARADOX IN SCREEN ILLUMINATION

THERE IS one question which has been puzzling for many years. It has been explained many times by capable men, but never, so far as I know, with the comprehensiveness and clarity that seemed to me possible. The question is this:

Knowing the inverse square action as pertains to light action—that intensity of illumination decreases inversely with the square of the distance—many are unable to understand why the screen should look just as bright at 50 feet, for example, as it did at 100 feet. Recently this question was again brought into prominence by screen illumination measurements I have been assisting in making. Finally I wrote the Eastman Kodak Company, asking if the matter could not somehow be set forth in understandable form.

Arrangement for measuring screen illumination

In due time a letter was received from Dr. L. A. Jones of the physics research department, which makes the matter quite clear and understandable. (Just why no one in all these years has been able to set it forth as understandably, I do not know.)

Mr. Jones went to considerable trouble. He even made a drawing, which I show you herewith. The explanation will take up a lot of space, but it is well worth it. I shall quote Mr. Jones' letter almost in full.

"In the attached sketch I have shown the arrangement which I consider the most probable one used in making these measurements—that is, with the test surface of your illuminometer facing the screen. In the first row of figures are your observed values. In the second row are the computed values, based on the inverse square law, assuming an illumination of 0.10 foot-candles at a distance of 60 feet. Of course, the observed and computed values do not agree. In fact, we would not expect them to agree. If they did, there would certainly be something wrong. The inverse square law holds only to the extent that the distance from the point at which the illumination is measured, is great as compared to the maximum dimensions of the effective light source. In this particular case, the effective light source is the motion picture screen, and while you do not state specifically how large the particular screen was, it seems that a reasonable assumption would be 20 feet wide by 15 feet high, the diagonal of which is 26 feet, and this is the maximum lateral extension of the effective light source.

"In order that the inverse square law may hold to within less than 1% error, the minimum distance at which measurements are made must be at least ten times as great as the maximum extension of the light source in a direction perpendicular to the axis of the measurement. In other words, you could not expect the inverse square law to hold, within less than 1% error, for distances less than 260 feet. It is possible to compute, for any point in space, the illumination resulting from an extended source. The equation is somewhat complicated, and since you state specifically that you do not want a technical treatment of the subject, I will not bore you with this formula. The measurements, however, as actually made by you are not inconsistent with what we would expect under such conditions.

"While you do not state specifically in your letter, I am rather inclined to think your bewilderment is due to the fact that you obtain very widely different values of illumination as measured at various points from the screen, while remembering at the same time the statement which is frequently made, and which is perfectly true—that the brightness of a reflecting or emitting surface is independent of the distance at which this surface is viewed by the human eye. As I say, this last statement is perfectly true. It relates to the brightness of the retinal image, and not to the illumination of a surface at various distances from a reflecting or emitting surface.

"In the lower part of the figure I have tried to illustrate the condition which exists when an effective source, such as an illuminated motion picture screen, is observed at two different distances. The diameter of the pupil of the observer's eye is designated as d, which is the same for the two distances. As a matter of fact, there may be a very slight change in the diameter of the pupil of the observer's eye, depending upon conditions in the outer regions of the visual field. It is possible that changes in the makeup of the total visual field which occur when the observer moves back from 30 to 60 feet, may change the diameter of the pupil slightly. However, under most conditions such change does not occur, and it is quite safe to assume that the diameter of the pupil at the two distances indicated will be the same.

"Now the radiation or light which goes to form the image of the screen on the retina must necessarily enter through the pupil of the eye. In order to compute the brightness of the image, we must know how much radiation or light enters the eye and we must also know over what area of the retina this total of radiation is distributed.

"Considering any small surface element of the screen, and assuming that within the angle considered it is either radiating or reflecting diffusely, we may apply the inverse square law in computing the amount of light entering the pupil from this surface element and converging to form the image of this surface element on the retina of the eye. If we take the case as illustrated in the sketch (b), where the eye is first 30 feet, and then 60 feet from the screen, it is evident that the amount of radiation entering the pupil of the eye at 30 feet will be four times as great as that entering a pupil of the same diameter when at a distance of 60 feet. Mathematically stated:

"The brightness of the image on the retina of the eye depends not upon thee radiation (light) which enters the pupil, but upon the radiation per unit area of the image on the retina. Therefore, in computing the brightness of this image we must take into consideration not only the total amount of light entering the pupil, but also the size of the image formed. The focal length of the lens of the eye is approximately 25 mm., hence at 30 feet, which expressed in inches is 360, the linear magnification, M, will be 1/360. Likewise at 60 feet, the linear magnification, M, will be 1/720. The area magnification in which tained by squaring the linear magnification. Hence the image area on the retina of the eye at 30 feet will be four times as great as the image area on the retina of the eye at 60 feet.

"We have seen above, however, that the amount of light entering the pupil from any surface element at 60 feet is ¼ as great as that entering the eye at 30 feet. Computing, then, the light per unit area of image on the retina, we find it is the same at 30 feet as at 60 feet, hence the brightness of the retinal image is independent of the distance. This of course is well known and has been verified experimentally beyond any doubt whatever.

"We find, therefore, that the brightness of any self luminous or reflecting surface, as viewed by the eye, is independent of the distance. The illumination falling on a plane at various distances from a radiating or reflecting surface is, however, dependent upon the distance, and for distances greater than ten times the maximum lateral extension of the surface, or effective source, the inverse square law is not valid, and the formula for computing the illumination under such conditions becomes quite complicated.

"I hope this discussion will make the matter plain to you. I realize that the whole subject is a little confusing, and I find it very difficult to express it in language any simpler than I have used. One very important thing should always be kept in mind; namely, that care should be taken in discriminating between the brightness of a surface as viewed by an observer, and the illumination at any point in space resulting from light radiated by, or reflected from, an extended surface."

I want to compliment Doctor Jones upon the fact that he has succeeded admirably in putting this highly technical matter into language which, with a little study, should be very clear to even the layman. The explanation to my question is in the paragraph following the mathematical statement, "$(60/30)^2=4$." It all hinges on the fact that the area of the image formed on the retina of the eye becomes sufficiently smaller with increased distance to exactly counterbalance the effect of the inverse square law.

EXHIBITS OF NEW APPARATUS

DUE TO business conditions, the exhibits of new apparatus at the Society of Motion Picture Engineers convention was not as large as usual. However, it was very interesting.

The Eastman Kodak Company, through H. Paul Kelley, demonstrated the new Koda-Color film by projecting it with their Kodascope Model A projector. The purpose of this new film is to provide the amateur with a color film which he can really get results from without brilliant sunlight, and at the same time secure for him acceptable results in naturalness of color in the projected screen image.

The Kodascope Model A projector is unique in that it contains new facilities and a simplicity of control. A most interesting feature is the possibility of absolute adjustment of all parts of the optical system, which of course means excellence in screen illumination results.

The controls are all located on a panel on the working side of the projector. They consist of a single directional control and separate switches for lamp and motor. A floor portable lamp is plugged into the projector and may be operated from a switch on the projector. Current for the projector may be taken from any ordinary light socket or other convenient outlet. At the bottom of the projector is a large squirrel cage fan which pumps air up through the lamphouse and rheostat. This complete outfit is one of the neatest in appearance it has been my privilege to examine. The picture is quite steady, and the screen image color results were excellent. In fact, at one point I wanted to pick up and pet a couple of kittens, they were so astonishingly natural. That was, I believe, about the best color shot I have ever looked at.

James A. Murren had on display what is known as the Murren Carbon Economizer, a device designed to enable the projectionist to use up all but about one inch of his carbon stubs, whether they be 9 mm, or 13.6 high intensity carbons.

The device is very simple, consisting of a double-ended chuck by means of which a directionally true hole may be bored and threaded in the ends of carbon stubs. These stubs are then joined by means of a threaded copper plug, resulting in a perfectly straight carbon equal to the length of the two stubs when they are screwed together. It is claimed that by this method all but about one inch of the carbon stubs may be used. The joining threaded copper is uninjured and may be used a great many times.

Westinghouse had on display two new lamps of bi-plane construction. They were 40-watt, 100-volt; and 1,000-watt, 115-volt projection lamps.

General Electric had a 5,000-watt lamp designed for motion picture studio photographic work which had a new method of construction.

Seeing Oscar Depue's smiling countenance, I was glad to stop, shake hands and say hello. He had on display a continuous one-operation 16 mm. sound-on-film printer. This printer is really a double machine, since it not only will print 16-mm. contact prints, but also the sound prints only, or the sound track and picture simultaneously.

Across the room was what appeared to be a cash register. Closer inspection, however, proved it to be an automatic light control put out by the Oehler Machine Company, Inc., of New York City. It is a well-constructed device designed to control brilliances of the motion picture printer film light source. As I have said, the thing looks very much like a cash register. On its front is a bank of 28 keys, the first 24 of which are numbered consecutively, starting with one. Each of these keys represents a fixed light value. Together with the negative to be printed, the operator receives a card upon which is set forth the correct light value to use with each sequence. For example, assure scene No. 1 to appear bearing the number, 15. The operator presses Key 15, and the light value is automatically and correctly fixed for the balance of that scene. If the next scene is marked 5, he will press Key 5, and so on throughout the production.

We are having a tremendous amount of projection trouble because of the fact that many of the productions are printed too densely to permit proper showing except in theatres in which the absolute maximum of projection light is available. It seems to me this device ought to help considerably in the reduction of that evil. There is an arrangement by means of which the operator of this device may quickly check up on the sequence of the light value. The contacts of the light controls are composed of an alloy of platinum and iridium. They are completely enclosed in order to avoid possible contact troubles.

The Blue Seal Company displayed what they call a "Blue Seal Treatizor," which consists of a glass container holding about one pint, held by means of a suitable bracket just in front and at half the height of the upper projector magazine. This container is covered with a suitable metal cover, in which a means is provided for filling, and on which are two "snap-switch" valves, used to regulate the flow of the liquid from the container. Extending from the bottom of the container are three flexible pipes, two of which lead to two thick pads, which are held in place on either side of the film just above the upper magazine fire valve rollers. The liquid contained in the glass consists of 95% carbon tetrachloride, and 5% of a lubricating chemical, the name of which is not divulged. The purpose of this part of the arrangement is to enable the two aforesaid pads to remove oil, dirt, etc., from the film. This is done, the Blue Seal people say, very effectively. The third pipe extends down to, and connects with, a special upper magazine support containing the fire valve. Just in front of the fire valve there is a carriage, so designed that in event of a film fire it would automatically open the aforesaid pipe and permit a stream of carbon tetrachloride to flow down, and flood the fire valve and projector mechanism.

The Blue Seal Company states that the film, when passing between the two pads at the upper fire valve, becomes lubricated with the 5% lubricant alloy contained in the carbon tetrachloride, so that new film may be run through without any deposit of emulsion upon the tension shoes.

This company also had on display a plano-convex lens, five inches in diameter, held in a metallic ring and supplied with a support by means of which it can be fastened to the slide of the observation port. The lens may be moved, swung or rocked within considerable latitude. It is designed to give the projectionist a clear view of the screen, and do so without involving appreciable eye strain. I shall have more to say about this after it has been thoroughly tried out.

I also noticed a combination screw driver and socket wrench which this company is putting out. It is designed for use with Hall & Connolly high intensity lamps.

The Weston Electrical Company had its illumination meter on display. It is intended for all general lighting measurements. It can be adjusted and calibrated with reference to other sources of light, however.

This company also had a sound servicing test set on exhibition. This is intended for use by service engineers and technicians as an aid in the servicing of sound equipment. It is arranged to measure the values and currents and the compression of vacuum amplifying tubes. It is also designed to supply measurements of rheostats, as well as general d.c. and a.c. voltage measurements. It contains a power level meter with its attenuator, having an overall range of from —24 to +34 db, calibrated for measurements on 500-ohm impedance. This impedance of the motor is maintained throughout its entire range of 5,000 ohms. This power level meter circuit is independent of the rest of the test set equipment, so that it may be used while other measurements are being made. A full test for the amplifier tubes is provided, either with the tube in operation or independently from the amplifier by means of 60-cycle alternating current; portable power level and voltmeter, which is designed for all kinds of power level measurements. These are all of the copper oxide rectifier tube type and have a sensitivity of 2,667 ohms per volt. No attempt is made in this meter to maintain a constant impedance. Instead of this, the sensitivity is made sufficiently high so that for all practical measurements

How to Reach the Theatre Market

A straight line is still the shortest distance between seller and buyer. BETTER THEATRES is that straight line in the motion picture business. Nearly everyone with buying authority in the field is a reader. So are those without authority but with advisory influence. Reach them and you have gone straight to all of your market.

Advertising in BETTER THEATRES is the most economical as well as the most direct route from you to your customer. With one advertisement you reach the whole of your market. Not a prospect is missed. Not a cent is wasted.

Detailed and audited figures to prove these statements will be sent upon request. Address:

no corrections for the impedance of the meter is necessary. It is calibrated in either volts or decibels. The voltage ranges are 1½, 2, 6, 15, 60, and 150. The decibel ranges are from —18 to +38, calibrated with reference to a 500-ohm line, with power level equal to six milliwatts.

This company also had an average illumination meter, which is composed of a number of photromic cells so arranged that light from a considerable angle is picked up in motion picture studio sets. In conjunction with these cells a switchboard type of indicating instrument is used, having its scale and pointer large enough to be photographed on the film. This provides a record of the voltage illumination used for that particular setting.

The Neumade Company of New York City, had on display a machine which consists of two dummies something like rewinder elements, between which is a device through which the film passes in rewinding from one reel to another. As the film goes through this device, slits are cut lengthwise along its center. These are about one inch long by 1/16 of an inch wide. It is known as a "film mutilator" and is designed to prevent old, worn out prints from having some of the scenes, cut out and resold. This company also had on display a baby spot with a 5-point color wheel, and a very neat-looking flood lamp.

RCA-Victor had its 16-mm. sound-on-film projector on display. This has previously been described. Western Electric also displayed 16-mm. equipment.

MEETING PLACE PAR EXCELLENCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., our national capital certainly is an outstanding convention city. In how many cities in all this broad land could something like 200 delegates have a really pretty good time through four days and nights of almost continuous rain, damp and drizzle, which is exactly what happened at the spring meeting of the S.M.P.E. in May. The rain started the day before the convention, and forgot to stop until the night of the last day of the meeting!

That those present were able to enjoy life was to a considerable degree due to the excellence of the meeting place itself, the Wardman Park Hotel. This hostelry must have been planned by some architect who had attended many conventions and knew their needs. As a convention meeting place it is pretty nearly ideal. Beautiful site. Conveniently located. Large, well furnished rooms. Good cuisine. Huge, well furnished lobby. And in addition, a theatre with a stage, projection room and all things necessary.

WHAT IS A DECIBEL?

J. L. CRANSETTE of New Orleans, La., asks, "Will you please advise me as to just what percentage in increase or decrease one 'decibel' stands for?"

The term decibel is meant to represent that difference in sound volume or loudness which is barely discernible to one of normal hearing. It is a difference, expressed in figures, of about 12%.

THE LIFE OF MAZDA LAMPS

FROM a projectionist in Montana comes the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: This is my first letter to you with regard to projection problems. I have a set of the Bluebooks, which I find to be very good and useful, but I am unable to get from them the answer to what is troubling me just now.

"We are using Mazda lamps of the 900-watt, 30-ampere, 28-32-volt type, with current supplied from General Electric H.D.S. constant current rectifiers. Our projection distance is 72 feet. We are getting excellent results, but I find the lamps do not last as long as they should. I have had the ammeters checked twice in the past few months. They were found correct both times.

"When one lamp is burning I keep the other on warming contact. What effect has this warming current on the life of the lamp? Both lamps are also kept on the warming position for about 15 minutes before I start our performance. I have been allowing the warming period as about one third when I figure the life of the lamp, but the manager insists that it should not be taken into consideration at all. Will you tell me just how the life of a lamp may be calculated? Once I am certain on that point, I can be in a better position to convince him. Am I right in this warming up matter, or is the manager? Due to the fact that we have Western Electric equipment, I would like to produce as good results as is possible.

"During my work as projectionist I have never had to turn a single audience out. The only interruption I have had was caused by a poor splice that did not hold and left me with a white screen for about two seconds."

I do not myself know of any way to calculate the life of a lamp, except that when the lamp is used at, but not above, its rated capacity, the manufacturer himself sets the probable number of hours it will operate. This operation period, however, varies very widely. It is cut down very rapidly by even the slightest overload.

And now as to your argument with the manager. He is to all intents and purposes right. While theoretically any flow of current, no matter how small, operates to reduce the life of the filament, still the effect of low currents, such as that used for warming-up, is so slight that it is almost entirely negligible, and that is what you wanted to know.

One thing that must be kept very carefully in mind by Mazda users is the fact that Mazda lamps must not be in any degree overloaded. Of course, if you do not carry them up to the rate of capacity you don't get the light you should. If, however, you carry them in any degree above the rated capacity, you do not get the lamp life you should—and there you are.

PUBLIC INTEREST IN PROJECTION

A RECENT Sunday issue of the Daily Oklahoman contains a very excellent illustrated article which sets before the people of Oklahoma the wonders of modern motion picture-sound projection. The article is, aside from a too prolific use of the word "Machine" and the transforming of the projection room into a "booth," so written that it should be of very real interest to the public. It deals with the projection rooms of the Midwest and the Criterion theatres of Oklahoma City, three of the projectionists of which are H. Wortham, J. O. Buckles and A. C. Brown. John Schoppel is manager of one of these theatres, though the article does not say which one.

It is indeed interesting to know that projection has climbed up the ladder of fame sufficiently to convince newspaper

BUILD BURGLAR PROTECTION into YOUR TICKET OFFICE

THE installation of a YORK Round Door Chest is so easy and economical that you cannot afford to be without this protection for your cash receipts. Anchored in a block of solid concrete, this sturdy little safe defies all menace of fire and theft. It cannot be removed from the building or attacked at any point except the heavy door. And that will stop any burglar.

When desired, the YORK Chest is also provided with the "Hold-up Partition" as illustrated. Provided with a slot for the insertion of money, this inner door may be kept closed and offers a disconcerting obstruction to bandits who attempt raids during business hours. The saving in burglary insurance alone will pay for a YORK Chest in a reasonable length of time.

Let us show you why so many companies, both large and small, have adopted them. Write for illustrated folder.

editors that a description of its methods and equipment is worth fully one quarter of a page in a single issue. However, I note that Oklahoma newspaper editors have not arrived at the point of dignifying the men engaged in motion picture-sound projection by their correct title. In the article in question it is regrettable to note that they are still described as "machine operators."

Many motion picture-sound projectionists now regard it as in the nature of an affront to be termed "machine operator," for which they cannot much be blamed.

EQUIPMENT AFFAIRS

General Equipment News and Comment

SUPER-LIGHTING

● The International Music Hall in Rockefeller Center will be equipped with lighting facilities that exceed, we are told, anything ever used in a theatrical enterprise, and one may well believe it. The lighting equipment for the entire theater will consume 3,000 kilowatts—enough to run about 30,000 radio sets. There will be 314 lighting circuits, more than twice as many as there are in the Chicago Civic Opera House, which at present has the record number of circuits. The average theatre with a stage has about 50 circuits, and the average motion picture house even less. Control is by the General Electric thyratron reactor method from a console in front of the orchestra.

STEEL FLOORING

● The development of a new steel flooring after long scientific investigation has been announced by Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, Pittsburgh, Pa. This flooring consists of slabs, 24 inches wide and up, to 12 feet, 5 inches in length at present, that are fabricated by preforming two steel sheets and subsequently welding them together in the plane above the neutral axis. A cross-section taken through the width of a completed unit shows four keystone-shaped cells, all connected together near the neutral axis. These four ducts, which constitute each unit, are spaced at six-inch intervals and connect directly, when installed, with the corresponding ducts of the adjacent section of floor slab. This arrangement is described as enabling the utilization of the new floor not only as an efficient load-carrying member, but also as a multiple floor-duct system for all types of electrical lines.

NEW OIL FURNACE

● A new type of oil burning furnace, utilizing the heavy and less costly domestic fuel oils, has been developed by engineers of the General Electric Company. This new unit is completely assembled at the factory.

TRAILERS ON COOLING

● Five styles of cooling system trailers have been produced by National Screen Service. Each of these is symbolic of coolness and contains copy calling attention to the theatre's cooling system and its advantages. These trailers are animated and scored with music.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE CONDUCTED BY PETER M. HULSKEN, A. I. A.

The Question:

I HAVE noticed in BETTER THEATRES plans, etc., on theatres, which in most cases involve a large expensive structure and outlay of considerable money. Do you have anything to offer in plans for a small town theatre seating about 500 on ground floor, lot about 40 feet wide, not involving a great layout of money? Population 4,000 people.

If you have something on file of this, I would appreciate very much anything you can forward to me in this respect.—L.E.D.

The Answer:

AS WE HAVE frequently stated before, we regret that this department cannot supply sketches or plans, as the purpose of this department is to give general advice in regard to inquiries only. Unfortunately, theatre designs of small seating capacities and low cost are few which have any architectural value and could be published as establishing a standard of good practical theatre building.

It is to be regretted that when one thinks about a small theatre, good design, in the majority of cases, is disregarded, and it seems that all which is required for such a theatre is four walls and a roof at the lowest cost possible, and in most cases the services of an architect seem to be dismissed as an extravagance. Generally, such buildings are left up to the judgment of some contractor, or to an architect who, without experience in theatre building, tries to design just a structural building void of good design and atmosphere. As soon as a prospective builder considers that it is most essential to employ a good architect in planning his theatre to get the best results, the sooner the standard of small theatres will be elevated to a higher plane. The same happened with small residences, and since architects interested themselves in better small houses, the results have been astonishing all over the country. The fee paid to the architect is only a small part of the building cost, and a good architect can save the owner that amount over and over again by carefully studying his problem and by economically designing the building.

Let us take for granted that a small theatre such as the one you speak of has four walls, a roof and floors which when plastered would be nothing else, in effect, than a barn. To decorate such an unsightly place one generally applies ornamental plaster or any other decorative material. An architect will be able to design such material architecturally correct and may use less of such material and obtain satisfactory results. Most all theatres have marquees and attraction boards, and if they are properly designed, they may be obtained at less than some of the stock material, and will give an original effect.

NOTE:

IN THIS department Better Theatres will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary consideration involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to "Better Theatres," 1790 Broadway, New York. They will be answered in this department. None will be answered by mail. Although only initials will be used in signing the questions published, it is a requirement that all letters bear the signature and address of their writers. The replies will be prepared personally by Mr. Hulsken, who is a practical architect and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

The material for floors could not make very much difference in price as there is so little of it, and instead of just piling up brick and stone and calling it a front elevation, it could be carried out in proper design at no greater cost than the first method. The front design should be attractive and outstanding—it draws the attention of the public. It would be considered false economy not to properly design the projection room or the installation of the electric wiring, as they are most essential parts of the theatre. Acoustical qualities should never be neglected. The plumbing and heating requirements are controlled by state codes, so by properly designing them, the architect could really save the owner money.

There is a large opportunity to design small theatres correctly at a minimum cost, and maybe for less than it would cost for a slapped-together monstrous structure built by any Tom, Dick or Harry, and such a properly designed inexpensive building may compare very favorably with some of the more expensive schemes for motion picture theatres.

For your own benefit, let me advise you to consult a theatre architect. The results obtained will not only be worthy of your own pride, but also of your community.

The Question:

I HAVE a lot 56 feet wide with an alley at the rear only, and I intend building a theatre on these premises. I know I should have more land for exits on each side, but I would like to know whether I can plan the exits in such a way that I could use the entire 56 feet in width for theatre, as this would give me 27 seats in a row. I am planning for about 800 seats on the ground floor, and 300 in the balcony.

I do not care for any stores or offices, as I could not get enough rental to justify the expense, also I do not care to bother with them as there are plenty of stores in the neighborhood, as this is a suburban theatre. Instead, I would rather have a large lobby with show windows along the side walls, which I think I could rent to the downtown stores for display, and I believe I could get a better rental than from the stores, and I would be relieved of the upkeep.

Now will you be kind enough to give me a sketch or description of how to provide exit space from auditorium and balcony without planning for exit courts. Thanking you in advance and awaiting your reply very eagerly.—S. B. D.

The Answer:

YOUR PROBLEM can be worked out all right. Using the full width of your lot would give you a nicer looking auditorium and it would be the most economical layout, as you will obtain capacity number of seats in a row according to your state code governing the width of your theatre and minimum aisle space.

By planning a center bank of 13 seats with one 4-foot aisle on each side you would have a bank on each side of seven seats, each giving 27 seats in a row. For eight hundred seats on the auditorium floor, the code requires four exit doors located as remotely as possible. Place an exit door on each side of the stage in the center of the flare walls. This means that you will have to take 6 feet 6 inches off each side of the stage, leaving the width of the stage 43 feet (should you require one).

On the other hand, if your lot line in the rear is low enough, you may run those exit tunnels under the stage, taking this space off the basement. These exit tunnels will have to be of fireproof construction. In the rear wall of the auditorium you place one exit door on each side near the side walls and provide next to them enough space for fireproof stairways from balcony. Each of those exits should be separated by fireproof walls and lead to doors in line with the front entrance doors.

NEW THEATRE PROJECTS

FOLLOWING is a list of new projects in motion picture theatre construction compiled from reports available on June 1. The list also includes remodeling projects and contracts awarded. An asterisk before an item indicates that additional information has been received since a previous report.

Theatres Planned

California

WOODLAND — The National Theatre Syndicate, 25 Taylor street, San Francisco, Calif., has plans by Bliss & Fairweather, Balboa Building, San Francisco, Calif., for a Class A medium type theatre to be located on Main street. Estimated cost, $150,000.

Illinois

CHICAGO—Owner, care Teich & Sullivan, architects, 64 West Randolph street, have prepared plans for a proposed new theatre to be located at North and Milwaukee avenues. Estimated cost, $200,000.

HOW WE COOL OUR SMALL TOWN THEATRE

WE HAVE just passed through a winter, usually the real show season, which has been the hardest we have seen in ten years. Our roads were impassable most of the time, with some 50 inches of snow during the season. Looking forward to another hot summer we wondered just where this old show business would go to by the time the hot season was over. Accordingly we started out laying plans to refrigerate our theatre, and as we worked along with many different companies we came to the conclusion that this would be the smallest town in the entire country to try this sort of equipment.

At least, from all the data looked over from seven larger companies furnishing this equipment, we could in no town in the United States find where a real job of refrigeration had been installed. Cherokee is a town of 5,400 in a strictly farming community. Our theatre seats about 650. For this reason we believe that our experiment will be of vast use to many other theatre men when the summer months are over. That is, we will be able to furnish accurate information to our manager and owner friends on whether or not the installation of this more expensive equipment pays in a town of our size.

The York Ice Machinery Company of York, Pa., were awarded the contract. Mr. DuBois and Mr. Muench, the engineers from the St. Louis office of this company, spent considerable time in working out a system that could be operated at a minimum cost, one of the things that must be watched in the installation of this equipment. As this was the smallest job that they had gone into in the ttheatre line, it required much time to arrive at just the proper setup, and if everything works out as planned, York will be considerably ahead of other companies in breaking into this smaller field of air-conditioned theatres. For the benefit of those who want to know what we have planned, the following will give a good idea.

The equipment consists of a specially built air washer located in the basement, with a large blower to force the air through an elaborate system of ducts leading through 15 different openings in the theatre. At the head of the washer is a cold water precooler, taking advantage of the 51° water which we have here. Aside from the regular duties of a washer, this particular one will contain two banks of coils leading from a compressor in which will be used $CO_2$ as a refrigerant. A 28-ton compressor with a 25-horse-power motor will be used as the refrigeration end of the job.

With the arrangement of this equipment, it will be possible to use fresh air entirely without any other part of the apparatus in use. This fresh air may be cut down as low as 10% for use during winter months when ventilation is the main thing. It will also be possible to use the machine as a straight air-washer with recirculated water when outside conditions permit, or by using a continuous stream of fresh 51° water, we may obtain greater cooling as the season advances. After this we will be able to use either one or two sets or banks of coils with the refrigeration machinery, which will give us control over the hottest conditions.

From the above setup it will be seen that the equipment is being made so that we may use any part of it as our needs may be. This will be a great saving, as it will not be necessary to use the refrigeration end of it unless weather is really hot. Before figuring out this equipment we were insistent on having a very elastic plant in order to cut down the cost. Running at full capacity, it is expected to entail a cost of between $1.50 and $1.75 per hour.

After the air has been circulated through the auditorium it will be returned through a series of mushrooms in the floor and sent back to the washing room to be mixed and to be used later in the process to temper the colder air.

The plant will weigh in the neighborhood of 8 tons, and there will be about 2 tons of duct work to be done. At the rate we are making now the plant will be in operation about June 1. After it has been operated for a time we will be glad to give any or all the data on it and just how it will affect our business as time goes on. —*D. R. voids. If the upper levels of seating would be forced into these valuable areas, the chair problem itself would be very much nearer to a solution. Therefore, it is the basic form of the theatre itself which should be the main factor in improving seating conditions, and not the structural features of the chair itself.

FLOOR SLOPE IN RELATION TO CHAIR DESIGN

The present common practice of designing the chair to meet floor slope conditions is the greatest hindrance in the development of better seating conditions. The problems of chair and floor are one.

MINIMUM WALKING DISTANCE AND STAIR CLIMBING

The patron should be able to reach a seat with a minimum of exertion. If all of the considerations and principles heretofore mentioned were recognized and strictly adhered to, it would be found that this problem would practically solve itself —since, if seats are kept within the concentrated valuable areas, it naturally follows that such seats would be reached with greater ease.

If the seating problem were used as the method of approach in attacking the complete design of the theatre, rather than starting out with architectural whimsicalities or following in the footsteps of traditional theatre forms, it is certain that such other considerations as acoustics, lighting, air conditioning, and decorative problems could be met and solved not only with greater ease, but also with much finer results throughout the theatre.

garded in these days as religious ordinances. They are not designed as punishment for violating a religious tenet, nor to enforce the views of any sect as to the sacredness of a holy day. Like other prohibitory statutes of more engaging contemporary interest, they are not founded upon the principle of legislating morals, but upon the high regard for the principle of public welfare. The establishment of a compulsory day of rest is a legitimate exercise of the police powers of the state. The policy is based upon long experience and custom, proving that periods of rest from ordinary pursuits are requisite to the well-being, physically and mentally, as well as morally, of a people. Debilities spring from uninterrupted labor, and the law is a beneficent and merciful one.

For example, in Strand Amusement Company v. Commonwealth (43 S. W. [2d] 321), it was disclosed that a state law provides, as follows:

"No work or business shall be done on the Sabbath day, except the ordinary household offices. . . . . Provided that amateur sports and athletic games shall not be considered a work, labor, trade, business or calling within the meaning of this section."

It was contended by a theatre owner that the law is void because it is discriminatory for the reason that sports and games are permitted. However, the court held this law valid, and said:

"The appellant (theatre owner) concedes that application and the constitutionality of the statute generally. . . . The purpose of the statute is, as has been said in this opinion, to secure for every person employed a day of rest, and to accomplish that purpose it has been decreed by the Legislature that whoever deprives any individual—not a collection of individuals—of that period of rest commits an offense."

GUARANTEEING TROUBLE

"THE PRODUCERS' AGREEMENT," presented in outline and discussed in this issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, is a document or design of procedure exceedingly well calculated to intensify and aggravate the evils with which it purports to deal.

"The Agreement" appears to have been conceived in considerable secrecy and to have thus far enjoyed more support from the might of the status quo than from right and the accepted principles of American industry. It appears to contemplate setting up in behalf of the employer of the status quo period a curiously exclusive line of rights pertaining to players in all subsequent relations. It reads more like range law on brands and mavericks than a code of conduct for a great industry.

The Hollywood community of picture markers has obviously been considering and discussing in this "Agreement" a line of projected operation which in becoming public, which is inevitable for all things Hollywood, could only reflect in terms of animadversion on the institution of the screen, and which could scarcely be expected to stand the ordeal of a test in the courts. To anyone in anywise experienced with contracts as working instruments it would appear likely that employment contracts, in spite of any external "Agreement," would expire at the end of their term. The sub-rosa under any other name is the same malodorous, thorny flower.

WHITE SPACE AND THE TRUTH

MR. ROBERT SISK, who has come somewhat newly to movieland from a successful exploitation career in the world of the speaking stage, now as advertising and publicity director of RKO, addresses himself to its theatre managers in the corporation's house organ, as quoted in the Round Table section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, with a plea for the use of white space in theatre advertisements, for the use of simple copy, in words and art work, and the seeking of "a decent quality" and the telling of the truth. He urges, too, the abandonment of that fury of adjectives which become a commonplace of show and picture display copy.

It would seem, mayhap, to many a layman, reading Mr. Sisk's words, and these, that he is proclaiming the obvious.

And what a tragedy it is that he is not!

HE CAN'T HIDE THE SHELLS

THERE'S merry modernism in the red and black typography of Page One of Hollywood Herald, our west coast contemporary, but the writer of that page, one Mr. "Observer," appears to be an astigmatic old fuss-budget Tory who has decided that he and his colleagues of the production community exist in a continuous state of crystalline perfection. Just now Mr. "Observer" is in high dudgeon because Miss I. A. R. Wylie, English novelist and briefly a "Hollywood writer," has dared to speak her mind, openly, freely and under her own name, about movieland and the inhabitants thereof, together with her observations about sundry idiosyncrasies thereunto pertaining in the current number of Harpers Magazine. Now if Mr. "Observer," and his confreres, about whom he is so bitterly solicitous, would do something about those matters which isnpire, cause and give substance and suggestion to those utterances about Hollywood, perchance progress could be had. A Missouri philosopher of a half century ago remarked that "any dog that likes to suck eggs ought to have brains enough to hide the shells."

FORGOTTEN GARDENS

PROOF sheets from Mr. Charles E. Lewis' industrious Managers' Round Table department bring a suggestion, among many others, for the conduct of a "Garden Week" for theatres properly situated. Which reminds us that the motion picture pays far, far too little heed to the gardeners in its audience. The Pathe-that-used-to-be released some pictures of roses unfolding in the presence of the slow motion camera and once a year the newsreels cover the Portland Rose Festival and the New York Flower Show. Otherwise the motion picture knows less of the things that grow within garden walls than a waif of the lower East Side of New York. But the garden is a fact of life and an enthusiastic hobby expression for some millions of Americans. Just now a lot of them are wondering how and where they can get the amazing King Tutankhamen iris. Some more of them are considerably perplexed about the propagation of the whimsical blue poppy from Thibet. This year the Tithonia, the flower of the Incas from Peru, is promising a sensation. But in movieland vegetables are brought into the world by a can opener, and all flowers arrive by gold-laced messenger from Thorley's. And yet, considering the tone of some current product announcements, reflect on the "selling lines" that could be written by the same genii on the censorproof sex life of the passion flower!

THE MARKET AND AGE

MR. STUART CHASE, the economist engineer, author of "Men and Machines" and many other like works, sets forth in the "Survey" that "most people over thirty take their recreation sitting down—at second and third hand." Our amusement industry may then perhaps well adopt as a slogan the old minstrel line, "Gentlemen, be seated." Perhaps what we need just now is more people over thirty. However, it just chances that the most eager patrons of the motion picture are persons under thirty, and mostly in the same years that the public libraries find the most ardent readers, from twelve to twenty-five.

ACADEMY RESISTS THE "HANGOVER" CLAUSE OF PRODUCER AGREEMENT

Demand Deletion of Clause Requiring Notification of Former Employer for Six Months After Expiration of Contract

Agree on Evils of Raids, Premature Dickering and Secret Pacts, but Want Arbitration on American Association Plan

"The Producers' Agreement" is the title and brand name of a form of picture makers' coalition with special reference to the star system and terms of employment, which has been in some degree of operation in Hollywood since January 1. The "Agreement" has been signed by all members of ther Producers Association, with the exception of Columbia Pictures Corporation.

The "Agreement" was drafted by Edwin Loeb, an attorney for the Producers Association, who was in January appointed to the office of arbitrator in application of the employers' new code, at a salary of $100,000 a year, according to the Hollywood understanding. The "Agreement" has been from the beginning and continues yet a subject of considerable debate and contention, with demands for modification in behalf of the players in the Acadamy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

"The Agreement" has three major purposes and provisions:

> To prevent one company from raiding another company for the purpose of "stealing" players or other artists, such as directors, or writers, or technicians.
> To put an end to premature negotiations for the employment of artists while they still are under contract elsewhere.
> To end all secret negotiations between the companies signatory to the Agreement, regarding employment of artists and, similarly, secret negotiations between companies and artists already employed.

According to statements made by Mr. Loeb to the executive body of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences last January (the officers, directors and section chairmen), it was the practice of the producers before the adoption of this agreement occasionally to enter into secret agreements regarding the employment of artists, either with each other or with the artists themselves, or their agents. This, according to Loeb, was believed to be, if not definitely unethical, at least unwise. He said the new agreement supplants and prohibits any such secret agreements.

On many occasions Mr. Loeb has sought to stress the importance of this phase of the new agreement, designed to prevent raids for artists. The case of Warners' acquisition of William Powell, Ruth Chatterton and Kay Francis is cited as an example of what the new agreement is supposed to prohibit and prevent, though it has been pointed out that such raids are not particularly common within the industry, and certainly not very practical under present economic conditions. For this reason some believe that the "non-raiding" phase of the agreement has been over-emphasized as to its real importance to the industry as a whole.

According to the terms of the Agreement, all contract artists cannot even be approached with an offer of employment by another company until the final thirty days of the existing contract period. In the event another company presents an offer of employment within this final thirty day period, the company making or intending to make such an offer to the artist must notify the current employer, setting forth the terms of the offer in detail. According to Mr. Loeb the theory back of this provision is to prevent, in the first place, premature negotiations during the life of a current contract and, secondly, to give the current employer an opportunity to meet the terms of the company seeking to take the artist away from its roster.

The Agreement then goes further, to provide that "for six months after the termination of the contract" the former employer must be notified of any offer made, or to be made, to the former employee. This is necessary, according to Mr. Loeb, to prevent secret negotiations between the artist and another company, looking to the consummation of a deal to become effective immediately upon the expiration of a current contract. The terms also provide that non-contract artists who have been continuously employed by a given company for six months or more, are to be considered in the same category as the contract player.

Fines for Violation

The arbitrator handles disputes arising under the agreement but appeal may be taken from the decision of this arbitrator to the executive committee of the Producers Association in Hollywood, and appeal may be made from the decision of this committee to the executive committee of the Hays organization in New York. The Agreement provides for the assessment of fines for its violation.

Headquarters for the clerical work incident to carrying out the Agreement have been set up in the offices of the Producers Association, with Fred W. Beetson, executive vice-president of the Producers Association, sitting in charge when Mr. Loeb is absent.

Early last January, when the socalled "repudiation letters" issued by Fox to contract artists and technicians were very much in the public discussions of Hollywood, Mr. Loeb urged the calling of an Academy meeting for the purpose of obtaining a formal Academy condemnation of the Fox Company for its action in seemingly repudiating contracts with certain of its people. At that meeting a violent discussion of the Producers Agreement was launched, and some present urged an immediate condemnation of the Agreement by the Academy. Finally a resolution was passed declaring for a further study of the Agreement. Each branch of the Academy was directed to make a study to consider the effect upon its own membership, and to report back its findings to the executive committee. Several meetings were held, some of them attended by Mr. Loeb, who sought to justify the equity and importance of the document.

Finally, when the reports were all made, at an executive meeting, with only the Producers Branch dissenting, it was voted that the Academy withhold any recommendation of approval of the Agreement, and that still further study of it be made, with the hope that possibly a compromise Agreement might be drafted which would be acceptable to both Producers and the Academy, and substituted for the original Loeb Agreement. To date no such substitute has been formulated, though it is said efforts along this line still are in progress.

As matters now stand, the Academy branches, through their respective committees, are outlining a number of recommendations for amending the Agreement, which may then receive Academy approval. These recommendations, as yet unpublished, are said to be approximately as follows:

1. The Academy agrees in principle to the three major purposes of the Agreement, to wit: No raids; no premature agreements or negotiations; no secret agreements.

2. That the clause providing for notification of the former employer during a period of six months after the expiration of the contract be deleted. It is generally thought among Academy members that, once an employer dispenses with the services of an employee, the employer has no further title, or claim, upon the former employee's services, nor right to know about his negotiations for future employment.

3. Addition of a clause which will make it obligatory upon a contract employee to notify his employer, while he still is under contract (and including the final thirty days of his contract) of all offers made for his services by another company than his current employer. The purpose of this is, of course, to have an all-around check upon all offers made to contract artists while employed.

4. An amendment providing for the inclusion in all standard uniform contracts of compulsory arbitration, either through the Conciliation Branch of the Academy, or by the selection of arbiters in accordance with the generally accepted principles of the American Arbitration Association and the California laws governing compulsory arbitration. The Academy committee, excepting only the Producer Branch, believe that under no circumstances will the Academy membership agree to or endorse the present Producer Agreement, which provides for its own arbitration machinery and an arbitrator appointed and paid by the Producers only.

These recommendations are still under consideration, and may later be submitted either to the executives of the Academy for action, or to the entire membership.

EXPECT ADMISSION TAX TO BE PAID ONCE EACH MONTH AFTER JUNE 21

Exhibitor Must Obtain Forms at Nearest Office of Collector of Internal Revenue, to Whom Assessment Is to Be Payable

Levy of 3 Per Cent on Electricity Consumed Also Affects Exhibitors; Income and Corporation Taxes Are Increased

Official forms for filing returns on the newly adopted federal admission tax of ten per cent of admissions in excess of 40 cents are in preparation by the Treasury Department and will be available to exhibitors within the next ten days or two weeks. The forms must be obtained by the exhibitor from the nearest office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, to whom the tax is payable.

Although particulars of the collection of the tax will not be available until the government's forms have been drawn up, Washington opinion holds that they will be payable at offices of the Collector of Internal Revenue once each month, after June 21, when the tax law goes into effect. The Treasury Department's machinery for collecting the tax is already in existence to make collections on the existing admission tax on tickets in excess of $3. At present monthly box office reports on admissions above three dollars are filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue, to whom the tax due is paid. It is believed that the same procedure will be followed with the lowering of taxable admission brackets to 41 cents.

Responsible industry opinion also holds that in most cases the tax will not be passed on to the public but will be absorbed by the theatres whose admission scales are within the tax brackets. It was said that the cost to the theatre of computing and recording the lower admission which include the tax would be greater than the tax itself.

ADMISSION TAX EFFECTIVE JUNE 21

By F. L. BURT, Washington

Reduction of the admission tax exemption from $3 to 40 cents will become effective June 21, the President on June 6 having signed the revenue act of 1932, in which the House exemption of 45 cents was abandoned in favor of the lower figure set by the Senate. The exemption is automatically to be returned to $3 on July 1, 1934.

While the exemption figure was set somewhat lower than what the industry would desire, exhibitors generally are well pleased with the result of their effort, aided by friends in the House and Senate, to defeat the strongly defended stand of the Treasury in favor of a 10-cent exemption, according to Washington circles.

Regulations governing the tax will be issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau, but will not incorporate any requirements not now in force under the Revenue Act of 1926. That law provides that the price, exclusive of tax, "shall be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped or written on the face or back of that part of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management." Failure to have the tickets so printed or to sell tickets at a price in excess of the amount printed is punishable by $100 fine.

The Government has no concern with admission price changes by exhibitors. The theatre may changes its price at any time, but must print the tickets properly and where the admission is in excess of 40 cents must show the tax. There is no objection to houses now charging 65 cents dropping their price to 63 cents so as to have the admission and tax come out at the even figure of 70 cents. The exhibitor legally at any time can drop his price to 40 cents or less to escape the tax. The Government exercises no control over the business of the exhibitor but is concerned only with collection of taxes on admissions in excess of 40 cents.

Tax returns and payments are to be made monthly by all theatres. Sufficient time for preparation of returns after the end of the month will be given by the Internal Revenue Bureau, probably 15 days. If the tax is not paid when due, there is added as part of the tax an interest charge at the rate of one per cent a month. Wilful failure to file returns when due is punishable by addition of 25 per cent of the tax; filing of a false or fraudulent return is punishable by the addition of 50 per cent of the tax.

Liable to Year in Prison

Any person required to make returns who wilfully fails to pay the tax, make return or keep necesary records may, in addition to other penalties, be fined not more than $10,000, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, and shall be assessed with costs of prosecution. Wilful failure to collect or truthfully account for and pay over taxes is punishable by a fine up to $10,000, imprisonment for a maximum of five years, or both, together with costs of prosecution. Similar penalties are provided in the case of any person aiding in the filing of fraudulent returns.

The Treasury has no estimate of the number of houses affected by the new tax because of the expectation that many will drop their admission price to forty cents. No new offices will be opened by the Internal Revenue Bureau because a sufficient number is already in existence. Nearly every state has an office for collection of internal revenue taxes. Additional employees, however, will have to be added to care for the millions of additional returns necessary under the new law.

Those sections of the admission tax provisions of direct interest to exhibitors are as follows:

> "A tax of one cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the person paying for such admission; except that in case the amount paid for admission is less than 41 cents, no tax shall be imposed. In the case of persons (except bona fide employees, municipal officers on official business, and children under 12 years of age) admitted free or at reduced rates to any place at a time when and under circumstances under which an admission charge is made to other persons, an equivalent tax shall be collected based on the price so charged to such other persons for the same or similar accommodations, to be paid by the person so admitted. Amounts paid for admission by season ticket or subscription shall be exempt only if the amount which would be charged to the holder or subscriber for a single admission is less than 41 cents.
> "Effective July 1, 1934, section 500 (a) (1) of the revenue act of 1926, as amended by subsection (a) of this section, is amended by striking out 'less than 41 cents' wherever appearing in such paragraph, and inserting in lieu thereof '$3 or less.'"

Electricity Levy a Factor

Organizations and individuals in the film industry, however, will be hit by a number of other taxes in the bill, probably the most important of which, from the standpoint of the exhibitor, is the levy of 3 per cent upon the amount paid for electricity consumed for either commercial or household use, to be paid by the consumer.

Normal individual income tax rates will be 4 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income and 8 per cent on the remainder, with surtaxes, starting at $6,000, running as high as 55 per cent on incomes in excess of $1,000,000. The corporation tax rate is set at 13¾ per cent, with an additional three-fourths of 1 per cent imposed on consolidated returns.

The income and corporation taxes will apply next year to income of 1932, but the new admissions tax and most of the miscellaneous levies in the bill go into effect 15 days after signature by the President. These include a tax of 2 cents on each check or draft, to be collected by the paying bank; taxes on the issue and transfer of stocks and bonds and on conveyances, safe deposit box rentals, automobiles, trucks, tires and accessories.

Taxes on telegraph, cable and radio messages and on telephone conversations costing 50 cents or more will bear upon many in the industry, and both business organizations and individuals will make heavy contributions to the Government's needs through the tax of four cents a gallon on lubricating oils and the impost of one cent a gallon on gasoline purchased for consumption, the latter, however, to be rescinded June 30, 1933, and the levies on toilet preparations, candy, furs, jewelry, etc.

Slightly less than five months were required for the enactment of the revenue revision bill. Hearings on the measure were started by the House ways and means committee January 13, but it was not until March 8 that it was reported. The House passed the bill April 1, and on April 6 the Senate finance committee began its hearings. The committee made its report to the Senate May 9 and the bill was passed a few minutes after midnight on June 1.

40 CENT EXEMPTION SAVES TRADE FROM SERIOUS TAXATION BURDEN

Few 45-Cent Admissions, so 40-Cent Exemption Has Significance of 45; Hundreds Rallied to Defend Industry

The enactment of the new federal tax measure in terms which exempt theatre admissions under 41 cents represents to the motion picture industry relief from an impending burden so serious in the opinion of some observers of the situation that they assert that "it means that we have escaped from an era of operation under receiverships."

Examination of the field charts would tend to indicate that approximately 400 of the 12,500 theatres of the country will be affected by the admission tax, assuming that the present scale of prices is maintained.

A considerable degree of strategy was involved in the efforts of those friends of the industry concerned with the modification of the original measure, through the five months in which it has been in evolution. The day before the vote was to be taken, the Senate finance committee, with an apparent realization that they could not hope to carry their 11-cent exemption, held a morning meeting and amended the committee report raising the exemption from 11 cents to 31 cents.

Final Program of Strategy

The 31-cent provision would have hit a very large proportion of the box office receipts of the industry. The advocates of a higher exemption engaged in a final program of strategy. Senator Tydings of Maryland made a speech advocating an exemption of 51 cents and offered an amendment to that effect. Whereupon Senator Johnson of California suggested a compromise between Tydings' 51 cents and the committee's 31 cents, a compromise at 41 cents. Senator Tydings accepted Senator Johnson's amendment to his amendment and the vote was taken at 41 cents.

It is the observation of students of the statistics back of the tax campaign that there are practically no motion picture theatres in the United States charging precisely 45 cents, hence an exemption at 41 cents has all the significance of an exemption at 46 cents. It is also their calculation that had the tax applied to admissions on all places of amusement up to and including either 41 cents or 46 cents the motion picture industry would have been called upon to pay 85 per cent of the total revenue involved. It is further estimated that at exactly 50 cents the motion picture would furnish about 50 per cent of the revenue, as at that point admissions to baseball, football, state fairs and kindred amusements would aggregate approximately 50 per cent. Above 50 cents, according to these figures, the motion picture would furnish only about 12 per cent of the revenue.

The Senate vote, fully analyzed as to party affiliations and alignment on the measure, with certain curious records of indifference or neutrality, is presented here:

Details of Alignments in Senate Balloting Show Brookhart Neither Paired Nor Voted; Strategy in 5 Months' Debate

It is to be noted that Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart of Iowa, just defeated in the Republican primaries there, and a somewhat vigorously self-proclaimed ally of the motion picture exhibitor, neither paired nor voted. Senator Dickson of Iowa voted against the industry.

The defense of the industry against the tax menace in Washington stirred exhibitor leaders in every section and, in the words of Charles Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, "brought forward hundreds of good friends of the motion picture outside the industry."

Only Newsreel Houses Avoid Admission Levy on Broadway

Broadway's two newsreel theatres will be the only ones on New York's theatrical thoroughfare which will completely escape payment of the admission tax on the basis of current admissions. Loew's New York theatre, a subsequent run house, operates at a 40-cent top on week days and therefore will be the only standard program theatre outside the tax limitations. This falls within the tax bracket for Saturday, Sunday and holiday performances, however, on the basis of the current week-end top of 50 cents.

Of the 11 other Broadway houses, all will escape the tax throughout week day morning performances. Several will escape on week day afternoons, but all will come within the tax range for evening and week-end and holiday performances on the basis of the present scale.

Sheehan, Given New Contract, Returning to Fox Coast Post

Winfield Sheehan, who returned with Sol Wurtzel from Europe last week-end, leaves for the Coast this week to resume supervision of the Fox plant. A new six-year contract is based on his previous weekly salary, but the total return is to be spread over a period of six instead of five years.

Sidney R. Kent, Fox president, leaves with Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Wurtzel, and will remain at the studio until both executives have taken complete hold in the resumption of their production direction.

WRITER GENERATION FOR SCREEN URGED

Fannie Hurst and Heywood Broun Declare Industry Should Get Own Story Material; "Deflate Adjectives": Columnist

Two writers, each more or less prominent in his and her particular sphere of the composition business, appeared at the weekly forum of the New York Motion Picture Club on Tuesday and offered, jointly, a charmingly simple analysis of the why of so many writers' irritation for, and consequent reviling of Hollywood. This done, they offered a remedy of equal simplicity for the unhappy situation, but its applicability appears to be definitely uncertain, at least, remote.

Fannie Hurst and Heywood Broun, the writer-speakers, see the situation in this light: Writers of our better fiction do not write scenarios, consequently motion picture producers who patronize or retain them are not receiving scenarios from them. Yet, the producer must have a scenario before he can make a picture, and in the process of turning a work of fiction into a scenario, the author's sensibilities more often than not are either mildly offended or violently outraged. The obvious cure, if there must be a cure, say Miss Hurst and Mr. Broun, is in the development by the motion picture industry of a generation of writers whose works are designed for the screen and the screen alone.

Miss Hurst's opinion is qualified, or should be, by such estimable byproducts of her writings as the motion picture versions of her "Humoresque," "Lummox" and "Symphony of Six Million." Mr. Broun, New York World-Telegram columnist, dramatic critic, occasional actor and producer, and also occasional, but thus far unsuccessful, candidate for public office on the Socialist ticket, qualifies by virtue of his wide acquaintance among the writing gentry either now or formerly in Hollywood.

Should Write Directly for Screen

"From all such," Mr. Broun says, "I have heard tales, particularly about the executive end of the studio business, which have amazed and humiliated me. Some of them are true, but Hollywood certainly is not entirely to blame. Writers are apt to overlook the fact that magazines and newspapers, too, edit their offerings, and most certainly make a 'play' for the masses.

"It should be apparent to all concerned that novels and short stories are not scenarios. They do not march themselves automatically to the screen. Scenarios should be written directly for the screen, and should derive from no other source. What Hollywood needs is more pride. It should divorce itself from fiction and from the stage. It should get its own story material; it should say, 'To hell with the stage,' 'To hell with the novel.' It should be able to say always, 'This is our own.' "

Mr. Broun remarked that he had had no sympathy with the widely heralded displeasure of Theodore Dreiser over the manner in which his "American Tragedy" was altered in the process of its transfer to the screen. "Dreiser knew that it was necessary to cut it for the stage. Then why not for the screen?" he asked.

The newspaper columnist took occasion to chide the industry, or that part of it which authors its public notices, for its use of extravagant phraseology. He made a spirited plea for the "deflation of adjectives" in order that they might be reduced to a plane on which they would again "mean something."

Overworking Word "Genius"

" 'Great,' " he said, "is the word, especially misused by the entertainment world. I have never seen a 'great' movie, although that may be my fault inasmuch as I only see about two a year. Now the industry's influence on vocabularies has been extended to the critics. They are overworking the word 'genius' now. The use of that word should be restricted to about once every two years by reviewers. There has been so much extravagant praise of performances that it has come to the point where the use of the word 'adequate' in describing one is likely now to get the reviewer a punch in the nose from the player so referred to."

On the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Broun was presented with a caricature of himself by Nat Karson, Chicago artist.

Miss Hurst also advocated the development of writers who would work exclusively for the screen.

"The amazing discrepancies between the creative and producing ends of motion pictures," she said, "place serious obstacles before the writer for the screen. The writing art is divided from the producing art by many intervening processes. The fatal discrepancy between paper and screen is that novels do not translate themselves to pictures. Either there must be introduced some new interpretative medium between novel and screen, or there must be developed a new generation of writers to write exclusively for the screen, to serve the peculiarities, dimensions and limitations of the screen alone."

Paramount Broadway Fulfills A Sinking Fund Requirement

Paramount Broadway Corporation on Wednesday delivered to Chemical Bank & Trust Company, trustee, $125,000 par value of its first mortgage 5½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds, which are a closed first mortgage lien on the Paramount Building and land in New York City.

The delivery for cancellation was made in fulfillment of sinking fund requirements of July 1, 1932, and upon the cancellation of this amount of bonds, there will be outstanding $9,000,000 of an original issue of $10,000,000, according to a Paramount announcement.

Columbia Ball Team Wins

The baseball team of Columbia Pictures last week defeated the Erpi team at Central Park in New York, by a score of 4-3.

Aleograph Sues Western Electric

Charging Western Electric Company, Inc., with infringement of patent rights, the Aleograph Company of San Antonio, Texas, filed a suit against the Erpi parent company in the equity department of the federal court at Brooklyn N. Y., on Tuesday, and asked an injunction restraining the company from further manufacturing and leasing machines which infringe on the patent.

The plaintiff company sets forth that it is the owner of letters patent issued in 1920 to Allen Stowers and Leo De Hymel for the manufacture and sale of talking motion picture equipment, and alleges that for the past six years Western Electric has been infringing on these patent rights.

Leader Endorses Lichtman's Plan

Exclusive bookings, as advocated by Al Lichtman of United Artists, were endorsed by Harry Huffman, president of the Rocky Mountain Theatre Owners' Association, in a letter to members which was read at a general meeting of the organization held in Denver this week.

In endorsing the new distribution plan, Huffman wrote that it might prove to be "the salvation of theatres, keeping them from a return to their nickelodeon beginnings." Joe Dekker, vice-president of the association, presided at the meeting.

At the session Mr. Huffman was reelected president of the organization and Emmett Thurman was again named secretary and general counsel. Other officers elected were: Joe E. Dekker, first vice-president; Blanche Tyo, second vice-president; Ed Schulte, third vice-president; Russell Hartwich, fourth vice-president; Gus Kohn, treasurer.

Blue Law Fight in Kansas Town Brings Sharp Break

The Parsons, Kan., blue law controversy reached the boiling point this week when the Ministerial Alliance announced its opposition to petitions being circulated asking for a referendum on city blue laws.

Definite alignment of forces on the issue appeared when petitions asking the city commission to repeal sections of the blue law were circulated by a local druggist. The controversy had been brought to a climax when A. G. Smith, manager of the Uptown Theatre, and Glen W. Dickinson Theatres were each fined $50 in district court on a charge of running Sunday shows.

Bell & Howell Announces New Color Process Filmo Cameras

Bell & Howell, Chicago equipment manufacturer, has announced new Filmo cameras and projectors designed for taking and showing color motion pictures by the Morgana Color Process. In the process, color is not inherent in the film itself, the company says, but is obtained by special filters in the camera and projector in conjunction with special mechanism.

TIMELINESS IS NEW STUDIO MOTTO

Pictures of Gangdom, Horror, Courtroom and Newspaper Yarns Are Out for Coming Season

By LEO MEEHAN

The gangster is dead.
Horror has run its course.

These cinematic facts seem very definite from just a casual perusal of product announcements for the coming season. Not all of them have yet been made, and the companies which have made them are, wisely, holding back enough open spots to permit them to make immediate use of a new and popular idea, or to follow the orthodox custom of rushing into any old cycle which looks good and which is started by a superlatively good picture.

What then, may we expect from these cinema shops of Hollywood during the season of 1932-33?

TIMELINESS is the word most emphasized in product announcements and studio publicity. Like most any other word the boys seize upon as apt, probably it will be worn to a frazzle before it is discarded. But, mainly, it seems to mean that producers and other executives whose jobs demand that they select the stories intend trying to do what successful magazine and newspaper editors have been doing successfully for these many years: Keep up with the public tastes. All of which is important, to the box office and to our dear, suffering public, if they do it.

Too long have pictures been made to suit the tastes, the vanities, the whims of Hollywood.

Much too much longer have they been dictated by a group of salesmen and sales executives who knew less about public tastes than Hollywood, who knew nothing but to yell for something to duplicate what their competitor "cleaned up on" last season.

Tell Public What It Wants

For years there has been a popular slogan in Hollywood, and along the film rialtos of New York, Detroit, Atlanta, Seattle and elsewhere: "Give the public what it wants." Seldom has it seemed to have occurred to our moguls that the public does not know what it wants! It must be told. That is why billions have been spent in advertising: to tell the public what it wants, to make it Frigidaire-conscious, or Buick-conscious, or halitosis-conscious. Otherwise the public still would be riding bicycles, sleeping on feather beds, instead of a modern Rolls Royce mattress, eating meat and potatoes instead of sterilized cottage cheese and vitamins.

But while the public does not know what it wants, it most certainly does know what it likes. And therein lies the possibilities of following a policy of timeliness in the production of mass entertainment. Magazines, newspaper headlines, the fashions, radio programs, sewing circle gossip, all these and many others are unfailing sources of information as to what Mr. and Mrs. Public are liking just now. Smart exhibitors, incidentally, can get some pretty accurate notions if they stand in their lobbies and listen to patrons, both in-bound and out-bound.

The public did not want gangster pictures, but it liked them until doddering minds stuffed the type down the public's throat after it had had its fill, and more. The horror cycle, the newspaper cycle and the courtroom melodrama cycle were shorter-lived, but the same was true about them. So, for next season we see in the offing:

Much modern hectic "life in the big city."
Adventure and exploration.
Neurotic themes.

In addition to these, there will be a few of the freak or horror type, but only a few. West Point seems to be a popular subject, and there will be a number of pictures with the collegiate background, including the usual quota of football pictures. Other sports may be picturized, including hockey, and possibly the Olympic games, to be held in Los Angeles this summer, may have an influence. So far only one definitely tied to this subject has been announced.

The usual quota of Westerns is in prospect, featuring specific personalities in series, such as the perennially popular George O'Brien, Tom Mix, or others of that type.

Few with Musical Backgrounds

Only a few have been announced with musical backgrounds, though this number may increase quickly should the box office reports be favorable. Backstage life, which had a vigorous cycle for a time, comes into the schedules only two or three times, so far. But life in Hollywood, on the contrary, seems ready to burst forth upon the screen via several productions.

Adventure pictures will come in wide variety from the far corners of the earth—from the Malay Peninsula and Borneo below the equator, to the Arctic wastes, from the heart of Africa and from the depths of the seas. There are a few, too, based upon aviation themes.

Due to the recent success of several books or plays with political satire for their material, and also to the anticipated political interest incident to a presidential campaign, plans are made for several pictures along these lines. Even the veteran showman, George M. Cohan, picture-shy for ten years or more, is preparing to dip into this field of the cinema shortly.

The general economic situation has resulted in a substantial shortage of successful plays and successful novels. Shortage of cash has prevented film companies from rushing into the market and outbidding one another for such material as is available from these sources. Bankers who have come into the picture are said to frown upon million-dollar inventories of purchased story material, 75 per cent of which never will be used. They demand hand-to-mouth buying this year. So it is likely that there will be a merry scramble for topical material which seems to hit the public fancy from month to month, with the successful bidders rushing said material into production and out to the public while the ideas still are hot.

Some "Down-to-Earth" Themes

Though there has been much talk about it, there is little indication of much production concerned with "the simple, down-to-earth themes." There are some, of course, but not a great many. And there is almost a total absence of anything spiritual in theme. Perhaps that is because Hollywood itself isn't very spiritual-minded. Its production genii are apt to confuse spiritual themes with religious themes, and tell you that religious themes are dynamite! But who knows what may happen? After all, there is the old master, Cecil B. De Mille, in the offing, threatening to do a great religious spectacle, a successor to his immortal "Ten Commandments." Maybe "C. B." will lead the way to these paths.

It is a safe bet that right now the smartest magazine and book editors, men who must reach ahead a year or even two for their material, are buying stories and articles with spiritual themes. Why? Because they know from history and experience that, as sure as day follows the night, depression and adversity, coming after a wave of luxury and materialism, inevitably turns the minds of the masses to thoughts of the spirit and less of the flesh. And they are preparing for the change. In fact, they will be ahead of it. They will know, before the public mind is wholly conscious of it, that the public is prepared for such themes. And presto, they will give the public something it likes.

German Censor Banned Only 1% of Pictures Since 1920

Only 190 films, measuring 2,300,000 meters of film, or one per cent of the total of 31,000 films inspected, have been banned in Germany since the promulgation of the cinema law of 1920, providing for censorship, according to the official censor report, says a communication to the Department of Commerce from George R. Canty, trade commissioner at Berlin.

The record shows that in 1923, 4.2 per cent were banned entirely; in 1929, 0.5 per cent; in 1930, 0.6 per cent; in 1931, 0.4 per cent. A negligible number were banned in part during 1920 and 1931, the report indicates.

A VOTE ON "INDECENT"

In last week's issue MOTION PICTURE HERALD presented a letter from Mr. M. H. Hoffman, Allied Pictures Corporation, 5360 Melrose Avenue, Hollywood, discussing his projected production of "Madame Bovary" under the title of "Indecent" and inviting exhibitors to write letters of opinion concerning the acceptability of the title. Among the responses, one of the most interesting and vigorous has come from Mr. Herman G. Weinberg of the Europa theatre in Baltimore. His letter follows:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

May I take this means of expressing an opinion in the controversy with Mr. M. H. Hoffman re the use of the title "INDECENT" in his proposed screen transcription of Gustave Flaubert's "MADAME BOVARY"?

Mr. Hoffman has probably never read "Madame Bovary," or he would not make the very flagrant and obvious error of calling Flaubert "a playwright" and "Madame Bovary" "a well-known stage classic." Flaubert* was a novelist and "Madame Bovary" is a novel—perhaps one of the three greatest ever written, along with Dostoievski's "Crime and Punishment" and "The Brothers Karamazov."

Mr. Hoffman also bases his knowledge of the story on what he has heard, that "Madame Bovary" is a "well-known classic, etc." Not on his own premises. There are many equally well-known classic works of literature that many filmgoers might find "objectionable"—as some of them might find "Bovary" objectionable. This is supposing that these works would actually be filmed in the spirit in which they were written. Of course, compromises could be made to "touch up" and lessen the shock, making for an acceptable feature with all the popular ingredients, but such compromises need not be made at the expense of great literary works when there are so many hack scenarists with the knack of turning out box-office stories with even more sensational ingredients than Flaubert provided "Madame Bovary" with.

As for the title "INDECENT," the only answer to such a proposal is that it is, indeed, indecent to even think of it. To exploit the most obvious phases of a novel on adultery, which is what "Madame Bovary" is, and to discard the entire romantic structure that Flaubert built up, the sympathy for Emma Bovary which he infused on every page, is blasphemous to the memory of a very great man who is in no position to defend himself and must remain at the mercy of a producer who has taken advantage of the fact that no copyright on "Madame Bovary" exists in America to prevent the filming.

If "Madame Bovary" as a box office title will not gross anything to speak of (and if Mr. Hoffman expects to get any revenue from the great American hinterland, he'd better abandon the idea at once) the plan to film it ought to be abandoned. Under the title "INDECENT," or "SALACIOUS" or anything else you want to call it, it won't draw anyone who is familiar with the book. But why "Madame Bovary" should be more of a bugaboo than "Lena Rivers" or "Molly Louvaine" or "Clara Deane" (recent titles of films) I cannot profess to understand. Except, perhaps, that it is a time-honored custom among producers to forego the original title of a book or play they are filming. Why they should do this when the original title has in most cases been published to the skies, heaven only knows.

I understand that censors have been known to reject films, or scenes in films, under the heading of "indecency". Will they pass one called "INDECENT"?

I understand, also, that adultery as a theme is tabu in American films. What does Mr. Hoffman propose to do about this? It seems to me he would be much better occupied in working out a scenario that would pass the censors and the Hays organization, rather than trying to think up sensational titles to a film that has not even been made.

But if Mr. Hoffman intends from the start to disregard any difficulties he may come up against in filming Flaubert's story, then what difference does it make what he calls the picture?

With all best wishes to "Madame Bovary" and to the memory of Gustave Flaubert, I remain

Very sincerely yours,
HERMAN G. WEINBERG
Manager, EUROPA THEATRE
Baltimore, Maryland

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and Mr. Hoffman, will be pleased to receive further discussions of the title, from the point of view of the motion picture exhibitor or any person concerned with the presentation and exploitation of motion pictures to the public.

*GUSTAVE FLAUBERT, French novelist, was born at Rouen on December 12, 1821. He was a contemporary and friend of Zola, Daudet, Turgeniev and the Goncourts. His works include: "Madame Bovary," "The Temptation of Saint Anthony," "Salammbô" and "L'Education Sentimentale." "Le Candidat," a drama produced in 1874, was a complete failure. Another play by Flaubert was "Le Chateau des Coeurs." He wrote a number of short stories and articles for the French press of that day.

It took Flaubert four years to write "Madame Bovary," from the beginning of 1852 to May, 1856. The government brought a charge of immorality against the author and the publisher, but both were acquitted and the novel appeared in book form in 1857.

The "Encyclopedia Britannica" says: "Every critic finds a new aspect in 'Madame Bovary' and it has been and is made to illustrate the most diverse literary doctrines."

Flaubert died of apoplexy on May 8, 1880, at Croisset. He was buried in the town of his birth, Rouen.

ADULTERY is far from tabu as a thematic element in drama for the American screen, as Mr. Weinberg appears to infer. The only documentary discussion of the subject available is presented in the Production Code, to which the members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America have, in their fashion, subscribed. In the Second Section of the Code: Plot Material, Paragraph II will be found to say:

"Adultery as a subject should be avoided:

"a. It is never a fit subject for comedy. Through comedy of this sort, ridicule is thrown on the essential relationships of home and family and marriage, and illicit relationships are made to seem permissible, and either delightful or daring.

"b. Sometimes adultery must be counted on as material occurring in serious drama.

"In this case:

"A. It should not appear to be justified;

"B. It should not be used to weaken respect for marriage;

"C. It should not be presented as attractive or alluring."

Louisiana Measure Would Tax Theatres Showing Screen Ads

A bill has been introduced in the Louisiana House of Representatives levying a special license tax on motion picture theatres exhibiting screen advertisements. Representative James Horton of Red Bay parish is author of the bill.

According to the bill, the tax will be assessed on a sliding scale according to the population of the cities where motion picture houses are located. The schedule is as follows: cities of 1,500 to 3,000, $50; 3,000 to 5,000, $125; 5,000 to 10,000 $250; 10,000 to 15,000, $350; 15,000 to 20,000, $550; 20,000 to 25,000, $750; over 25,000, $850.

There will be no more "standing room only" in Louisiana theatres if a bill introduced in the House of Representatives in Baton Rouge by Representative Robert Jones, Washington parish, is enacted into law.

Carl Laemmle Ready to Leave Baltimore Hospital Saturday

Carl Laemmle is expected to be discharged from the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, on Saturday. He may go to Europe later in the year.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has returned to the Coast, finding another visit to his father unnecessary, since Mr. Laemmle is well on the way to complete recovery from a recent operation.

THE NEWEST PICTURES

"Doctor X" a Triumph in Technicolor; Adventure, Thrills, Education in "Igloo"; Fine Westerns

By LEO MEEHAN

Striking a new note in mystery melodrama, Warners have turned out an intensely interesting subject entirely in Technicolor. It is "Doctor X," which successfully met the Hollywood preview test last week. Incidentally, it is just about the finest color job ever done on a feature production, and indicates considerable recent improvement in both the lighting and printing of color subjects. The picture is expertly done by Michael Curtiz, who had at his command one of those typical high-powered Warner casts headed by Lionel Atwill, Lee Tracy, Fay Wray and a dozen other fine troupers. It is a swell thriller and a novelty as well.

You can turn off the fans and save the ice cubes when you run "Igloo," Edward Small's production which Universal is to release. Here's the first of a number of blubber dramas from the Eskimo Land. It is reminiscent of "Nanook of the North," in that it depicts the struggle of the Eskimo with old King Blizzard, with Old Devil Starvation and just about every other known handicap Nature can put out with the exception of jungle fever. Ray Wise, an Eskimo from Point Barrow up at the top of Alaska, plays the lead. He also headed the expedition, having been living in Hollywood. But boy, if you think he went Hollywood wait till you see him spear a polar bear through the heart in one spurt, knock off gigantic sea lions one after another! Director Ewing Scott wrote a story which holds the tale together nicely, and Cameraman Roy Klaffki got some marvelous shots under tremendous difficulty. Here is adventure, thrills, education; and it took nine months of great hardship to get it. It is guaranteed not to be synthetic.

Two Splendid Westerns

Two corking good Westerns, de luxe models, bobbed up in the week. One was George O'Brien's latest "Mystery Ranch," based upon Stewart Edward White's famous novel, "The Killer." By the way, it's about eight years now since that O'Brien lad hit the trail in "Iron Horse," and he's still going strong—swell personality, clean-cut performances, popular with young and old. Eight years of steady popularity is something in this dizzy business.

Fox sent O'Brien and his company over to Arizona to film the picture, and you can take it from one who knows, these are real backgrounds of the real West. The settings are magnificent, like Remington pictures. Alfred A. Cohn, who recently wrote a stirring history of the Southwest called "Gun Notches," did the script.

The other Western was from another perennially popular cinema figure, Tom Mix, who plays a sort of Texas Ranger-Robin Hood-Zorro combination with characteristic Mixian swagger. The preview title is "The Good Bad Man," and portrays Mix using the guise of a much-wanted outlaw in order to round up the worst band of cattle thieves Texas ever exterminated. Another classic job of photography and scenic investiture has been done with this one, with Dan Clark handling the Bells and Howells. Eddie (nephew) Laemmle directed. Needless to say, "Tony" struts his stuff perfectly in this third of the Mix series.

Chic Sale comes through with another of his famous rural characterizations in Warner's "Without Consent." This time Chic is postmaster and "Prop." of a smalltown grocery, which he has operated successfully for half a century. Bold bad chain store operators come into the town and start cutting prices. Do you think Chic lays down? In winning the battle, he provides plenty of hilarity, wholesome sentiment, melodrama and what Jaysee Jenkins (one of Chic's warmest admirers) calls "down-to-earth" entertainment. (Jaysee: Try this one to cure your neuritis.) Warners' casting policy of using high class players even in small parts prevails; this one includes people like Raymond Hatton, Ann Dvorak, who is forging ahead rapidly, David Manners, Noah Beery. Family fare, surely.

Selznick's Novelty

Dave Selznick, production prexy at Radio, introduced a novelty in week-end parties when he took leaders of his staff up to Santa Barbara over the Decoration Day holidays. They took along three new Radio productions, fresh out of the cutting room, and previewed one each night in a Santa Barbara house. The pictures are Connie Bennett's latest (and one of the first of the forthcoming series based on Hollywood) "What Price Hollywood," the King Vidor Hawaiian-made "Bird of Paradise," and Wesley (Cimarron) Ruggles' production, "Roar of the Dragon," which features Richard Dix. These pictures were not yet ready for the critical eyes (and ears) of us Hollywood preview snipers, but a spy of mine reports very bullishly on the Bennett picture, which has the Radio crowd all bubbling with enthusiasm. In fact, the RKO's all came back with broad smiles. More about these later. Nice week-end idea, anyhow, combining business with pleasure. Something like the motorman going for a street car ride on his day off, eh wot?

By the way, titles of some pictures now in production look like they may provide targets for a hefty barrage of brickbats from the bluenoses and other censorious gentry: "Children of Pleasure," "Love Me Tonight," "The Sporting Widow," "Devil and the Deep," "Blonde Venus," "Redheaded Woman," "Speak Easily," "Without Shame," just to mention a few. But what's in a name, or a title?

Producers will watch with interest what exhibitors have to say about M. H. Hoffman's proposed title, "Indecent." If exhibitors don't like that sort of stuff for their marquees here's a chance to slap it down.

Pooling of Stars Seen by Cohn an Industry Benefit

The entire industry can be benefited to an important degree by the interchange, or "pooling," of stars, in the opinion of Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, and production head of the company, who arrived in New York Tuesday and will remain one week. Cohn sees a generally improved product resulting from the availability of many stars to all producers, with a consequent general strengthening of box office drawing power, if star-pooling is participated in by a sufficient number of studios.

"Every one seems to be agreed that the greatest need of the industry today is better pictures—pictures of greater drawing power, capable of sustaining long runs," Mr. Cohn said. "In my opinion, the quickest way of obtaining them is a general participation by all studios in a star-pooling agreement. If the industry's outstanding star names were available to all studios, at one time or another, the value of good box office stories would never be impaired through a producer's inability to obtain the best possible player for a given role. Through such an arrangement the maximum box office value of every story could be imparted to every picture. The general improvement in product resulting should be a boon to theatres."

"Moreover," Mr. Cohn continued, "the prestige and value of star names should also be benefited by the reduction or possible elimination of the chances of their being miscast. The appearances of stars in roles unsuited to them has impaired or ruined many a great career. It would be far less likely to happen under an arrangement which provided the right role for every star and the right star for every story.

"Lastly, producers, and the entire industry, would be benefited by the economies which the arrangement would make possible. If a star, ordinarily accustomed to only 20 weeks of work a year, could be provided with twice that amount of work, as would be possible under a pooling arrangement, he or she would certainly feel freer to work on an equitably adjusted salary scale. Savings on stars' salaries thus effected could be passed on throughout the industry."

Mr. Cohn cited as an example his company's picture, "American Madness," the first release on the new Columbia schedule, and the first print of which he brought with him to New York. Walter Huston was borrowed for this production, he said, and is ideally suited to the leading role. With any other name player but Huston in the part, the finished picture would have suffered, Mr. Cohn said. The availability of that player for the particular part makes the picture worth more than had Huston not been obtainable.

PAST PERFORMANCE IS THE ONLY PROOF OF FUTURE QUALITY

Good intentions can be taken for granted.

Naturally every company hopes and tries to turn out profitable Box-Office product.

BUT CAN THEY? Have they the equipment of talent and resources to enable them to make good their good intentions?

For answer you must look to the records.

Past Performance is the only logical, dependable assurance that even the most earnest promises can be fulfilled.

That is why Warner Bros.' and First National's announcement needs no hysterical claims.

Straight-thinking, business-minded showmen will continue to depend upon the companies that have consistently justified the confidence of the exhibitor.

And no organization has so clearly earned that confidence as have

GAUMONT-BRITISH CHALLENGES U. S. WITH NEW £500,000 STUDIO

Ostrer Brothers and C. M. Woolf Become Figures of Leading Significance; Plant Covers 50,000 Square Feet

Two-Million-Dollar Project Half Completed; Huge Production Plan Set; Space for Use by Independents at Studio

By WM. H. MOORING, London

[Picture in Pictorial Section]

The boldest single stroke ever directed to the ideal of progress in British motion picture production results is the pretentious new Gaumont-British studio in Lime Grove, Shepherds Bush, one of the older suburbs of the Metropolis, which lies within twenty minutes' travel of the heart of London's West End.

That same stroke makes of Isidore Ostrer, his brother Mark Ostrer, and C. M. Woolf, who are president and joint managing directors respectively of the Gaumont-British organization, figures of leading significance in the world's motion picture industry: they become to the world at large what Britain is supposed for so long to have lacked, namely, real "film magnates." Their latest undertaking places the Gaumont-British concern in a position of ascendancy over all other British film companies, constitutes a challenge to Hollywood, and automatically creates positions of leadership for themselves.

Started Year Before the War

One year before the Great War, the old Gaumont Company erected a small establishment in Limes Grove, on a part of the present site. It had a frontage which gave it little or no distinction over adjoining house property in what was then a quiet side street of residential status.

That studio was the first to be built specially as a studio in Britain. Hampered by the human drainage of war, it still managed to keep going, and when in 1927 the Films Act loomed, immediate steps were taken to add two stages to the one then existing, and generally to enlarge the building. It was then the company's boast that its studios would make the adjoining houses look insignificant.

Today the new Gaumont studio stands on ground 50,000 square feet in extent, with adjoining sites equal to a further 50,000 square feet for almost immediate development.

The cost of work now on point of completion, which brings the building to a workable proposition, is £250,000, and it is likely that another quarter of a million pounds will be spent on the job before the presently planned outfit occupies the whole of the land acquired for the purpose. At the moment the remaining house property in the once quiet thoroughfare looks as though it had strayed into the wrong location: the Gaumont building towers above everything in the immediate neighborhood, its strong black and white facade, fashioned on ultra-modern lines, typifying the power and capacity of the organization it houses.

There are at present five full-sized, self-contained stages, and a flat roofed space which will be used for skyline exteriors, and soon, as desired. One of the stages, it is claimed, is the largest in any film studio in Europe: it measures 9,000 square feet, and accommodates a sunken water tank of 250 ton capacity with glass walling, and a gallery for cameras all round.

PATRONS HAVE CHARGE ACCOUNTS

For six months Bill Slocum, owner of the Library theatre in Detroit, has had a charge account system at his house. Patrons who are known to Slocum may sign a book at the box office and pay for their entertainment at the end of the month. The plan has worked out successfully and there are no bad accounts, he says.

Pretentious Production Plans

Initial production plans, all of which are very definitely set with a good deal of preliminary work in hand, entail an outlay of roughly £1,000,000.

Active production will be conducted under the entire control of Michael Balcon, who is also in charge of the Gainsborough studio organization affiliated to Gaumont-British.

Balcon is one of the few young British executives who has won his spurs: he started with Gainsborough only a few years ago and gets his present promotion through the success of recent Gainsborough output.

Simultaneous with the recent growth of the Gaumont studios, the Ostrers have completed a big reciprocity deal with Ufa of Germany under which production collaboration will be assured between the British and German concerns.

There will be a free exchange of artistic and technical personnel, and this will enable Balcon to draw on many artists of established Continental reputation, and to make the best use of noted German art directors, directors, and impresarios, of which in Britain there is a native deficiency.

This arrangement suggests that Hollywood probably will have cause to regret that the kind of reciprocity which many well-meaning people suggested should be created between U. S. A. and Britain, was spurned in high places: reciprocity between the Continent and Britain is already an established fact, and the United States of America must in the near future fight to hold its film supremacy against a United States of Europe.

An idea of the capacity of the new Gaumont plant may be drawn from the fact that laboratories are now dealing with no less than 2,000,000 feet of film each week, inclusive of the Gaumont and subsidiary topicals.

Available to Independents

The new sound stage are in stories and each has its own separate offices, dressing rooms, cutting rooms, and so on. This will facilitate the letting of working space to independent production concerns. It is even yet possible that some of the Hollywood companies will find a use for some part of the giant production center in the operation of their British film making units.

Michael Balcon is assisted by Harold Boxall as his immediate deputy and P. C. Samuel takes over studio management; S. Chandos Balcon, Victor Peers, T. L. Rich and H. Fellner (associated with the German concern Fellner and Somlo) form the chief of production staff, and Hugh Findlay is heading the large studio publicity staff which is to function on lines common to Hollywood, but hitherto not successfully imitated in Britain, where studio activities are usually left to publicize themselves.

Angus McPhail, Robert Stevenson, S. Gilliatt and H. E. Alexander form the permanent literary chief of staff, and they will collate the efforts of a large number of well-known writers and composers signed by the company.

The following represents mainly the material and talent signed to contribute to early productions:

WRITERS:
J. B. Priestly

Morris), "Britannia From Billinsgate" (Christine Jope-Slade), "Marry Me" (William Thiele), "Opera Ball" (Max Meufeldt), "Rome Express (Clifford Grey), "The Midshipman" (Ian Hay) "King of the Ritz" (Ivor Montagu), and "There Goes the Bride" and musical to be directed by Albert de Courville.

Alexander Korda with his own unit, London Films, Ltd., will make at the Shepherds Bush studio his "Wedding Rehearsal," and other independent units are arranging to use the plant.

Simultaneously the Gainsborough studios at Islington, also within half hour of central London, are being extended. Two stages are already operating, and a third is to be added.

The Gainsborough lot is fitted with RCA recording apparatus, but the new studios at Shepherds Bush are to be fitted on all floors with Gaumont's own recording system, British Acoustic.

ADVERTISERS ADOPT NEW CODE FOR COPY

Seven Practices Barred as Unfair to Public and the Profession; P. L. Thomson on Associations' Committee

Seven advertising practices are barred as unfair to the public and tending to discredit advertising itself, in the new copy code adopted jointly by the Association of National Advertisers and the American Association of Advertising Agencies. P. L. Thomson, director of public relations of Western Electric Company, was one of the representatives of the ANA on the combined committee.

All phases of the new copy code that apply to the motion picture business were already incorporated in the original Code of Advertising Ethics adopted in the film industry in 1930 in conjunction with the Production Code.

The New Copy Code

Following are the practices frowned upon in the new copy code:

1. False statements or misleading exaggerations.
2. Indirect misrepresentation of a product or service, through distortion of details, either editorially or pictorially.
3. Statements or suggestions offensive to public decency.
4. Statements which tend to undermine an industry by attributing to its products, generally, faults and weaknesses true only of a few.
5. Price claims that are misleading.
6. Pseudo-scientific advertising, including claims insufficiently supported by accepted authority, or that distort the true meaning or application of a statement made by professional or scientific authority.
7. Testimonials which do not reflect the real choice of a competent witness.

This code will be administered by a review committee of 20, of whom five will have no connection with advertising or publicity, the committee acting as a court of appeal on cases from the National Better Business Bureau.

Advertised products "are honestly promoted, in the main," said the announcement, in Advertising Age, but "it is a minority of advertising, much in the public eye, which offends, and because of its bold and incisive appeal, may well give a distorted impression that advertising, in general, is untrue, or to be discounted by the reader." Advertising, it is pointed out, "may have some imaginative and dramatic leeway," but it "has an obligation to itself and to the public; it should not violate good faith or business morals; it should protect itself against loss of confidence on the part of readers—maintain credibility to secure response; it should render reliable service to the consumer."

The twelve rules of the Code of Advertising Ethics of the motion picture industry are as follows:

1. We subscribe to the Code of Business Ethics of the International Advertising Association, based on "truth, honesty and integrity."
2. Good taste shall be the guiding rule of motion picture advertising.
3. Illustrations and text in advertising shall faithfully represent the pictures themselves.
4. No false or misleading statement shall be used directly or implied by type arrangements or by distorted quotations.
5. No text or illustration shall ridicule or tend to ridicule any religion or religious faith; no illustration of a character in clerical garb shall be shown in any but a respectable manner.
6. The history, institutions and nationalities of all countries shall be represented with fairness.
7. Profanity and vulgarity shall be avoided.
8. Pictorial and copy treatment of officers of the law shall not be of such a nature as to undermine authority.
9. Specific details of crime, inciting imitation, shall not be used.
10. Motion picture advertisers shall bear in mind the provision of the Production Code that depiction of the use of liquor in American life shall be restricted to the necessities of characterizations and plot.
11. Nudity with meretricious purpose, and salacious postures, shall not be used.
12. Court actions relating to censoring of pictures, or other censorship disputes, are not to be capitalized in advertising.

Bandits Loot Theatre Safes In Two Towns; Elude Capture

Two robbers, who apparently had hidden themselves in the theatre when closed for the night, bound the watchman and looted the safe at the State theatre in Denver last week, escaping with nearly $1,000, over $100 of which was in nickels and most of the balance in small coins. The watchman was unable to free himself for two hours.

The safe at the Crown theatre at Laramie, Wyo., was blown last week and the robbers escaped with nearly $350. J. G. Burbank, proprietor, had called the police after hearing the explosion, but the cracksmen were too fast, making a getaway just prior to the arrival of the officers.

New Jersey Warner Theatre To Open Formally Next Week

The new Warner theatre in Ridgewood, N. J., will formally open to the public on June 15, with "The Dark Horse" as the feature attraction. The house was built under the supervision of Herman Maier, director of construction and maintenance for the circuit, and was designed by Thomas Lamb.

Albert Howson, director of censorship for the company, will act as master of ceremonies at the opening, which is expected to be attended by Harry M. Warner and Governor Harry A. Moore of New Jersey. J. Coster will manage the house.

Newcastle Files New Warner Suit

A new suit for receivership was filed against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., at Wilmington, Delaware, on Monday, by Marinus P. V. Newcastle, a stockholder, whose first suit, filed last February, was dismissed earlier in the day in Chancery court at Wilmington.

A demurrer to the second Newcastle suit was filed by former Judge Hugh M. Morris, counsel for Warner Bros., on Tuesday. Mr. Morris contends in his demurrer that the suit does not come within the jurisdiction of the court.

The new bill filed Monday charges mismanagement and insolvency and closely resembles the bill of complaint filed last week in U. S. District Court at Wilmington by Harry Koplar, theatre owner of University City, Mo. Mr. Koplar's suit is still pending.

At the hearing on Mr. Newcastle's first bill attorneys for stockholder made a motion that they be permitted to amend the bill by attaching a copy of the Koplar complaint. Counsel for Warner Brothers argued that this would set up a new cause of action, and moved that the suit be dismissed. The motion was granted by the court over the objection of counsel for Newcastle.

Newcastle's first bill alleged that the corporation would be unable to meet payments on mortgages and bonds aggregating more than $4,000,000 which were maturing. Warner Brothers entered a general denial on March 2, setting forth that it had cash in excess of $3,500,000 and bank credit which it did not need to use. The allegations in the first Newcastle bill were virtually identical with those in a suit filed last December by Jules Endler of Passaic, N. J., which was dismissed in February on motion by his counsel.

Fox Metropolitan Consents To Equity Receivership Plan

Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., consented to a petition for an equity receivership filed in federal court, at New York, by Henry Spitz of Paterson, N. J., a creditor for $4,000. Federal Judge Julian W. Mack appointed the Irving Trust Co. of New York equity receiver.

The petition sets forth that on June 11, 1929, Fox Metropolitan Playhouses issued $13,000,000 in 6½ per cent convertible gold notes to mature on May 1, 1932. There is outstanding, it is said, $12,500,000 in these notes which were defaulted as to principal and interest on May 1.

Beekman, Bogue & Clark, attorneys for the theatre corporation, described the receivership petition as "a friendly action to conserve the company's assets," and the corporation, through Alvin J. Schlosser, vice-president, consented to the receivership.

Fox Metropolitan was organized in 1928, when Fox Film Corporation sought the acquisition of 150 theatres in Greater New York and upstate New York. Joe Leo served as first president of the corporation and was later succeeded by Harry Arthur, who was called in from the West Coast to supervise the houses. In the last year all of the theatres comprising the Metropolitan group have been turned over to independents on operating deals. Skouras Brothers and the Randforce Operating Co. are the principal operators.

WARNER-FN NAMES RELEASE DATES FOR 17 OF SEASON'S 60 FEATURES

133 Vitaphone Shorts Will Include 91 Single-Reel Pictures, 42 Two-Reels, and 70 Will Have Music; 26 "Brevities"

[Picture in Pictorial Section]

Warner Brothers-First National will produce 60 features and 133 Vitaphone shorts in the 1932-33 season, Major Albert W. Warner, vice-president in charge of distribution, told the eastern sales executives of the company at the first of four regional sales conferences which Warners will hold this year. The first meeting, conducted by Andy W. Smith, eastern and Canadian sales manager, was held Monday and Tuesday at the Park Central hotel, New York.

Of the company's 60 features, 17 have been definitely scheduled to date. Some of these already have been finished or are in production now, and August 1 will see completion of the entire 17, Major Warner said. Release dates for the initial group, representing more than 25 per cent of the company's new season product, have already been set, and cover the four months period from September 1 to December 31, inclusive.

The first 17 from Warner-First National, with release dates, are:

September 3—"Tiger Shark," starring Edward G. Robinson with Zita Johann and Richard Arlen. Directed by Howard Hawks.

September 10—"Children of Pleasure," starring Ruth Chatterton, with George Brent, Hardie Albright, Helen Vinson and Lois Wilson. Directed by William Dieterle.

September 17—"You Said a Mouthful," starring Joe E. Brown, with Gloria Shea. Directed by Ray Enright.

September 24—"A Successful Calamity," starring George Arliss, with Mary Astor, Grant Mitchell, Hardie Albright and William Janney. Directed by John Adolfi.

October 1—"Blessed Event," with Lee Tracy, Mary Brian and Frank McHugh. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

October 8—"Cabin in the Cotton," starring Richard Barthelmess, with Bette Davis, Dorothy Jordan, Henry B. Walthall and Dorothy Peterson. Based on novel by Henry Harrison Kroll; adaptation by Paul Green, Pulitzer Prize dramatist, author of "In Abraham's Bosom." Directed by Michael Curtiz.

October 15—"Revolt," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., also with Nancy Carroll, Lilyan Tashman and Preston Foster. Directed by William Dieterle.

October 27—"The Purchase Price," starring Barbara Stanwyck.

November 5—"Life Begins," starring Loretta Young, with Eric Linden, Aline MacMahon, Preston Foster, Frank McHugh, Gilbert Roland, Vivienne Osborne and Dorothy Peterson. Directed by James Flood and Elliott Nugent.

November 12—"One Way Passage," co-starring William Powell and Kay Francis, with Aline MacMahon and Frank McHugh. Directed by Tay Garnett.

November 19—"The Campus Hero," starring Joe E. Brown.

November 26—"20,000 Years in Sing Sing," with George Brent. From the sensational and revealing work by Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

December 3—"Three on a Match," with Joan Blondell, Warren William, Ann Dvorak and Bette Davis. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

December 10—"Silver Dollar," starring Edward G. Robinson, with Bette Davis, Aline MacMahon and Alan Dinehart. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

December 17—"I Am a Fugitive," starring Paul Muni. Based on Robert E. Burns' tragic autobiography.

December 24—"The Adopted Father," starring George Arliss. From the novel by Edgar Franklin.

December 31—"They Call It Sin," starring Loretta Young, with David Manners, George Brent and Una Merkel. From the novel by Alberta Stedman Eagan.

Nancy Carroll's assignment to "Revolt" adds her name to those of other well-known former Paramount players who are now under the Warner banner, such as Ruth Chatterton and William Powell. Miss Carroll's contract was not renewed by Paramount this year, and the player does not figure in the company's production plans for the new season.

Contractual differences between Warners and James Cagney apparently have either been settled already or some future amicable agreement is anticipated, as the company's new program contemplates four pictures from this star in the year, according to Major Warner's prospectus of general production plans. Elevated to full star billing will be Ann Dvorak, for whom two starring vehicles are planned; John Blondell with four vehicles, Paul Muni with two, and Loretta Young with three.

Additional starring vehicles include three with George Arliss; four with Ruth Chatterton; four with Edward G. Robinson; three with Barbara Stanwyck; three with William Powell and Kay Francis co-starred; one with Powell starred alone, and two with Miss Francis starring alone; four with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.; three with Richard Barthelmess; four with Joe E. Brown and two with Warren William.

133 Vitaphone Short Subjects

Of the 133 Vitaphone short subjects, 91 will be of one-reel length and 42 will be two-reelers, Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone sales manager, announced. The two-reel subjects include 26 "Broadway Brevities," six of which will be musical comedy revues in Technicolor and with outdoor settings, and 16 two-reel Big V comedies.

On the list of 91 single reelers are: 13 Vitaphone Sport Thrills, 13 E. M. Newman "World Adventures," 13 "Looney Tunes," 13 "Merrie Melodies," 26 "Pepper Pot" novelties, and 13 "Melody Masters."

Music will figure in the new Vitaphone program more than ever before, Mr. Moray announced. Approximately 70 of the scheduled 133 shorts will have music, according to present plans. The increase in this type of short is said to be due to the popularity during the past season of the Broadway Brevities musical comedy revues and the Melody Masters band series. Only 12 Broadway Brevities were made this year.

In addition, the short subjects will offer re-issues of 12 Bobby Jones' "How I Play Golf" shorts, 12 "Adventures in Africa," and the 12 two-reel S. S. Van Dine detective mystery stories.

Company Opposes Double Featuring, Maj. Albert Warner Tells Eastern Sales Staff at First of Four Meetings

H. M. Warner, president, addressing the second day's meeting, announced that a bonus plan similar to the one recently inaugurated in the theatre department was being applied to the distribution organization. A fair quota, Mr. Warner said, would be set for each exchange, and bonuses would be awarded those branches which exceeded their quotas.

No change in distribution will be made by Warner-FN during the year, Major Warner assured the sales force. Referring to "methods of marketing pictures," he said: "This is no time for rocking the boat and indulging in untried experiments. Our intention is to pursue a conservative, sound businesslike policy—the only kind that can be relied upon for constructive results."

The Warner distribution executive also announced a company stand in opposition to double features.

Mr. Warner told the sales representatives that they could assure exhibitors of an ample and continuous supply of pictures throughout the year from the company, based on production plans and a policy destined to keep the company's studios in operation continuously.

Operating 600 Theatres

"We look at the entire problem through the eyes of the exhibitor," he continued. "We operate at present some 600 theatres, some of them among the largest in the country, others among the smallest. From the experience we have gained in this branch of our business we are familiar with the problems of all types and sizes of theatres; we know the different kinds of audiences that have to be appealed to and satisfied.

"We shall not only maintain our policy of continuous production, but we shall also continue to work upon a flexible schedule which will permit us to take full advantage of all the trends and tendencies of public taste."

Casting innovations, he announced, would include placing several stars in the same picture and careful selection of supporting players to insure proper casting in even minor roles. In addition, he pledged economy in every phase of the company's activities.

"Economy will be our watchword," he said. "It will dominate every phase of our activities, but not to the extent of being penny wise and pound foolish. We shall not economize on quality."

The eastern meeting was opened by A. W. Smith, who presided. He addressed the meeting on routine sales and exchange subjects. Similar brief addresses were made by Sam E. Morris, vice-president; S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity; Gradwell L. Sears, Dan Michalove, Norman H. Moray, Joe Hummel and Albert Howson.

Senator Brookhart Defeated in Iowa Republican Primary

Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart, Republican, long an advocate of drastic government regulation of the motion picture industry, and sponsor of a bill of that nature in the current session of Congress, was defeated this week in the Iowa state primary elections by Henry Field of Shenandoah, known as an "amateur politician."

On Wednesday morning Mr. Field held a lead of 46,379 votes over Mr. Brookhart, with reports in from 2,293 of 2,435 precincts. The count stood at 183,765 to 137,386 in what is described as one of the most exciting primary campaigns in Iowa in decades.

Attacks on Senator Brookhart as a nepotist and a speaker at profitable Chattauqua lectures, for which he deserted the Senate during the special session last year, are generally understood to have contributed heavily to his defeat for the nomination. Iowa objects seriously to nepotism, and relatives are barred from the payrolls of state officers. Mr. Field took up a challenge offered by Senator Brookhart, who termed him a "chicken-stew politician," by concluding his campaign with a promise of "chicken stew and all the good things that go with it, against the same old bologna Brookhart has been handing out for 10 years."

In the Democratic primary, Louis Murphy of Dubuque appeared virtually certain of the nomination. Returns from 1,898 precincts gave Mr. Murphy 47,385 votes. Fred P. Hagemann, exhibitor and operator of the Palace theatre, at Waverly, and who in a recent letter to MOTION PICTURE HERALD had referred to Senator Brookhart as a "dud," received 11,370 votes for the Democratic nomination from the same number of precincts.

Iowa Republicans this week expressed the belief that Mr. Brookhart might run for the Senatorial post in the fall as an independent.

Allied Will Carry On Brookhart Bill SupportInSummer

Allied States Association leaders plan, at the coming session of the organization at Atlantic City, June 22, 23 and 24, to perfect plans for continuing the fight of the association for the Brookhart bill while congress is in recess, it is set forth in a communication from Allied headquarters in Washington.

"Specimen speeches and literature have been prepared and the work of circularizing and addressing interested groups and bodies will be speeded," the communication read.

The question of whether or not the independent exhibitor should take an active part in the approaching political campaign will be discussed at the Atlantic City session. A second general bulletin from Allied headquarters considers the use of the independent's screen to bring about favorable legislative action as worthy of consideration.

The statement says in part: "If the independent theatre owners are to continue to receive consideration at the hands of congress, they will have to take a more active interest in politics. Certain it is that they will have to prove themselves both potent and useful." The bulletin carries a caption, "Political Activity for Purposes of Defense."

Court Holds Censor Approval Necessary To Film Contracts

An important decision handed down this week by the Kansas supreme court at Topeka affirmed that a contract cannot be entered into for the showing of a film in Kansas until after the picture has been approved by the state censor board and that the distributor cannot fix the price the exhibitor is to charge. The decision, written by Justice J. Burch, was in a case appealed from a district court.

United Artists had brought action against R. E. Mills, who then operated the Plaza Theatre at Chanute, Kas., to force Mills to go through with a contract for the showing of a picture titled "The Devil Dancer."

The court not only held that the distributor could not contract with an exhibitor to show a picture before it passed the censor board but held that it was a violation of the criminal laws to do so. The court also held that to fix a price the theatre should charge the public was a violation of the state laws against price fixing.

Neither censorship nor price fixing claims had any legitimate status in the decision, it is claimed by W. E. Truog, United Artists exchange manager in Kansas City.

Mr. Truog says he sold Mills 10 pictures about four years ago, all silent. Mills played some of the pictures and then transferred his Plaza theatre at Chanute to Glen W. Dickinson Theatres without transferring the contract, under which several pictures still remained to be played. United Artists subsequently brought suit for fulfillment of the remainder of the contract, said Truog. No admission price that Mills was to charge was specified in the contract, Truog asserts. Mills' theatre since has passed into the Fox Midwest circuit.

Chicago Groups to Fight Censor Edict

The protest of the Chicago's civic bodies against the censor abolition proposed by Mayor Anton Cermak, is being consolidated under the leadership of Mrs. Jean Weis, civic director of the Women's City Club. She claims the support of 45 organizations.

The group of delegates from these societies is demanding a public hearing before the city council and claims that more than 200 women will attend if a hearing is granted. Final decision relative to the status of the censor body is expected on June 15, when the council will meet to consider the budget.

Independents Act To End Twin Bills In New York Area

Efforts to bring about an end to double featuring in the 1,000 or more theatres in Greater New York now involved in the practice are being made by New York and New Jersey independent exhibitors, headed by Rudy Sanders, president of the Brooklyn Theatre Owners Association, and Leon Rosenblatt, New Jersey independent circuit executive.

Conferences between the two exhibitor leaders and affiliated circuit executives were to have been held early this week, but hearings on a New Jersey state admission tax bill caused them to be postponed. First efforts to eliminate double featuring in the metropolitan territory are being directed at affliated theatres and if progress is made with these, the campaign will then be extended to operators of independent houses, it was said.

Mr. Rosenblatt said that the campaign will be conducted from the viewpoint that there will not be enough pictures next season to fulfill dual bill requirements, and that the playing of a second feature on the same program with a picture being played on percentage is no longer profitable to the exhibitor.

A week ago Mr. Sanders and Mr. Rosenblatt met with Harold B. Franklin and Nate Blumberg, RKO executives, and won from them assurances that triple featuring would be discontinued in RKO Brooklyn theatres on June 12.

Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, this week joined the campaign. O'Reilly has already engaged in several conferences with executives of affiliated theatres.

New Allied Unit Elects Officers

The Allied Theatre Owners of New York, newly formed independent unit in the state, have elected A. M. Beck of the Liberty theatre, Liberty, president, at a meeting of 60 owners at the Hotel Washington, Newburg.

Other officers elected were: vice president, Abe Stone, Albany; secretary, Frank V. Walsh, Newburg; treasurer, Chester Disbury, Walden. Sidney Samuelson, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and vice president of the national organization, M. Charnow, secretary and James Binkoff attended the session. Regular weekly meetings are expected to be held.

Kansas City Film Board Suit Continued to September Term

The suit of Walter O. Burkey against the Kansas City Film Board of Trade and 14 distributors in which he seeks $408,000 triple damages, has been continued to the September term of the federal court at Kansas City. When the case was called last week, attorneys for Mr. Burkey asked a continuance pleading their client was ill.

RKO proceeds on the premise that theatre managers will take care of the property entrusted to them just as they care for their own, and in this connection all operators are currently asked by the home office:

*During a week-end motor tour recently, within two hours' distance of Los Angeles—center of Pacific Coast civilization—Wallace Smith, novelist and scenarist, stopped at a small ranch house to inquire road directions and found a bit of life that enabled him to step into the distant past for an hour. No telephone, radio, gas, electricity, automobile or modern fixtures or conveniences of any kind were present. Water was drawn from a well in a bucket that was really moss covered. Candles were used for illumination and they were the real article of old fashioned tallow. All cooking was done with pot and crane and a spit in a huge fireplace. At this post during the month of July we will train about 1,000 boys of high school age in the Citizens' Military Training Camp. During that period we plan to show free of charge sound pictures each evening.

Knowing your interest in American youth, I am wondering if you would suggest about 30 pictures of high moral tone and alive with romance, adventure and historical work. Your suggestions will aid considerably in wisely selecting the pictures for this fine group of boys this summer.

Reply of the editor of Time Magazine to Chaplain Rogers:

In the last year and a half cinemanufacturers have not produced 30 pictures of "high moral tone and alive with romance, adventure and historical worth." # WARNER BROS. FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and subsidiary companies, report a net loss for the six months ended February 27, 1932, of $2,769,183.69 after all charges, including depreciation and interest and after allowing for a profit of $2,498,515.37 arising from the retirement of Debentures and Subsidiaries' funded indebtedness.

The net loss from operations, before amortization and depreciation of properties, was $570,129.96. Amortization and depreciation charges totaled $4,697,569.10.

During the six months the company charged to Surplus a net loss of $72,443.98 on capital assets and $1,887,578.39 representing special write down of sundry properties.

At February 27, 1932, the balance sheet, which does not include Skouras Bros. Enterprises, Inc., and St. Louis Amusement Company and their subsidiaries, shows current assets amounting to $20,329,463.62, as compared with current liabilities of $12,590,106.19.

While the company sustained a loss from operations during the six months period, yet, owing to the large amortization and depreciation charges and the replacement of film inventory at lower cost, the cash position was improved and indebtedness reduced. Cash on hand on February 27, 1932, amounted to $4,047,253.80, as compared with $3,767,087.88 at August 29, 1931—an increase of $280,165.92, while notes payable amounted to $1,306,525.43, compared with $2,376,693.59 at August 29, 1931—a decrease of $1,070,168.16.

World Wide Buys 12 Stories in May

World Wide Pictures, Inc., led the list of story purchasers in May with the acquisition of screen rights to 12 story properties. Negotiations for additional purchases are underway, World Wide announces. Among the stories purchased in the month are well-known published books and several originals by noted authors.

The general total of May story purchases was considerably below that of several months immediately preceding, due to the windup of production activities on current programs. For the first time in months, stage plays took an insignificant place in the purchase of production material, only three plays being included in the 20 purchases made during May.

Following is the list of May story acquisitions:

World Wide Pictures, Inc.: "Rosalie's Career," novel by Faith Baldwin; "Uptown Woman," novel by Vina Delmar; "Death Kiss," novel by Madelon St. Denis; "Tempest and Sunshine," novel by Mary J. Holmes; "Study in Scarlet," story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; "Quicksands," story by Rex Beach; "The Devil's Highway," novel by Harold Bell Wright; "Lover of Mine," novel by Sada Cowan; "Snake Bite," story by Robert Hichens; "Confessions of a Bachelor," story by Ursula Parrott; "Where Lonely Ladies Walk," original story by Tiffany Thayer, and "My Son," stage play by Martha Stanley.

Universal: "Prancing Mothers," story by Morton Barteaux.

Columbia: "Mike," story by Sidney Skolsky.

Paramount: "Suburb," novel by Vera Caspary; "Single Night," story by Louis Bromfield, and "No. 55," novel by Louis Bromfield. (Screen rights to the latter were owned by Universal Pictures, from whom they were purchased by Paramount.)

MGM: "The Education of a Princess," novel by Marie, Grand Duchess of Russia; "La Tendresse," play by Henry Bataille, and "Felix," play by Henry Bernstein.

Warner Brothers: "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," story by Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

First Division Distributes Charity Wrestling Bout Film

First Division Exchanges, Inc., will distribute the all-sound pictures of the charity wrestling bout in New York this week, which is being sponsored by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, and the proceeds of which will be donated to the Charity Milk Fund which she directs.

Prints will be available after June 10 at First Division exchange in Albany, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh.

Hammons Increases Comedy Series; Advances Release

Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational, has shifted the release dates for the C. C. Burr "Torchy" comedy series, and has increased the second group to eight.

Production will start on June 15 instead of July 15, as previously planned. A new leading woman is being sought for the comedies.

Drops Children's Club

Loew's State, New Orleans, has announced that it will suspend activity of the Birthday Club indefinitely. The club was organized two years ago, and has functioned every Saturday since. More than 5,000 New Orleans children under 12 years were enrolled.

Film Group Asks Dry Law Change

A resolution endorsing modification of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer was passed by a committee of motion picture executives at a meeting sponsored by the League for Modification of the Volstead Act, held in the Park Central hotel, New York, this week.

The resolution asked for the installation of some system of liquor control, and put the motion picture committee on record as being opposed to the return of the saloon. It also set forth the belief that the revenue to be obtained from taxation of wine and beer sales would lighten the tax burden of the motion picture and theatre industries.

Julius Singer of Universal Pictures was chairman of the meeting. Serving on his committee are: Joseph Hart, Morgan Lithograph Company; George Morris, Motion Picture Club of New York; Samuel Liggett, Columbia Pictures; M. A. Van Praag, National Screen Service; Mark Luescher, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, and Ralph Poucher, Consolidated Film Laboratories.

Louis B. Mayer, of M-G-M, favors the return of beer, he told Universal News Service, while on a visit to President Hoover in Washington recently. "I feel that beer would have saved the budget situation had we had the revenue from its sale several months ago," he said.

Universal Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend of 25%

Universal Pictures Company, Inc., has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 25 per cent on the preferred stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record on June 24.

Cuts Accepted by Projectionists of Three City Unions

While projectionists' unions in Cleveland, Columbus and San Francisco have accepted wage reduction for varying periods at the request of theatre owners, Detroit's Local 199 has received an ultimatum that its members must accept a 20 per cent cut by June 15 or Allied member exhibitors will commence the training of non-union projectionists.

In Cleveland, Local 160 has entered into an agreement with the Cleveland Exhibitors Association for a cut ranging from 17 to 22 per cent. Effective May 30, the agreement will be in force until August 31, 1933. The new scale ranges from $141.10 per week for two men at de luxe houses, to $83 per week for two men in houses seating less than 500.

The projectionists at Loew's Ohio, RKO Majestic and Neth's Grand, Columbus, have agreed to a wage reduction of $10. It is expected operators at the RKO Palace will fall into line as well. The revised scale brings the weekly wage down to $72. San Francisco operators have reached an agreement with Fox West Coast Theatres calling for a reduction of from five to 10 per cent, dependent upon the weekly earnings of individual projectionists. This agreement has been concurred in by Nasser Brothers, independent circuit, and follows a similar arrangement with RKO, Warner, United Artists. Reductions will be effective to September 1, 1933. Negotiations are under way with Golden State, T. & D. Junior Circuit and San Francisco Theatres, Inc., circuits comprising some 70 houses.

H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan Allied unit, was responsible for the communication to the Detroit union. The reduction requested would be effective until August 31, 1933.

Toronto Curious About Nathanson

Excited speculation, rife in Toronto, which has percolated to New York film circles, is to the effect that N. L. Nathanson, who resigned as managing director of Famous Players Canadian, may return to that circuit. The reports center about a reason for Mr. Nathanson having postponed his recent intended trip to England.

The executive resigned when an offer which he brought from England for purchase of the circuit by Gaumont British was refused. He has stated that he will not return to the company as an employee of Paramount. Toronto has become inquisitive over reports that Sir Richard Holt, Montreal financier and director of Famous Players Canadian who resigned with Mr. Nathanson, has offered to purchase the circuit. Discussions which Lord Beaverbrook, important British film figure, had last week with Prime Minister Bennett of Canada are said to figure in the reports.

Publix Realigns Personnel For the Chicago Territory

Publix has realigned personnel in Chicago, bringing Harry Lustgarten into the division under Milton Feld, with Carl Strodel assigned to special duties. The Chicago territory has been divided into three instead of four districts. District heads are Dave Wallerstein, Dave Balaban and Louis Newhafer.

Start Foreclosure Suit Against Roxy

The Continental Bank and Trust Company of New York, as successor trustee, has instituted foreclosure proceedings against the Roxy Theatres Corporation, under a $4,250,000 mortgage. The mortgage was made by the theatre corporation in return for a loan under date of October 22, 1925, the original trustee being Herbert S. Martin, now dead.

Named as co-defendants are Harry G. Kosch, recently appointed receiver in equity for the company by the United States district court, and "others." The action was brought through the firm of Wise, Shepard & Houghton, attorneys. The plaintiff alleges there are now due and unpaid installments of principal and interest of the mortgage amounting to $146,770.82 and that the corporation has failed to pay taxes of $62,980 for the first half of the year 1932. Still due on the principal of the mortgage, according to the plaintiff, is $3,690,000.

The formal notice to all employees of the Roxy theatre in New York that employment will terminate with the performance of June 16, has been described by Mr. Kosch, the temporary receiver of the Roxy Theatres Corporation, as conforming to the orders of the United States district court, and merely a matter of legal form.

Mr. Kosch stated that the notice was necessitated by the fact that his position as temporary receiver terminates June 16, and the legal requirement that such notice be issued under that circumstance.

Mr. Kosch's authority as temporary receiver for Roxy Theatres ends June 16. A permanent receiver is to be named by the court June 13, and if he is authorized to continue the theatre's business, he will be permitted to negotiate new contracts to keep the Roxy open.

Pictures Realization Company Files Petition in Bankruptcy

Pictures Realization Corporation, New York, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court for the southern district of New York through its attorneys, Keppler & Keppler. The firm was formed several months ago to take over Sono Art Productions, Inc. Various films are listed as of no probable value.

Total unsecured claims are listed as $508,876.50. These do not include priority claims of $6,442.62 for 1929 federal income tax and $2,831.38 for New York State income tax. The only assets listed as having any value are $1,126.35 in bank deposits, $1,000 on deposit with the MPPDA, and $100 worth of office furniture at 1600 Broadway.

Must Keep Up High Standard of Living, Aylesworth Urges

The popular failure to establish an approximate equilibrium between the forces of production and the forces of consumption is one of the most serious factors in the present world crisis, Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of RKO and the National Broadcasting Company, told the graduating class of Drake University, at Des Moines, Iowa, on Monday. Mr. Aylesworth was accorded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by the university.

Mr. Aylesworth said in part:

"We have made most satisfactory advances in that phenomenon which all over the world is hailed as made-in-America: mass production. Mass production, however, requires mass consumption. We have failed to keep the balance between mass production and mass consumption. This failure is one of the most important factors in the nation's unemployment crisis, today. . . .

"The chances of machine-displaced labor finding opportunities in other industries seems to be in more or less direct proportion to the degree that a rising mass standard of living can provide increasing mass wants. Today, however, you find many of our citizens who are seriously counselling the advisability of deliberately lowering our standard of living as a cure of our economic ills. The vicious circle of unemployment, which results in lowered standards of living, which in turn causes more unemployment and renewed lowering of the standard of living is already operative.

"Let us not accelerate this vicious circle. Let us try to maintain the high standard of living which through our scientific industrial advances, America has earned. Let us at least try to the point that the effort proves that we are not entitled to it. . . .

Educational Plans 3 Sales Meetings

The sales organization of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., and World Wide Pictures, Inc., headed by the executives of both companies, will hold three sales meetings, starting with a two-day session in New York, June 20 and 21. The second meeting will be held in Chicago on June 23 and 24, and the third in Los Angeles, June 26 and 27.

Delegation Kills State Tax Measure

A delegation of 50 New Jersey theatre owners, headed by Sidney Samuelson, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, succeeded this week in killing a proposed admission tax, providing for a one cent tax on admissions up to 25 cents and two cents on admissions over 25 cents.

The owners met in Trenton at a hearing held by the Senate committee on taxation, where the measure was killed.

Arbitration Takes Dominant Place as Paper Trial Opens

The $1,000,000 anti-trust action, brought by Nick Paper and the Sun Amusement Company against various national distributors, went to trial on Monday before a jury in federal court at Lincoln, Nebraska, with arbitration, as it existed prior to being outlawed by the United States Supreme Court, appearing as the dominant issue of the case.

Whether the Sun theatre was forced out of business in April, 1929, through the operation of the now invalid arbitration clause in the standard exhibition contract or whether Paper, owner of the theatre, voluntarily sold out to his competitors was a chief issue of the first day's sessions.

Most of the day was consumed in reading to the jury the proceedings in the Paramount case in which the Supreme Court declared the arbitration clause illegal under the anti-trust laws. This decision will be used as prima facie evidence against distributors.

In his opening statement to the jury, Max V. Beghtol, Paper's attorney, charged the exhibitor was forced to give up the Sun because he was unable and unwilling to meet a $7,500 award made by the arbitration board of the Omaha Film Board to Universal. The claim developed, the lawyer stated, when delayed arrival of new sound equipment in April, 1929, made it possible for Paper to play "Show Boat" on its booked date for the Capitol in Lincoln, likewise owned by the same exhibitor. The award was made against both the Capitol and the Sun, in spite of the fact that they were owned by two distinct corporations. Arthur F. Mullen, defense counsel, exhibited to the jury a written contract between Paper and John Cooper, president of the Lincoln Theatre Corporation, executed a few days before the arbitration board award. The contract provided for the leasing of the Sun and Capitol to the Lincoln Theatre Corporation and stipulated that Paper was to be employed as manager of these two theatres and two others owned by Cooper, in Lincoln. Cooper is identified with Publix.

Paper has filed another suit for triple damages, totalling $2,500,000 for the Capitol, but this case will not come up at this term of the court.

Express Rate Drop Will Be Continued

Representatives of the Railway Express Agency and Southeastern Express Company have given definite assurance to James H. Butner, Educational Atlanta branch manager, that the reduction on express rates on films returned to exchanges in the southeast will be extended to September 30, 1932.

The reduction was made to meet truck competition, but it has not as yet been decided that it will be made permanent. The reduction, effective January 5, was to have run until July 1. Exhibitors affected by the lower rates include those served by exchanges in Atlanta, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Memphis, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Washington and Charlotte.

ROTHAFEL HOME WITH INSTITUTIONAL IDEAS

More Than Ever Convinced on Policies for Radio City; Says Europe Excels in Lavish Productions for the Stage

By SHERWIN KANE

An old doctrine of S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel, which he has expounded and reiterated year after year for more years than even he can count, is: "To be a success, your theatre must be an institution."

That is just what Roxy proposes to do with his new Radio City theatrical charges. To aid him in so doing, he led a little junket of RKO officials into the capitals of European theatricals, from which he is just returned. The junket, it now appears, was not particularly fruitful in the way of supplying Mr. Rothafel with spectacular new endowments; but it did fortify and regenerate those endowments which he has already demonstrated, in this way and that, are native to himself. Above all, it served to reinforce his conviction that "the theatre must be an institution."

European Theatre an Institution

"Europe," Mr. Rothafel pronounced, "knows the value of making the theatre an institution. The records abroad of years of unbroken theatrical success in their most famous theatres are founded on that idea. If we look at our own record, here at home, we have the same thing demonstrated."

"What is the outstanding theatre success in America today?" he asked, and supplied the answer: "The New York Theatre Guild, of course. It is essentially an institution. We have the same thing in the earlier theatre. Frohman was a success, and Frohman was an institution. Before Frohman we had. . . ." He paused.

"Augustin Daly," supplied Martin Beck, who sat nearby.

"Augustin Daly," repeated Mr. Rothafel. Then glancing at his companion, he added: "And Martin Beck made a successful institution of Orpheum."

"And so did Keith," remarked Mr. Beck, who is now in charge of RKO vaudeville. Mr. Beck also was a member of the Roxy junket to Europe, on which he looked upon much European theatrical talent, yet signed but little.

However, no mention was made of New York's Roxy theatre, which certainly was on its way, if it had not already arrived, to becoming something of an institution when the intriguing prospects of the more expansive Radio City enterprise lured Roxy into RKO.

Something of this may have been in Mr. Rothafel's mind at the moment. His gaze wandered about the luxuriousness of his ample offices on the eighth floor of the Palace Theatre building. He may have found them faintly reminiscent of the fittings and amplitude of the famous theatre, three blocks farther up Seventh Avenue, which still bears his name and in the comparatively few years of its existence has come to be more than a national synonym for the near-ultimate in theatre appointments.

"Radio City's theatres will be institutions," he declared, then added: "and so will everything else within my authority be conducted according to that doctrine."

More Lavish Stage Productions

Aside from this firmer conviction in this professional doctrine of his, and a few production ideas and European performers, the Old World had little to contribute to the Roxy junket.

"I had several ideas while abroad, yes," he said. "But they were not necessarily inspired by anything I saw or heard while there. They might have occurred to me here in my office if I had the opportunity to relax and search for them. We lined up some players of great ability and some acts of worthwhile novelty, but they can't be announced yet. It might complicate matters when the contracts are made up.

"Europe," he continued, "hasn't much of importance to contribute to us. Certainly, they can teach us nothing of showmanship. However, there are certain things we can exchange with them; that they can give us and we can give them. I believe their stage talent to be more finished, more polished than ours. They have greater traditions behind them. Again, they excel us in certain forms of lavishness, in large scale, elaborate stage productions, such as may be found in the production of 'Casanova' on the Continent. It costs so much less to produce spectacles of that kind abroad than it would here. The cost in New York would make it prohibitive to duplicate that type of production except—" and here he gave an intimation of the type of entertainment one may expect to find in the theatres of Radio City—"except in that paradoxical type of theatre that is intimate in spite of immense seating capacity. Radio City will be able to duplicate those productions."

Deeply bronzed from his early summer peregrinations, Roxy is colored as deeply with enthusiasm for his new undertaking, and has about him the unconcealed joy of a habitual conqueror standing again at the familiar threshold of a rich, new world.

Paramount Plans Sales, Date Drive

Paramount plans to launch a combined sales and playdate drive, beginning July 1, in which all departments are expected to cooperate. George Schaefer, general sales manager, has completed arrangements, the drive to be unprecedented in scope in the company's history.

Herman Wobber is in New York to actively direct the campaign, which will be initiated with a series of regional meetings, designed to map preliminary work, attended by representatives of sales and theatre departments. Team captains for the departments have been appointed in the various territories of the country.

YOUR PUBLIC

by
RITA C. McGOLDRICK

Chicago Better Films Council

THE most important reaction in the past year among public groups interested in the development of the motion picture has come to us from Chicago. That pivotal city has had its own internal motion picture furores, revolving about censorship. Inconsistencies, uproar, unpleasant publicity, expensive rebukes for the producers have marked the stormy way to better films in Chicago.

But gradually, out of this travail, the Better Films Council of Chicago has been born. The organized club women, with a new understanding of the problems that beset the producer and exhibitor, have gathered together in an enlarged group known as the Chicago Better Films Council, sponsored by the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. This group, made up of more than 500 club chairmen working directly under twenty-three district chairmen, have undertaken to carry out the constructive plan of the General Federation in standing solidly behind those productions worthy of concerted support. Their policy and clearly outlined plan is to work with and not against the theatre man. They are pledged to do a box office business for endorsed pictures. Their publicity for worthwhile pictures is practically nationwide in scope. In their report they list nine major broadcasts on good pictures playing currently in Chicago. Newspaper and club notices are designed to build up larger and better audiences for the type of production for which the General Federation of Women's Clubs stands.

Difficult Censorship Problem

All of this has its own backwash on the difficult problem of censorship as it has presented itself in Chicago. Theatre managers, Film Board executives, representatives of the great producing companies, have all swung into cooperative action with this new forward looking movement. All are agreed that here is a possible loophole of escape from the autocratic hurtful supervision of the motion picture with which Chicago has been harnessed for too long.

The clubs, representing in their membership hundreds of thousands of intelligent and thoughtful women, have set upon this new task with a full cognizance of its responsibilities. Their annual report says, among other things:

"We have endeavored to place the name of every club woman in Illinois upon the mailing list for the General Federation monthly list of endorsed pictures, which comes to each one without cost and which is a definite guide in the selection of motion pictures which the family should see. We are not able to present to you the exact figures in total but it runs into many thousands. One chairman in this territory reports, for instance, that 500 names were sent in from her district. Our reports further tell us that many theatre men have asked to be placed on our mailing list and that many ministers are using it for announcements. Girl and Boy Scout leaders have been asked to make use of our list through their memberships. Parent-Teacher groups are using it actively.

Nine Broadcasts This Year

"We ask for further publicity for better pictures—particularly for chairmen to make weekly announcements of the better pictures showing in their immediate vicinities. Neighborhood newspapers have been generous in their free announcements of our plan. We thank them—and wish to encourage them.

"The Council is pleased to report that it has had nine broadcasts this year. Requests following these talks for information and preview lists have indicated clearly that the public is interested and beginning to seek definite information on better pictures.

"Chairmen tell me that they have filled nearly one hundred speaking engagements this year, each address made before an important club group. We cannot place too much emphasis upon this fact—your district chairmen have detailed information on this fact and this organization should hear more about it! Your state chairman made 42 talks before clubs, district conventions, church and parent groups. Once she appeared before a motion picture theatre owners association to protest the double feature policy. Our organization is opposed to the double feature policy and we are convinced that as long as this practice continues it will be impossible for any one of us to build up the desired well balanced, high type motion picture program. For motion picture entertainment is like the good menu—it must be healthfully and well balanced.

"Through the whole-hearted cooperation of chairmen and theatre men we have learned of many instances of theatres willing to work with us in securing better films for family nights and junior shows. Entire programs have been changed when the manager was asked to do so because of the nature of his feature film. Advertising policies have been changed to better fit the community standard. Theatre managers have invited our members to help them plan their Kiddie Klub programs; we urge our members to advance this particular work. Be on the job in your community to organize children's clubs to select suitable entertainment for them, and to act as hostesses for their particular shows.

"It has been the pleasure of this department to recommend certain outstanding pictures and through the courtesy of the distributor to send these recommendations to every club in the state. The pictures so recommended were: 'Arrowsmith'; 'Broken Lullaby'; 'The Man Who Played God', and 'Explorers of the World.' Yesterday, as part of our conference, chairmen were taken to a preview of a new picture, which will be released shortly under the title 'Hell's House.' The house, in this instance, is a boy's reformatory. Your soul will be torn by its stirring message.

"Let us remember that the leaders in every community—and you are those leaders—set the example in motion picture appreciation and attendance. Do not try simply to see more pictures, but promise yourselves never to miss the best ones! Remember that each time you pay your admission fee that you are not only telling your theatre manager your preference in movies but that your money is assisting the men in Hollywood to continue making the same type of picture. Yes, your admission fee, your ticket, is in fact 'your ballot for better pictures.'"

This, in more words than this brief resume contains, is the message to Chicago.

Rita McGoldrick's Work Is Praised In Radio Address

In a recent broadcast over WFOX, a Brooklyn station, Harold Davis Emerson, Ph.D., of Columbia Pictures, made the following tribute to Rita C. McGoldrick, the editor of School and Screen, The Juvenile Show and Your Public, departments for MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Devoting his entire talk to the accomplishments of the department, he said:

"While I have always appreciated her activities I never fully realized the extent of her achievements until recently. Lately I saw her preside at a meeting in which she outlined the aims and ideals for which she is working. Then I realized why Mrs. McGoldrick is regarded as the angel of the motion picture industry.

"I recently heard her define a family audience picture—a subject over which there has been much debate and difference of opinion, without anybody giving a concrete definition. Mrs. McGoldrick described it as a film which presents clean, American life as it is actually lived and which is typical of our day and age—a film that will inspire Youth—and make better citizens.

"She believes that there are two distinct audiences—a juvenile and an adult group, and each requires a different form of entertainment. In short she is against making morons out of the matured; neither would she give beefsteak and caviar to a new-born babe.

"Her committee is alert and active, and is frequently instrumental in correcting evils within 24 hours without resorting to censorship or other objectionable methods. Mrs. McGoldrick always appeals to reason, argues her case soundly and convincingly and through so doing accomplishes great results."

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Week Ends Only

(Fox)

Romantic Drama

While some critics may say that this picture is not as strong as it might be, nevertheless it is better than fair entertainment. True, there is nothing great about it and the theme is somewhat hackneyed, yet played as a program picture with a strong campaign directed at the feminine contingent of your patronage, it should do fairly well.

Briefly, the story is that of a young society girl whose father dies after losing all his money. She gets a job as a hostess in a classy night club run by the family's former butler. As a sideline, for a consideration, she is also a week-end house-party hostess. She helps a struggling young artist, who has fallen in love with her. She is the model for a painting that he is to enter in an exhibit. He thinks she is the acme of perfection until, summoned to the home of a patron, he finds her in a rather embarrassing situation. But irate as he is, all is forgiven—when he finds that this is the means she has of getting extra money which she has given him.

"Audience value" must be founded on two things—romance and personalities. It should appeal strongly to the women, therefore use every means at your disposal to intrigue their curiosity.

Combining the title with the names of Joan Bennett, Ben Lyon, John Halliday and Halliwell Hobbes, the first three of whom are particular favorites of the fair sex, looks to be the best way of approaching the selling idea. Catchy copy can be written to tag on to the title as "Week Ends Only," "she was a different girl—for when others sought her love, she kept her love for her sweetheart alone." "Week Ends Only—she disappeared. She said she was visiting her aunt; but oh, what a place in which he found her."

Avoid making any comparisons between Constance and Joan Bennett and the temptation to do so. Concentrate on Ben Lyon and John Halliday. And those who know Halliwell Hobbes should come out to see him if you let them know that in this picture he has one of his best roles.

Exploitation possibilities open the door wide to all kinds of merchant contacts with the title used for the basis. There are possibilities for travel, women's wear and accessory tieups, beauty shops, drug stores and all the way down the line.

You will have to work on this picture. It must be sold as clever entertainment with a surprise climax that is entirely unexpected. Keep as far away from sophistication as you possibly can. But try to get across the idea that it is the story of a girl that every girl in the world would like to live.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Directed by Alan Crosland. From the novel by Warner Fabian. Screen play and dialogue by William Conselman. Cameraman, Hal Mohr. Sound, Eugene Grossman. Release date, June 19, 1932. Running time, 70 minutes.

THE concept of this department is that the exhibitor is concerned not with any critic's idea of "how good?" or "how poor?" but rather with the question of precisely what the product is and what is to be done with it when and as it is played. The exhibitor, in general, is concerned with the special aspects of strength and of weakness in the product, its appeals and shortcomings, that he may adequately deal with it when he becomes its sponsor to his public. These "review" pages aim to aid the exhibitor as the retailer of the merchandise concerned.—THE EDITOR.

As You Desire Me

(MGM)

Drama

There can be little doubt that this is the finest picture ever made with Garbo. When hard-boiled critics (not including me) forget they are critics and go into raves, that's sumpin', and in this picture we can easily understand why they were thus afflicted. Garbo, yeah, and all the other members of that swell cast dish out performances that can be described only as "superb."

We are informed that the film version differed from the stage play in respect to the film having a happy ending. Not having seen the play, I cannot make a definite comparison; but I can say that as the picture now stands it leaves little or nothing to be desired.

The title, as in all Garbo pictures, is not of the greatest importance since it is assumed that she must be the bigger draw. Even the tank-towns sell Greta above the title—proving that tank-towns have acquired a show-sense equal to their big-city brethren. So in analyzing the possibilities of this picture we can safely say that Garbo plus this particular title should be a sure-fire box office in every house. Added to the star and title are the additional marquee names such as Melvyn Douglas, Owen Moore and Erich von Stroheim.

The audience value of this picture unquestionably exceeds even its remarkably strong box office pulling powers. The story, the acting and the direction all tend to hold you tightly in their grasp until the final fadeout. And Garbo! At times she is simply exquisite, especially when she dons that gown of 10 years ago. When she does, she's as sweet as any ingenue on the screen today. And that platinum blonde wig at the start of the picture plus the gowns will leave the ladies in your audience gasping for breath.

In this picture she shows her ability to build up humorous situations, and then in her drunk scenes she still further emphasizes her ability as one of the greatest players in years.

We must say that there can be little doubt but that Garbo has climbed higher with each picture. "As You Desire Me" tops anything she has ever given the screen and will long be remembered as one of the grandest contributions to the screens.

Setting forth selling angles for a Garbo picture seems futile. Perhaps we should just say that you ought to lay out your advertising campaign to equal the greatness of the attraction itself. Do not surround it with any sort of cheap stunts or ballyhoo gags. That would be a crime for a picture like this. Just see that your entire drawing population is well aware of the fact that you are playing this picture.—Lewis.

Doctor X

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

Write your own ticket on this one. Sell it with the right kind of showmanship and you have a picture whose box office grosses should parallel "Frankenstein" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Manhandle it by simply shouting that it's a "super-thriller" and you'll probably be disappointed. Made six or eight months ago, "Doctor X" would be the picture that upset the entire industry. That's your best cue to its power and box office possibilities.

It's all in Technicolor. It comes under the "thriller" heading, all right, but mainly because of the expert work of Lee Tracy, as the never-say-quit reporter. It's almost a comedy. It will alternately chill your patrons until their nerves are tense and tumble them into the aisles with howling glee.

Here's the story in brief. There has been a series of murders. All happen when the moon is full. Hidden in a morgue as a "stiff," Lee hears the cops tell "Doctor Xavier" (Lionel Atwill), who is a sort of medical examiner as well as the head of a scientific research laboratory, that they suspect someone connected with his establishment of the crimes. The doctor doesn't want any publicity, scoffs at the idea, and asks for 48 hours to test out some new fangled theories which will establish the guilty party. There's plenty of terror and comedy right at the opening. Lee bursts into the doctor's academy, but is discovered by Joan, the doctor's daughter (Fay Wray). Enter the romance and more comedy as Lee goes for her in a big way.

The test is transferred to the doctor's summer home, away from all civilization. Lee breaks in there. And there's more comedy, supplied by him, Mamie, the maid (Leila Bennett) and Otto, the butler (George Roesner). Your audiences should howl when Lee hides himself away in the closet with all the skeletons and does queer tricks with them.

The doctor puts on his experiment amidst a maze of scientific paraphernalia. The murders are re-enacted. And while there are thrills, there are laughs, from Mamie and Otto. During the test another man is murdered. There's your mystery. Someone in the room did it, but who?

Another experiment is tried with Fay Wray the plant. Lee, in the closet, in the meantime, has been overcome by some sort of noxious gas. You see the eye of the person who did it but that is all. To prevent any recurrence of the crime, Dr. X has handcuffed to their chairs all his confreres but one—a one-armed man (Preston Foster) who could not have done the killing. He is sent outside to work the mechanism. Then the thrilling climax. The one-armed man grafts a new hand on his withered arm, changes his appearance a la Dr. Jekyll. The moon is full and Fay is there—a readymade victim. But Lee jumps out of the closet, goes to the mat with the demon and puts up a terrific fight that is thrilling and comic in turn, climaxing it by flinging a lighted oil lamp at the monster and throwing his blazing body out through a window to the rock far below. Of course, he's Fay's hero. And has he a newspaper story!

The acting is great with every member of the cast jumping into the spirit of the picture and turning in a sterling performance. The picture is loaded with all kinds of smash selling angles. Promise your patrons a marvelous "laugh thriller" and you ought to pack 'em in.

"Audience appeal" is great, for the reasons outlined above. The picture can be played in any theatre, anywhere, anytime—and the exhibitor who doesn't clean up with it will have no one to blame but himself.

Make your selling appeal as vivid as you possibly can. Bring out the idea that they will laugh till they cry and that they will be thrilled as they never have been before. Emphasize the Technicolor. Don't go in for that foolish line of having nurses in attendance and don't advise anyone to stay away if he has a weak heart. If you can get hold of some fantastic scientific equipment, exhibit it in your lobby or foyer, and don't forget you can work out all kinds of gags on the mystery basis: who was the "moon killer"?—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by First National. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Based on a play by Howard W. Comstock and Allen C. Miller. Adaptation and dialogue by Robert Tasker and Earl Baldwin. Art director, Anton Grot. Photographer, Ray Ranahan. Release date, July 9, 1932. Running time, 80 minutes.

Week-End Marriage

(First National)

Drama

In the nature of a problem play, concerning itself with the dangers and possible disasters of the modern youthful marriage wherein the wife works as well as the husband, this adaptation of the Faith Baldwin novel is simple in story and treatment, satisfactory in performance, and sufficiently universal in theme to provide satisfactory entertainment, without being in any respect unusual.

Treating as it does of the very real problem of the young couple, when the husband is overproud and the wife insistent upon retaining her position, the title is in a sense misleading. The implication that there is something spicy and modernly sophisticated about the picture is a mistake. It would be well to indicate in exploitation that there is nothing in the story to which the most strict community-welfare guardian could have the slightest objection. The story is clean-cut, as is the treatment. Loretta Young offers a fine performance as the young wife, and is ably seconded by Norman Foster as her husband. The support is strong; there are no casting weak spots. Vivienne Osborne may be emphasized; she plays well, but her part is small. Aline MacMahon, former stage player, as the sister-in-law who engineers the marriage, is effective in her portrayal, presents her dialogue amusingly, supplies what little comedy lies in the opening reels, but is probably unknown to the screen audience. "Good" names are scattered through the cast, but their owners carry only minor roles.

Offer this picture for what it is. Sell it as a clean, straightforward screen story. Make whatever use of the Faith Baldwin story origin which may be effective in the particular community, arranging possible tie-ups with the novel. This is straight drama, possessing thematic backbone. It may be played any time during the week, but the youngsters will have no interest in it whatsoever.—Aaronson.

Is My Face Red?

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

This picture is built around the hectic career of a sensation digging, key hole peeping tabloid newspaper columnist. It's timely, brilliant, packed to the hilt with dramatic suspense, through all of which runs a vein of satirical comedy. Picturing Bill Porter as a wise-cracking columnist to whom no news is too sacred to withhold from his eagerly read column, despised by those whom he writes about, hated by rival reporters, a menace to the great and near great who may become the victims of his stinging shafts—it's the first picture to offer an expose of how a super Walter Winchell gets his news, prints it and broadcasts it over the air.

The title is a tip-off as to the theme. Porter's items should cause anyone's face to turn red. That title, plus a hint of the theme, together with the names Ricardo Cortez, Helen Twelvetrees, Robert Armstrong, Zasu Pitts, Arline Judge and Sidney Toler—should prove enough to lure patrons.

"Audience value" is exceptionally strong because the picture has just about everything in the way of elements that please all types of patrons. There's romance, drama, comedy, suspense, action, novelty and it's loaded with colorful characterizations. Outstanding among its features are its revelations of all the inside workings of a champion dirt digger on his tour of a great city in search of something that somebody doesn't want printed.

It's a different kind of a newspaper story, inasmuch as a personality, Bill Porter, not an institution, is the central character. It's new and original, treating a subject in which the interest is intense and nationwide. Just capitalizing on the fact that it is an exposure of a dynamiting columnist who airs his news in print as well as over the radio should insure readymade audiences.

You can do all sorts of things with the title. It's a natural for a teaser and its tieup and gag possibilities are unlimited. Play up the drama. Play up the element of the unexpected. Ask the questions: "Is your Face Red?" "Have you any secret in your life that you would guard to the limit?"

Convince your patrons that "Is My Face Red?" is new, novel and sensational entertainment and you should clean up. It is essentially an adult picture and not recommended for children's shows.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Forgotten Commandments

(Paramount)

Drama

It is sad but true to relate that the only redeeming features to this picture are the scenes taken from the original Cecil B. McMille's "Ten Commandments." These scenes unquestionably give the production the only real sustaining interest it possesses.

Sari Maritza will be headed for disaster in this country if she is assigned to such parts as they handed her for her initial American appearance before a camera. Fortunately for her, an opposition Broadway house features her in a Ufa picture, "Monte Carlo Madness," in which the New York fans are afforded an opportunity to observe her at her true worth. She is pretty, capable and pleasing in the foreign-made picture, but in "Forgotten Commandments" she is none of these at all.

The title can be built up to some proportions for your box office. It has a certain appeal for certain classes. Names to support the title include Miss Maritza, Irving Pichel, Gene Raymond, Marguerite Churchill and Harry Beresford. They all contribute forceful performances in what might be called a futile effort to make something out of nothing.

Audience angle is minus. Take away the stirring scenes from "The Ten Commandments" and you have little.

NG for kids or Sundays. Play safe and sell it as you feel is safest in your community. See the picture first and pick out the slants best adaptable for your class of patronage.—Lewis.

Jewel Robbery

(Warner)

Melodrama

The old "melodrama" is portrayed by a splendid cast, photographed in lavishly beautiful and modernistic settings, with Kay Francis more of a fashion model than ever before and William Powell as suave as in his finest performances—still it's ten, twenty and thirty melo. And there's a market for that, too.

The story, which is shallow and altogether unbelievable, is made more or less entertaining by the fine acting of Kay Francis and William Powell, with the rest of the cast, particularly Allan Mowbray, Hardie Albright and Spencer Charter turning in good performances. It concerns a fashionably aristocratic Viennese lady, who is bored with all the foibles of wealth and social position. But in a classy jewelry shop she and her party fall victims to a high-powered gem thief. She falls head over heels in love with the big shot thief, and he in turn becomes more than interested in this unexpected gem. The gang loots the shop in a decidedly workmanship fashion. But before letting the girl go, the thief makes a date with her. He visits her in her villa and the romance waxes warm. Through a ruse he lures her to his own apartment, where, it seems, he has collected all the jewels he has ever stolen. Maybe it's because he can't sell 'em that he keeps 'em. But the police have tracked him to his lair. The thief escapes by means of all sorts of trap doors and wild scrambles over roof tops, but not before he has made an engagement to meet the girl in Nice.

You can best sell this by not being too serious. Probably it will be best to capitalize on the name of Kay Francis for all it's worth and that's plenty. Likewise, remind your patrons that Mr. "High Pressure" William Powell is in town again.

"Audience values" lie in the audacity with which this master works in sacking a shop and in capturing the heart of a very willing girl. There is lavishness, that makes "Jewel Robbery" a good-looking picture, but don't mix that with sophistication. Likewise there is a vein of comedy in which all participate that almost tops every other angle.

The title notwithstanding, there is no mystery about the picture. Every one knows just what is going on right from the start. A strong campaign will be necessary to achieve the best results. As mentioned before, Francis and Powell are your aces in the hole. Shout "Kay" to the men folk and the good-looking, slick Powell to the women. The picture can also be sold as family entertainment as there is nothing in it that will create objections.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Liebe ist Liebe

Love Is Love

(Ufa)

Musical Romance

To an exhibitor who has a clientele sizeably interested in the German musical comedy type of motion picture here is a likeable production. More than that, Erich Pommer, supervisor, well known to Americans for his directing ability, has made good use of the German artistry with the fadeout as well as other effects both mechanically and in theme and handling. This is achieved at the start in the staccato orchestral accompaniment to the din of ticker-typewriters of a telegraph office. The bizarre, so well liked by the German audience, is therefore much in evidence, and the musical bits, though perhaps not numbering in that more or less definite category of "hits," are carried through consistently and tellingly.

To the audience familiar with German productions and German stars, the names Hans Albers and Kaethe von Naby may mean considerable. Albers at times assumes the musical comedy swagger dear to the foreign stage, and Miss von Nagy is good to look upon. Julius Falkenstein, in the role of the American banker father of Miss von Nagy, knows his acting and achieves a comedy touch that is fetching.

The Ringer

(First Division)

Mystery

Lacking, perhaps, a large percentage of fast moving action, being a trifle doubtful for the regular American audience by reason of the truly English dialogue, occasionally somewhat unintelligible, this mystery of murder and an unknown criminal carries a large portion of suspense, a very definitely unsuspected culprit, and the name of Edgar Wallace, late author of many mysteries, as the origin of the piece.

The cast do their work well, but for name purposes, they are, of course, considerably useless. The box office draw will have to rely most heavily on the thriller angle, the mystery angle, and the Wallace name; secondarily on the title. There is enough in those four factors, however, to make them curious, and come to find out. The word "ringer" indicates a person acting under false pretenses. Play on the curiosity of the potential audience with that implication. One of the characters must be the "ringer." The "who" should pique the curiosity, particularly if you dare them to guess. Stress those features, avoid too much about the cast, about the fact that the film was made in England, by an English producer. The local bookstore should be valuable for tie-up arrangements.

Despite the fact that many of your audience may have some little difficulty following the dialogue, they will unquestionably be satisfactorily entertained. The film concerns Scotland Yard. Indicate that the treatment, the actors, the language is that of the real Scotland Yard, famed police headquarters, and they may be less disturbed by the accent.

This is not, however, a sufficiently brilliant piece of mystery melodrama to warrant the best playing time. It needs support in shorts, but will not fail either exhibitor or audience. Midweek is best, and there is no reason why the youngsters should not enjoy the mystery element.—Aaronson.

Westward Passage

(RKO Pathe)

Drama

Consideration of this Ann Harding vehicle, based on a novel by Margaret Ayer Barnes, must be based on the fact that there is comparatively little more than the star's name with which to work in selling it to the patrons with a fair measure of success.

The title must, necessarily, be considerably disregarded, since it falls into the class of meaningless names, but little borne out by the picture. Though it possesses a rather promising lilt, it in no way clearly implies the theme or treatment of the story. There is the Ann Harding name, of course, though it must be considered that her role is hardly one of wide appeal. Also, and unfortunately, her performance is to an extent weakened by reason of the fact that the part is not a happy one for the star. Laurence Olivier, playing the leading male role opposite, as the novelist who could not live with Miss Harding, his wife, without eternally bickering, has been confined to an unsympathetic role. Irving Pichel, who marries the divorced Miss Harding, offers his usual able characterization, and should be exploited since he will not disappoint. Zasu Pitts, in a minor role, does well with the comedy. The several other salable names in the cast have parts too inconspicuous to warrant large selling.

The story, of love, quarrel, divorce and reconciliation, serves finally to throw Miss Harding into an unsympathetic light, in that she deserts husband and child for Olivier. It is sophisticated in treatment, weak in definite thematic strength and suspensive story value, and cannot be considered as of very wide appeal. The potential patron will almost have to have a real "flair" for this type of story to be fully entertained by the film. Not of sufficient strength to warrant week-end booking, it is perhaps best played midweek. The children will find nothing enjoyable. It is wholly adult fare.

Monte Carlo Madness

(UFA—First Division)

Farce With Music

Sari Maritza is featured in two Times Square theatres at this writing. In one picture, described elsewhere in this section, she portrays an unsympathetic vamp and will hardly build up a following. The other attraction is this one, wherein she is given every opportunity to show her talent and ability, all of which she does in a swell fashion.

While it is a truth we cannot get away from, that foreign-made pictures, no matter how good they may be are difficult to put over profitably, and while it is also true that "Monte Carlo Madness" is far from an "epic," we must convey to you our opinion that it is darned good entertainment and a welcome relief from the big parade of tripe that seems to be coming without end from Hollywood.

"Monte Carlo Madness" is light, pleasing, musical, in the sense that it has some numbers that your audience will enjoy and hum for some time afterwards. It offers splendid performances by Miss Maritza and Hans Albers, and never for one moment overtaxes your imagination.

The title, unfortunately, is not so good because Monte Carlo has been "done to death" in various forms. So the name, combined with the foreign producing background, is too apt to be misunderstood and underestimated for its entertainment values, and that would be too bad because it does have those values.

Sell it along the lines most easy for your community to take—the light farce, the pleasing tunes, the queen who wanted a good time, the ship captain who fell in love with his queen, but didn't know it, the gambling casino background. If you could see the picture before you started to sell it you would never lack for merchandising ideas. It is chockful of them. Arrange for such a screening if you can. If not, get the press book and go through it carefully for ad suggestions, catch lines, synopsis and other valuable material all essential for showselling in the majority of towns.

No reason in the world why this picture should not turn in a good box office account, providing you, as the showman, get behind it with a fitting campaign to whet the appetites of your patrons for something different.

Not suitable for children and in smaller spots best played on other than Sundays.—Lewis.

The Midnight Lady

(Chesterfield)

Comedy-Drama

Not a lavish production, but it is nevertheless a good example of what can be done to make an entertaining picture on a budget. It carries all the elements that patrons, who don't consider themselves too smart, look for in pictures. There's drama and comedy aplenty. The entire cast likewise give natural and sincere performances.

The story concerns a young lady who becomes enmeshed in the filmy side of night club life. The usual scenes, showing her trying to be true to her real lover yet fascinated with one of the play boys, are very well done, with romance, deception, intrigue and jealousy all serving their proper function in a logical manner. The owner of the night club, a notorious woman, senses a bond of kinship, which introduces a smartly handled element that gives audiences the sense of suspense they are demanding so much today. While she is in the apartment of her clandestine lover, he is murdered. As she leaves the room, the night club queen enters and to save the girl she permits herself to be convicted of the murder. But after several highly dramatic scenes, the girl and her true lover uncover the real murderess.

For the class mentioned, audience values are particularly high. The picture is bound to hold sustained interest. Proper showmanship, taking advantage of all the elements that are in the picture, a clever, though somewhat common story, romance, drama, colorful sequences, comedy and exceedingly snappy dialogue, with plenty of stress placed on the names of Theodore Von Eltz, Sarah Padden, John Darrow, Claudia Dell, Lina Basquette and Montague Love, should boost your receipts on this picture several points above your average.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Chesterfield. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Story and adaptation by Edward T. Lowe. Sound, Pete Clark. Running time, 65 minutes.

They Never Come Back

(Artclass Pictures)

Drama

A melodramatic story, centering about the efforts of a prize fighter to retrieve his ring fame temporarily as a means toward clearing his name, squaring accounts with a night club owner who had framed him into prison, and bringing about happiness for his sister. This independently produced effort has two good sequences which are fast and furious, but a story which is not of very high caliber.

Best adapted to the subsequent-run situation, the film is only fair in box office strength and marquee name possibilities. Heading the cast is Regis Toomey, with Dorothy Sebastian opposite in the feminine lead. Where these names mean anything to the local audience, they should be emphasized; there is little else in the cast listing of draw value, except James J. (Jim) Jeffries, one-time heavyweight boxing champion, who appears in one of the fight sequences as the referee. The title can be played up to a certain extent, but not too forcibly, since the fight angle is rather a subordinate than a major factor in the plot development. Exploitation might well give the implication of the fighter who "came back" under necessity, to aid others rather than as a personal vindication.

The story is in a measure melodramatic, trite and elderly, yet it may well afford an hour of entertainment to audiences which do not demand too much. It would perhaps be well not to oversell this film and to surround it with reliable and diversified shorts. A midweek playdate is probably the best arrangement. The fight sequences might give the boys a thrill or two, but otherwise it is not a juvenile picture.—Aaronson.

White Face

(Gainsborough-British Lion)

Edgar Wallace Thriller

Just the right kind of Edgar Wallace material for the screen medium, this is directed by T. Hayes Hunter with a zeal which comes near to making it into too great an improbability. Every concession is made to the sensation-lover, realism and conviction in characterization taking second place. But the result is not disappointing, according to a London presentation which produced favorable reactions.

The story tells of a Dr. Marford, running a children's clinic in Tidal Basin, a London slum. He is called to assist in clearing up a murder case which forms the culmination of numerous criminal operations by a sinister hold-up man known to the police only as "White Face," because he wears a white mask when committing his crimes. There is a pleasant love interest between the doctor's young nurse-assistant (Renee Gadd) and Michael Seeley (Richard Bird), a young crime reporter, who finally helps run the criminal to earth.

Suspense values are a strong point, and the final reel when Doctor Marford himself is discovered to be the White Face creates genuine surprise. Just to keep matters active there are a number of jewel thefts, a good deal of crookedness and a murder or two before Marford is finally proved the murderer. Acting and general production technique is well up to average with photography just below the desired standard.—Mooring, London

A Man's Land

(Allied)

Western

Another of the new Hoot Gibsons. A Western that is plenty thrilling yet vastly different from the old type when the hero who was quick on the trigger was the accepted standard. Hoot has discarded his guns for keeps. He relies on the quickness of his brain and the strength of his arms to overcome his enemies. As such, it should have an appeal to those who are looking for less heroics and more naturalness in their "western" entertainment.

The youngsters likely will go for "A Man's Land" in a big way. And they should have the wholehearted cooperation of their mothers and dads who want their boys and girls to know the color and adventure of the West without the usual blood-curdling shooting affrays.

There's plenty of "audience value." Romance, adventure, comedy that is particularly fine, with just enough villainy and double-crossing to make an interesting story. The grownups who get a kick out of outdoor pictures will find plenty to please them. The plot is smart and well worked out, giving the leading characters—Hoot Gibson, Marion Shilling, Bill Robbins, Ethel Wales and Robert Ellis—a world of opportunity to put over good performances.

The picture is more than okay for houses that specialize in western entertainment, as well as being worthy of a spot on any program where the exhibitor is trying to give his patrons diversity in film fare. Saturday, of course, is the best day to show "A Man's Land." But with schools closing and every one making an intensive drive to maintain juvenile attendance, it can go any day in the week.

A good gag to procure additional publicity might be to contact newspaper editors and sell them the idea of treating editorially or in the news columns the new type of Westerns featuring Hoot Gibson, with Hoot in a sort of a Frank Merriwell character, also that the picture is good, wholesome entertainment, void of every displeasing feature that has brought many Westerns into disrepute.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Indiscretions Of Eve

(British International)

Musical Fantasy

Whatever else may be said of this picture it is certainly out of the regular run in point of directorial ideas. Cecil Lewis, who wrote the story and directed the picture, must have profited by a close friendship with George Bernard Shaw, for if story is the strong meat of the screen, this is a vegetarian picture. It is froth, but pleasant froth, with bubbles of amusement thick on top.

The inconsequential plot traces the love affairs of a young peer and a simple girl he meets at a cabaret show. The business starts with a big New Year's Eve ball, and when the crowd joins in singing "Auld Lang Syne" Lewis introduces some clever cuts showing famous pieces of London statuary descending from their marble bases to celebrate the passing of the old year. There is some effective cabaret stuff, and the whole film has speed; it has sex, too, though the display of anatomy is confined to very lifelike and realistic shop window "dummies." These suggest that dress designers must have realism even though it is usually covered up from the public gaze. There are one or two pleasing song numbers, a little dancing, and bright music throughout. It will get by as the finest bit of fun the British International people have risked.—MOORING, London.

Strangers of the Evening

(Tiffany)

Mystery-Farce

Tiffany has turned out a doggoned good mystery laugh-provoker of the kind that will be acceptable anywhere. The comedy is ofttimes spontaneous and will bring forth loud bursts of real oldtime bellylaughs of the sort we all love to hear.

The title may be a little misleading and should be sold so as to convey exactly what it is. Left alone, it is going to be taken for another of those "fallen women" stories, and that would spell b. o. suicide for most theatres. So be sure and tell them that you are going to play one of those mysteries which neither the audience nor the cast is expected to believe too seriously.

While names are plentiful to tie in with the title, they are not particularly strong and can count only when grouped together in something akin to a flashy front of names. There are so many we won't attempt to cite their performances individually. Look over the cast and judge for yourself which you want to push forward, keeping in mind, of course, that Lucien Littlefield and Zasu Pitts contribute no small quantity of the many laughs.

Audience value is swell. They will expect funny situations and will not be disappointed. Laughs come often and at the right moments. And—surprising as it may sound—there is a genuine mystery throughout the entire plot which actually mystifies. Believe it or not. So the interest is sustained all the way through.

OK anywhere you want to play it. Surround it with a good diversified program and you will be rounding out a fine evening's entertainment.—LEWIS.

SHORTS

Mexico

(Principal Distributing)

High Caliber

Usually high in audience value is this lengthy travelogue-type of subject, which moves through Mexico in a fashion comprehensive, interesting. A subtitle indicates the city or section of the moment, a minimum of dialogue, divided between a man and a woman, is helpfully enlightening, and a maximum of action, for the travel subject, is intelligently injected. Ably indicating the contrasting life of the vast country are scenes in modern Mexico City, ancient Yucatan. The once regal splendor of the kingdom of Montezuma, Aztec monarch, is pictorially implied with scenically excellent shots of the ruins of that ancient civilization. The original sources of chewing gum comes to light. Best defined as a long short subject, this is worthy of billing with any feature.—Running time, 43 minutes.

The Side Show Mystery

(Vitaphone)

Good Sketch

Another of the S. S. Van Dyne series of mystery shorts, with Donald Meek as the discerning criminologist and John Hamilton as the heavy-handed inspector of police. In this case the manager of a side show of freaks is found murdered in bed. Several are suspected, including the midget and the giant, the hypnotist, the knife thrower. Cleverly, logically Meek develops his clues. An interesting dramatic sketch, the short should have wide appeal.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Man-Eating Sharks

Holds the Interest

It is not necessary to be a deepsea fishing enthusiast to enjoy the Mack Sennett series, "Cannibals of the Deep." This fourth episode provides considerable action in landing sharks in the Gulf of California—the hammerhead, the whale shark, the horn shark, the man-eater and the blue shark. An extraneous shot of some interest is of a burning ship.—Running time, 8½ minutes.

It's Got Me Again

(Vitaphone)

Good Cartoon

Animatedly clever is this Merrie Melodies number, wherein the mice are having a great time on a varied assortment of musical instruments in the attic, until the cat suddenly appears among them. One mouse is cornered, about to be caught, when the mice, with those improvised weapons which only a cartoonist can concoct, put the cat to rout. Synchronized well, a song number is neatly injected.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Cod Liver Oil Preferred

(Ufa)

Unusual

Unusual in comedy idea is this German product, with German as the language. St. Peter, in a most amusingly artificial Heaven, hears from the earth the insistence of parents that their offspring take cod liver oil. He turns the great crank, and the parents and children exchange places. Amusing are the following scenes, with the parents ordered about by the diminutive but adult-dressed children. Fanciful, clever, the children will enjoy it, and parents be highly amused.—Running time, 22 minutes.

Athletic Daze

Olympic Sports

Pictured are the various and sundry activities in which athletes from every country will engage in the forthcoming Los Angeles meeting of the Olympic Games. Each is taken individually, with an indication of its history, its evolution to modern form. Contrasted are manner and method of past and present. In subject matter, camera work, the short is appealing, interesting, though it is to an extent injured by the alleged humor of the accompanying explanatory remarks.—Running time, 11 minutes.

RKO in a Contest Tieup with Hearst

RKO Theatres has completed a far-reaching newspaper tieup with papers of the Hearst group, in connection with the RKO Opportunity Contest, announced last week. The deal was negotiated by Harold B. Franklin, circuit head; Robert Sisk and Terry Turner for RKO.

The co-operative campaign has the approval of William Randolph Hearst, it is said. Jack Lait, Hearst writer, has been loaned to RKO for the production of a trailer describing the cooperative contest, which will be available to all theatres in Hearst cities. Numerous independent newspapers have also joined in the contest tieup. Publicity campaigns by individual theatres in the East have started this week, rehearsals will be held on June 4 and the Opportunity revues will be held on June 18. The central and western groups will open their contests in the same manner about one week later.

Police Honor Laemmle, Jr. After Seeing "Radio Patrol"

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has been elected an honorary member of the International Protective Order of Police, California organization, following a preview of Universal's "Radio Patrol" at the studio recently. The film concerns the use of the new radio-equipped police car.

Eugene H. Marcus, in a letter to Mr. Laemmle advising him of the election, said in part: "'Radio Patrol' is a picture which sounds the first constructive note in the problem of acquainting the American public with the policeman's story. Not only will it have a decidedly stimulating effect upon policemen, but it will also help to inculcate in the public a more sympathetic and cooperative spirit towards policemen in general."

Columbia Plans Additions To Its Exploitation Staff

Columbia plans the addition of 12 exploitation men to its staff, marking a return to a policy of field exploitation by the company. Each of the staff additions will be located in key exchanges.

One of the chief phases of the new work will be the extension of the Buck Jones Ranger Clubs, of which the company claims there are 600 in the country. The operation of the new plan has awaited the return of executives to the home office from Los Angeles, where they were attending the company sales meeting.

Pathe Claims Earhart Scoop

"A beat of more than nine hours on the Amelia Earhart arrival in Londonderry, Ireland, including a detailed description of the flight by the aviatrix herself, her takeoff for Croydon Airdrome and her reception in London" was claimed last week by Pathe News. "Complete prints and negatives were picked up by a speedboat from the Ile de France when she arrived at Quarantine and rushed back to New York for immediate distribution to every account," according to a statement from Pathe.

"COL. COLE SHOULD BE CONSISTENT"

—P. J. WOOD, M.P.T.O. OF OHIO

REPLIES "LITE" WOOD TO COLONEL COLE

To the Editor of Motion Picture Herald:

I am happy indeed that my "beer" letter afforded my good friend, Col. Cole of Texas, an opportunity to fill up half a column of your valuable publication. This is considerably more than you did for me and I, too, am a paid-up subscriber of your magazine.

I can visualize the Colonel writing his letter surrounded by embossed copies of the Volstead act, the tune of "The Star Spangled Banner," the waving of the stars and stripes and then:—"I want to go on record as stating that Mr. Wood does not speak for the theatres of the United States." Being wrong to this extent my prospects as the candidate for President on the Democratic ticket have gone a-glimmering.

The good Colonel's implication that the letter had even the "tacit" approval of the organization with which I am connected is, of course, refuted by the letter itself. Surely even in Texas an individual must still retain the God-given prerogative of self-assertion and self-determination.

The good old Colonel states: "The circular was sent to theatre owners"; his acumen in this connection is truly marvelous, especially when we take into consideration the fact that my letter was addressed "Dear Mr. Exhibitor." I do resent his statement that "he (Wood) is the acting business manager of that organization." I would have the esteemed Colonel know that I am THE Business Manager.

The honored Colonel should be consistent: He sounds a warning that we should stay away from political questions of this nature but he is perfectly willing to throw the entire industry into politics through the medium of the Brookhart bill. De gustibus non est disputandu, if I remember the old Latin.

Reading over the revered Colonel's letter again I am convinced that the ten per cent tax is of no concern to the theatre-owners of Texas: As to this I can only say: "Wait, Colonel, until prohibition and the depression hit the good old Lone Star state."—P. J. Wood, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

Publisher Motion Picture Herald
Mr. Quigley:

If you would cut this sort of thing out, you would make it much easier for the producer to deal with talent, consequently making it possible to reduce cost of production and help the whole industry in general. What possible good can your compiled statistics do to a now starving industry?

J. M. DUNCAN,
Alhambra Theatre,
Decatur, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Duncan:—

I have before me your copy of our questionnaire about the ten best box-office stars of 1932 with your note thereon addressed to Mr. Quigley, in which you say: "If you would cut this sort of thing out, you would make it much easier for the producer to deal with talent." I also observe that you say: "What possible good can your compiled statistics do to a now starving industry?"

I dispute your implication that "this sort of thing" makes it difficult for producers to deal with talent. The producers themselves, in dealing with talent, are the creators of their difficulties—in their bidding competition. I have had, as perhaps you know, decidedly intimate relations with the production field, and at various times in the development of the star era. I have never known but one instance in which a star's salary was directly fixed by that star's opinion of his own box office value. That was in 1916, when I was with the Mutual Film Corporation and a factor in the negotiations for the services of Charles Chaplin. In the instance of any other star contract that I know anything about—and that means a large number—salaries have been fixed not in terms of box office and public appreciation but rather by producers' guesses, answers and anticipation fighting with each other. Further, no suppression of facts with reference to box office values ever has been, or ever can be, of any service to this industry. Most of the evils of the motion picture industry all the way from studio to screen today are based on fictions, hunches, guesses and—to speak frankly—a great many damn lies.

Statistics, to which you seem to object, when honestly and accurately compiled, have never done any injury to any industry, whether it happens to be starving at the moment or not. I assume that you keep books in the operation of your business. May I not point out that your day book, your journal and your ledger are merely compilations of statistics?

Motion Picture Herald is constructively engaged in the service of the motion picture industry and it, with its background of a quarter of a century of publication experience and heritage, has established beyond any reasonable possibility of contradiction that classified information has the same values in the amusement industry that it has in other industries.

It is also, let me point out, entirely proper and of utility for Motion Picture Herald to discuss in its pages for and within the motion picture industry many matters which are not perhaps fortunate for discussion in the public press—the public press meaning principally the newspapers—, because the lay press has not the same community of interest with the motion picture that Motion Picture Herald has.

Meanwhile, let me observe that anything in the trade press to which any exhibitor ever objected is continually published by a large number of the daily newspapers. There are more than two hundred reporters and correspondents for the public press in the Hollywood community. A very considerably portion of the destructive "news" of this industry arises from the influencing of this army of correspondents by interested persons in the production community.

At any rate, it should be of distinct interest to every exhibitor to know what his contemporaries in the exhibition field have had by way of experience with the season's product.

Yours very sincerely,
TERRY RAMSAYE

June 6, 1932.
Mr. J. M. Duncan,
Alhambra Theatre,
Decatur, Illinois.

PROTESTS REPORT ON "LAST RIDE"

To the Editor of the Herald:

I got a copy of Motion Picture Herald dated March 5, 1932 from the Central Theatre, of Belen, New Mexico, and under Rita C. McGoldrick's "Selections" on page 48, I noticed a report on "The Last Ride," a Universal picture, rating this picture as "Good," and on this recommendation I booked the picture and I do not hesitate to say it was the sorriest piece of entertainment I have ever shown, and people did not hesitate to tell me so; amateurs could have done better acting and while the plot should have made a good story it was terribly bungled.

Try and see this picture for your own satisfaction; I think you will tell them to stop before the end of the second reel. I think you would advise the exhibitors of the mistake made in reporting this one so others won't make the mistake I did, but satisfy yourself first that I am right.—Leo M. Fay, Gem Theatre, Socorro, New Mexico.

A MISSTATEMENT

After having telephoned the advertising department of the Paramount Studios in regard to the error made in their advertisement in your magazine, I wish to call your attention to it also.

In the April 30 number on the back appears an advertisement of the "Strange Case of Clara Deane" with a powerful, dramatic cast:

"Wynne Gibson—The girl who created such a sensation in 'Ladies of the Big House' and '24 Hours,' etc."

Now, we all know Miss Gibson did not appear in the latter film, but that Kay Francis and Miriam Hopkins did.

Just thought you might appreciate the error being called to your attention.—Maurice Neel, 230 South Beaudry, Los Angeles, Cal.

Tom Mix and TONY "DESTRY RIDES AGAIN"

When "Destry", the reckless young firebrand, famed for his flashing speed with the six gun, heard the verdict of "guilty", and the sentence of the court, he was stunned, for he was innocent of the charge. Framed by a cowardly jury, his anger reached the boiling point.

A GREAT HUMAN DRAMA LIVES ON THE SCREEN!

FANNIE HURST'S "BACK STREET"

with IRENE DUNNE JOHN BOLES

ALL THEIR LIVES THEY LOVED. SHE GAVE ALL. HE NOTHING. ALWAYS SHE WAS THRUST INTO THE BACK STREETS WHILE HE ENJOYED THE SUN. LIGHT YET HE LOVED HER. WHAT A SARDONIC SITUATION!

directed by JOHN M. STAHL

The most sensational picture since "ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" which was the greatest picture of all time.

Grim war on the Summit of the Austrian Alps. Italy and Austria locked in a death embrace where vast snows are eternal and yawning chasms and precipitous cliffs add to the hazards of war.

Once again UNIVERSAL'S supremacy is made manifest.

The Ten Biggest Money Making Stars of 1931-32

revealed by a poll of the season's experiences of 12,847 exhibitors

¶ Beginning next week Motion Picture Herald will present the returns on a questionnaire sent to every exhibitor in America, asking each to name the ten players who have done the most for the box office in the season of '31–'32.

¶ The returns contain surprises—and significant indications that the motion picture exhibitor is somewhat closer to America than Hollywood.

¶ The vote now being recorded is more than the cold dollar vote of the moment, it is an expression from the men who meet the customers in the lobby every evening.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 131.—(A) Using a curved mirror of full diameter, with light source located 4.5 inches from its reflecting surface, illustrate by diagram and/or description, the path of a light ray from light source to mirror surface and back past light source from (a) one inch from mirror center, and (b) extreme outer diameter. [Note: Think this over. What I want is exact information as to your knowledge of the action of a mirror surface. To help you I suggest you add a straight line at both points of incidence showing the plane of the mirror at that point. This will be quite a job if you do it right, so I won't give you anything else this week.]

Answer to Question No. 124

Bluebook School Question No. 124 was: "(A) Describe a simple wet battery cell. (B) What is the voltage of a simple wet battery cell? (C) How much amperage may be obtained from a simple wet battery cell? (D) For what use were batteries primarily intended? (E) which is the positive and which the negative of a wet battery cell? (F) What is the comparative area of the copper and zinc plates of a wet battery cell?

There was an unusually large number of answers to this one—well over 1,000. For some reason a very large number fell down pretty flat on Section C, over 400 replies making the statement that the amperage possible to obtain was "unlimited," without any qualifying statement. Many more said, "As many amperes as the one volt will produce," which is incorrect, though very possibly what was meant was all right. Be careful to word your replies correctly. I am not presumed to know what you mean unless you set it forth clearly and unmistakably. The following made good:

I have selected the answer of G. E. Doe for publication, not because it is more basically correct than some of the others, but for the reason that it is well prepared and covers the subject rather well. He says:

"(A) A simple wet battery cell consists of a jar of suitable size, having a wide mouth usually. Ordinarily this jar is of glass. In it are suspended two elements, one of zinc and one of copper, immersed in a saturated solution of sal-ammoniac and water (the word 'saturated' meaning all the chemical the water will take up). The copper and zinc are, of course, insulated from each other, except for the contact provided by the electrolyte. Under this condition, if a conductor (wire) joined to the copper (positive) be touched to a conductor joined to the zinc (the negative element), a current will flow, the same being generated by action of the chemical (electrolyte) upon the positive and negative metals.

"(B) The voltage of a simple wet battery cell may range at any point between one and two volts, dependent upon the state of the electrolyte and the purity and state of the metals of the positive and negative metals. The voltage of a battery cell made from impure metals will be lower than that of one having pure metals. The cell voltage will lower gradually as the metal elements degenerate through long use.

"(C) Amperage depends upon the voltage and resistance of the circuit, and also upon the purity of the elements, the age of the battery and the effectiveness of the electrolyte—and to some extent upon the distance of positive and negative elements from each other. No set answer can be made unless all conditions are known.

"(D) Batteries were in use before mechanical generators (dynamos) were invented. They were used mostly for ringing bells and for power for telegraph lines. I do not believe they were primarily designed for any particular service or use. They were a discovery, and for them uses were gradually found, just as is the case with many other things which were discoveries rather than inventions. Usually an invention is something formed or evolved to fill some known need. A discovery is quite different. It is not based upon a known need, but rather upon man's desire for investigation and to 'find out things' for himself.

"(E) There has been some dispute about this, but I may safely say that the binding post attached to the copper element is positive and the other negative.

"(F) the actual area or surface of the copper and zinc elements should be approximately equal. However, because of the fact that the electrolyte attacks the zinc and eats it away, there must be many times more bulk of zinc than copper. Just what the best proportions of bulk may be I have been unable to find out, though I have examined all four sets of electrical books I own, including the best of them all, the Bluebook—best for the projectionist, anyhow."

Westinghouse Head Predicts Television Use in Two Years

The general use of television within two years was predicted by F. A. Merrick, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, in San Francisco on a visit last week.

The first stage of the television of the future will be the broadcasting of moving and sound pictures rather than of "action" pictures of great events, Mr. Merrick said. The broadcasting of events from their scene will come later. He explained that the amplification of light is more difficult than the amplification of sound and consequently action television has not reached the same stage as film television.

New Radio System of Picture Transmission Called Success

Immediate efforts will be made to commercialize a new Swiss method of radio transmission of black and white pictures as the result of a successful test in transmitting a letter from Switzerland to a ship in mid-Atlantic, according to The Christian Science Monitor.

Adalbert Guth, Swiss inventor of the system, is in the United States with associates arranging business connections, planning a deal with American commercial interests.

IT takes a mighty good motion picture to win a "four-star" rating . . . and a mighty good projection motor generator to provide a never-failing supply of electric current, show after show, season after season.

Westinghouse motor generator sets have won the full approval of projectionists because they afford these advantages:

Stabilized Arc—Assured by their conservative capacity rating. Change-over can be made without a flicker.

Trouble-free Performance—Exclusive Sealed Sleeve bearings require oil changing only once or twice a year.

Quiet Operation—Die-cast, flawless rotors; rigid steel frames; and all-welded bed-plates minimize vibration.

Simplified Maintenance—Brush renewals are simple because the brush holders are individually removable.

Long-lived Construction—With such exclusive Westinghouse features as non-deteriorating insulation, directed ventilation, and sturdy construction.

Westinghouse M-G. sets are supplied complete with all necessary accessories, including Linestarters, control panels, and ballast rheostats.

Omaha, Neb.

DEAR HERALD:

Film Row here in Omaha looks like the Indians had just moved in. Some of the offices are moving upstairs and some are moving downstairs. Some of the others are going to move somewhere but they don't know where.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has enlarged its office and is equipping it in first class shape with brand new furniture 'n' everything. Paramount has moved into a new building all by itself, and the plumbers, carpenters and decorators are making so much noise fixing things up that Ted Mendenhall, the branch manager, has to use a megaphone to call the booker.

There have been so many changes here that the city directory is of no use and we have to be introduced to about every guy we meet. Bill Bremer is back with Columbia, Lee Durham has gone over with Fox, Ike Rubens is back from Chicago and is working the territory for Paramount. Bob Greenblatt is a gentleman of leisure but sticks up a couple of lightning rods every time it clouds up. Bob has sold Universal service so long in this territory that every kid in the country calls him Uncle Carl.

Harry Day of Ida Grove, Iowa, is in town buying new equipment for his theatre, which burned recently. He says he will have a better equipped theatre than before. Harry's theory is that you will travel farther by stepping forward than you will by stepping backward, which sounds like good logic to us. Harry has always been a logical kind of a gazabo. One fire can't whip him.

We met our old friend Oscar Hansen today. Oscar was branch manager for Pathe in Detroit the last time we saw him but is now salesman for RKO in the Omaha territory.

The Fox office screened for us "Society Girl" with James Dunn, Peggy Shannon and Spencer Tracy, three Irish Musketeers, which was very nice of the office, and which we appreciate. When they can mix prize fighting and love together and make a good picture out of it they are going some, and this one does it. It doesn't only go some but it goes a whole lot.

Peggy Shannon and Jimmy Dunn do some excellent work in this picture but Spencer Tracy's playing suited us about the best we have seen in a long time. We can't understand why they have kept this boy covered up so long.

We liked Jimmy Dunn and Sally Eilers in "Dance Team" very much, and we doubted if we'd ever see Jimmy in a better one than that, but we believe "Society Girl" goes "Dance Team" one better, probably because there is more action in it. Our judgment is that both of these will satisfy wherever clean, wholesome entertainment is desired. If we were operating a theatre we'd play both of these or the Fox manager would be wearing beefsteak on both eyes. That's the kind of a guy we are.

They tell us that in Japan it is part of the marriage ceremony to pass the wine 18 times between the bride and groom. Boy, there's the place to go to get married. There's some sense to that ceremony.

Someone has said that women are much better qualified to pick candidates for office than men, but that's all nonsense. Just lookit what some of 'em picked when they got married.

A report comes from Hollywood that Will Rogers was arrested for breaking the speed limit. Bill must have been riding an Oklahoma mule. We doubt if his Model T could go that fast.

Fox Midwest in Operation Shift

A shake-up in the operation of Fox Midwest Theatres is in progress in an effort by executives to bring about greater efficiency. Numerous shifts have been made and further changes will extend throughout the circuit, it is said in Kansas City.

One new post has been created, that of assistant to the division manager. This position is filled by L. J. McCarthy, formerly division manager at St. Louis, who will now assist E. C. Rhoden, division manager, in his executive duties. McCarthy has been succeeded by Lon Cox of West Frankfort, Ill., as St. Louis zone manager and Cox in turn has been succeeded by R. C. Wheeler, manager at Marion, Ill., whose place is taken by E. French Gallagher, new to the organization.

A new system of supervision of the Midwest circuit divides the division into four districts, with managers for each. Howard E. Jameyson is the district manager at Wichita for western Kansas and will in addition continue with his public relations and advertising activities. Other district managers are: Harry A. McClure, Topeka, eastern Kansas; H. E. Ulrich, Springfield territory, and William H. Wagner, Greater Kansas City. Various managers and others have been shifted throughout the circuit.

Universal's Theatre Company Continues to Drop Holdings

Universal Chain Theatres is continuing the liquidation of its stock holdings in various theatres and theatre circuits over the country for the benefit of preferred stockholders, according to Charles B. Paine, treasurer of Universal Pictures Corporation. It is assumed Universal Chain Theatres will dissolve as a corporate entity at the conclusion of the liquidation.

Universal Pictures owns and controls operation of several first run theatres in the United States, three in Winnepeg, Canada, and six or seven abroad, located in England, Switzerland and Java. For the present, said Paine, operation of these houses continues but he indicated that the company would readily dispose of them in the event a satisfactory offer was made.

Berkeley Passes Fire Law Affecting All Film Storage

A new fire ordinance, which has been in process of preparation for four years, has been adopted by the city council of Berkeley, Calif. The new code outlines the use, storage and transportation of inflammable materials, including motion picture film, and places penalties for fires caused by violation of the code.

Under the provisions of the new measure any person causing a fire by ignoring an order of the fire department or violating any section of the code may be held financially responsible for the payment of expenses in extinguishing the blaze.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY!

WITHOUT ANY FANFARE of trumpets or the usual splurge of extra pages and special stories, the Managers' Round Table Club celebrates its fourth birthday with this issue. Incidently, we must admit that the birthday party is two weeks late. But what difference does a few weeks make?

On the following pages Mr. Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher, and Terry Ramsaye, editor, of MOTION PICTURE HERALD send timely and interesting messages to Club members. Few people in this industry are as well acquainted with true conditions confronting not alone the exhibition, but the production of pictures, as Mr. Quigley and Mr. Ramsaye. We know you will enjoy reading their remarks.

As on previous birthday parties, Dick Kirschbaum gives, in pen and ink, his observations on the progress of the Club. His cartoon certainly illustrates the real thoughts back of the Club. Lending each other a helping hand and all heading for a set goal is a happy thought at all times.

The question of membership is by no means a secret. Many are under the impression that we guard such figures for business reasons. 'Salotta bunk. We've got four thousand enrolled members, of which about thirty-six hundred are active, and we're doggoned proud of 'em, too! The others are accounted for as having found connections outside of showbusiness, deceased or have not filed a change of address at Club headquarters.

Every one of these active members are honest-to-goodness showmen and the type of men who are writing the history of showbusiness. They are creative, aggressive and possess the ability and qualifications which stamp them as the leaders and executives of tomorrow. The majority of them are men who have climbed from the very bottom, the kind who admit no defeat and hurdle every obstacle ever erected in their path. Without them theatre business would be hard put for capable manpower.

The mail-bag, like the membership, is always increasing, and while we have never attempted to keep an accurate record of the number of letters or pieces of mail to reach your Chairman, we feel safe in saying that the figures would run around eight hundred to a thousand a week.

So, if you were a little peeved because your particular letter was a few days late in being acknowledged and answered, try to remember that we have a large chunk of work keeping that mail bag as clear as possible.

Many unusual services have been inaugurated since the inception of this organization. Watching closely every angle important or timely in the operation of theatres and the advertising, exploitation or merchandising of the attractions, we have tried to emphasize those features of your daily work which seemed most necessary.

Special stories from authoritative sources, from men actually engaged in the same work you are doing, have appeared frequently. Details of how shows are being advertised appear week in and week out and can always be depended upon to point out some new slant in an old idea or something entirely original, and no doubt feasible for use elsewhere than where first used.

The fraternal spirit has constantly been pushed forward with the sincere hope that the different members become better acquainted via our weekly meeting on these Club pages and urged to correspond with each other. This angle alone has resulted in several thousand theatre managers becoming close friends despite the space of many hundred miles intervening.

If we have succeeded in being helpful to some of our members we won't talk about it here. This is, basically, the thought back of the entire organization. We are here to serve you in every possible way. Just tell us how and we'll leave no stone unturned to satisfy you.

During the past year we have made reprints of all important show-selling articles or items of seasonable interest. These were sent out to all accredited members for the asking and also furnished to circuits for distribution to their various theatres.

Each month an index of the preceding month's contents has been published and every six months a semi-annual index has appeared, making it a simple task to find any form of activity, etc., without any great loss of time, providing you are keeping your copies of MOTION PICTURE HERALD filed in proper order.

We recite these few details to better acquaint you with your own organization. Try to keep in mind at all times that this is YOUR Club; your own meeting place and a genuine fraternal circle where every real showman can sit around and chat with his brother showmen on an equal footing.

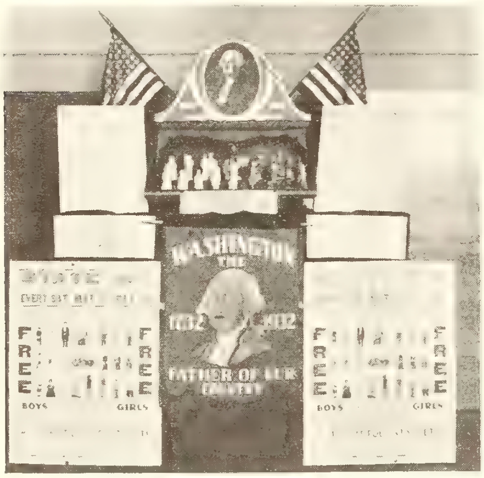
It's our birthday so here's wishing each and every member many more years of active and successful effort. And may we continue to serve you as the clearing house where the "All For One And One For All" spirit will always prevail.

"CHICK"

BI-CENTENNIAL WAS GOOD TRADE BOOSTER FOR IRVING FINEMAN

A good example of what can be accomplished these Bi-Centennial days was recently demonstrated when Irving Fineman, manager of the State Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., promoted a gratis display in a prominent spot in one of the city's big public schools in his neighborhood.

The photo on this page will show arrangement of the display, with plaque of Washington atop the display box of Washington miniature figures and the window cards at either side at bottom, tying in with the State and showing reproductions of the souvenir gifts made each week. A statuette and complete painting outfit were offered to pupils who turned in the best colored card.



Thus you will conclude that Fineman secured a spot of vantage in a large city school for publicity on theatre, current and coming attractions, which is one of the many ways a manager may cash in on the Bi-Centennial celebration. With several months still to go, contact those in your town who may be helpful in the matter of obtaining some worthwhile publicity and cash in same as many other Club members have managed to do since this celebration started.

HAL KOPPLIN USED NOVELTY CARD THAT MADE PATRONS LAUGH

Here's a neat little gag used by Hal Kopplin, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Miami, Fla., to exploit "Amateur Daddy," which ought to get a smile out of everyone who reads it. The following was printed on a 3½ by 5-inch card, headed "Helpful Hints to the Amateur Daddy."

> "When the baby's mother is away (your wife presumably) . . . and the baby needs a change of . . . well . . . what part of a baby's regalia does one change often?—Here is what you do—First take a piece of cloth about 24 inches square (for average size babies) . . . then fold one corner over to opposite corner very carefully . . . gently pick up baby and place on to folded cloth; being sure to judge proper position for attaching . . . then pick up folded corners and—Oh, For Goodness Sake, See Warner Baxter in 'Amateur Daddy' at the Capitol Theatre, Starting ———"

We're sure the above is excellent advice, Hal, and it is therefore being passed along to your brother showmen in this Club. We hope their prospective patrons of this picture will also get a kick out of it.

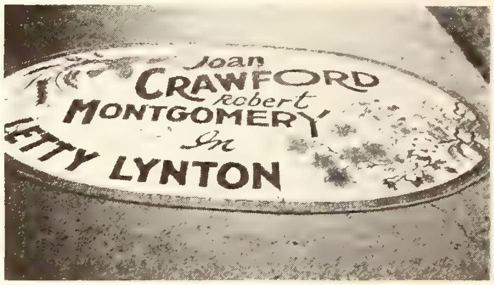
WALLY CALDWELL IS USING GOOD STUNT FOR SUMMER TRADE

Spring and summer atmosphere was added to the front of Loew's Valentine Theatre, Toledo, Ohio, by Manager Wally Caldwell when he arranged to have a large grass or straw mat spread on the sidewalk at entrance to theatre. The mat was imprinted with gay floral designs and attractive copy on current attraction.



The above looks like a good gag. Straw mats are cheap, washable paint can be used and copy can be changed a number of times. It would appear that the eyes of a majority of passers-by would be attracted by a novelty such as described here. The accompanying photo will convey a good idea of the type of mat used.

McGINNIS PROMOTED ONE OF THE NEW FORD CARS FOR GIVE-AWAY

Intense public interest in the new Ford car was taken advantage of not long ago by R. V. McGinnis, manager of the Conway Theatre, Conway, Ark., when he made arrangements with a number of local merchants to participate in the give-away of one of the new models at the theatre.

According to information at hand eight firms, including the theatre, made up the group which sponsored the event. It cost each one, with exception of the theatre, about $150 to take care of the initial cost of the car and advertising over a period of ten weeks. This included cost of special tickets made up for distribution by merchants and theatre. The theatre share of the expense was figured below that of the merchants.

In order to get the stunt under way McGinnis arranged to have the heads of all participating firms gather at luncheon at a local hotel, where every detail was carefully explained. It was also arranged to hold a special show at the theatre at a 50c admission on occasion of making the award, which was handled in the usual give-away fashion. The accompanying illustration shows a copy of the larger heralds distributed. Smaller ones bearing identical copy were also used. The local paper backed up the deal with a front page story, breaking the same day as arrival of the new Ford. The Ford motion pictures were also shown at the theatre.

We're glad to note that McGinnis was one of those who took advantage of the nation-wide publicity on first showings of the new Ford and we hope that many more Round Tablers also cashed in on local tie-ups. The public was certainly all hot and bothered about Henry's newest creation and it's a shame if all the good showmen in this outfit didn't share in the exhibition. However, the public is still warm and maybe one of the new models can be promoted.

CONGRATULATIONS TO YOU MEMBERS

MARTIN QUIGLEY SAYS:

THIS issue is the occasion of the fourth anniversary of the Managers Round Table.

For four years this department, under the leadership of Mr. Charles E. Lewis, has accelerated the pace and smoothed the road for theatre management. Particularly during the exacting times of the past year it has, week by week, contributed an effective, helping hand to the theatreman. MOTION PICTURE HERALD is especially glad to make particular note of this anniversary occasion because of the belief that throughout its existence this department has rendered one of the most genuinely helpful services that has ever been placed at the disposal of the managers of the theatres.

Every member of the Theatre Managers Round Table Club is entitled to share in this anniversary occasion because the department is a thoroughly cooperative enterprise, made possible and carried on through the spirit of mutual helpfulness which pervades the club in all of its activities.

The Club is designed to be a forum of experience. It is intended as a clearing-house through which may be passed from one theatre man to another, in the spirit of mutual helpfulness, information and suggestions which are calculated to improve the business of the theatre, to make for more effective operation and to advance the individuals concerned to greater usefulness in the industry.

With undiminished determination the Theatre Managers Round Table will carry on. In embarking now upon its fifth year it will seek tirelessly to make its service of constantly increasing value to all of its members.

To all of those whose interest and cooperation have made the department possible, hearty thanks is extended. To those others who have not yet availed themselves of the privileges and advantages of membership, we bid a cordial welcome.

—MARTIN QUIGLEY.

TERRY RAMSAYE SAYS:

THE fourth anniversary of the Manager's Round Table Club presents an occasion on which the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD can offer congratulations to a section of the publication without implication of Herald self-flattery, because in fact the remarkable success of the Club in service to the industry is a success of the great array of showmen contributors which Mr. Charles E. Lewis has been able to gather into this weekly workshop forum.

With its widespread, comprehensive and continually growing membership, the Round Table Club is uniquely in motion picture journalism, a real cooperative enterprise of service, a service where the industry as represented by showmen works by and for the industry.

One with the somewhat detached and impartial eye of the editor, in this instance also long an observer and student of the industry, can observe here in the pages of the Round Table a rare recognition, among showmen, of a community of interests which recognizes none of the factional boundaries all too conspicuous in many of the motion picture institution's activities. It is interesting to survey the Club's mail and files and to discover from its roster of membership that here in this meeting place, of type and paper, the little independent, the big independent, the circuit house manager, great or small, and any showman whomsoever, in any way whatsoever properly related to the business of purveying pictures to the public, comes in and sits down to listen and to stand up and speak his mind with an air of being at home.

Excursions into the pages of the Round Table are as exciting, interesting and refreshing to the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD as his occasional expeditions into the field for personal contact. In other words the Round Table is a really accurate label and title—it is a round table, with hospitable chairs and a welcome for any one with an idea.

—TERRY RAMSAYE.

BEN COHEN BOOSTED BOX OFFICE WITH A "CARNIVAL OF HITS"

Trade was substantially boosted during May by Ben Cohen, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Hazleton, Pa., through a stunt called the "Capitol Carnival of Hits," which was the occasion for the promotion of several effective tie-ups.

Tear sheets from local newspapers at hand reveal the fact that Cohen secured valuable cooperation from merchants and paper when putting over his campaign. He made a baseball tie-up, promoted cooperative ads by having theatre talent pose in store windows, and secured prints of movies taken in Hazleton in 1922 for presentation along with "So Big." The newspapers also gave him some great readers on some material he made up from combing through press books on coming attractions.

Another gag he used successfully on a recent picture and one which can be applied to any attraction, was a hand bill carrying a list of ten questions on past events and other memory testers. These are easy to put together and most people like to see how good they are at the game. Ben gave guest tickets to those who returned the best answers.

No need for us to remark on the fact that Ben Cohen is considerable of a showman down in his Pennsylvania town for you've often had opportunities to read accounts of what he has done in showbusiness. You'll hear more about him in the future.

McKOY'S CALENDAR NOVELTY MADE GOOD PLUG FOR ATTRACTION

James H. McKoy, manager for Publix down in Miami, Fla., used a little calendar novelty on "Crowd Roars" when that picture played the Olympia which proved very popular with the public.

It consisted of a strip of green cardboard about twelve inches long by three and one-quarter inches wide, which, when folded, made up an upright desk calendar five inches high. This was done by having a slit on one end and a tapering of the other end to allow insertion. It carried a calendar of the month and copy on the picture.

CONNER CREATED LOT OF INTEREST AMONG KIDS WITH SKATE MAT

If you've never tried a Roller Skate matinee lend an ear or two to the tale of how M. Conner, manager of the Tower Theatre, Chicago, Ill., tied up with a skate manufacturer for the give-away of fifteen pairs of skates to the juvenile patrons of his house.

The skates were given away at the rate of five pairs per Saturday matinee, the skate company footing the bill for 6,000 pluggers which sold both matinee and features for the week. The skate people also sent several pairs of skates mounted on a neat display for the lobby. In return for the give-aways and pluggers, the theatre gave an easel in front of the box office, a short talk prior to actual give-away and a trailer at matinee time. However, neither company or dealer was mentioned on trailer.

Because of a poor picture combination the first week, Conner tells us that business did not rise to expectations, but that twice as many youngsters attended the second week and that so many came the third that the kids had to be lined up. On this last afternoon a parade was held from the dealer's store to the theatre. Each kid was given some lively-colored paper shakers, all paid for by the dealer, and a Boy Scout troop in uniform led the skaters. Ahead of the Scouts two boys carried a large banner to effect that the gang were skating to the Tower Theatre to see "Lost Squadron," etc. Conner also promoted moving pictures of the parade.

The importance of strongly selling the first week and choosing appropriate pictures is stressed by Conner for an affair of this sort. If this is done he believes all three, or perhaps four, weeks, can be turned into a most profitable investment. The awards were made in the usual give-away fashion.

Thanks to Conner for remembering his fellow Round Tablers and we're sure they will be interested in trying out this stunt if it is possible for them to get in touch with a skate manufacturer or dealer. It is quite possible that a dealer alone will, in many instances, be glad to tie-up with an event of this sort. We would like to reproduce a snap-shot of a shadow box idea recently carried out at the Tower but the shot was made at too great a distance to bring out detail.

ELLIOTT SENT OUT A WELL-FRAMED LETTER ON CHANGE OF POLICY

Following is a letter sent out a short time ago by Clyde E. Elliot, proprietor of the Melrose Park Theatre, Melrose Park, Ill., and a well known exhibitor throughout the middle west. It deals with a change of policy and states its case quite frankly.

> "Thursday Evening
> April 28th
> the Melrose Park Theatre will launch a program of entertainment that will please everyone in your home. Under New Management and with a New Policy and New Reduced Prices!
> "A theatre, intelligently operated for the enjoyment of its patrons, should be a civic pride and with this view in mind the staff of the new Melrose Park theatre will endeavor to merit this distinction.
> "In selecting entertainment, Quality and Diversification should come first and inasmuch as the present motion picture market does not afford enough feature productions to assure 100% entertainment value in the presentation of "double feature" shows and realizing that theatre patrons do not care to witness an inferior picture in order to enjoy a good one, our programs will comprise a carefully balanced show consisting of the best feature attraction available, together with News Weeklies, Comedies, Screen Vaudeville Acts, Sport Reels and Novelty Subjects in order that you may enjoy a full two hour show.
> "Double feature programs and special stage attractions will be presented only when the maximum in entertainment can be achieved!
> "We further believe that the modern motion picture theatre should have an admission scale within the reach of all families residing in the community and it is to your best interest to attend the theatre which enables you to enjoy the best shows for the least amount of money.
> "If It's a Worthwhile Picture It Will Play The Melrose Park!
> "In addition to the local papers, our programs will be listed in the Chicago Evening American and the Sunday Herald & Examiner.
> "We wish you to feel that the Melrose Park is your theatre and we will welcome your suggestions at all times in helping us to provide you with the best entertainment the great motion picture industry affords."
> "Most cordially yours,"

Clyde Elliott is a new contributor to this department and we will hope to hear more about how his present policy is working out. His letter is self-explanatory and we think it will prove interesting to other Club members.

HOW TO OPEN THOSE STUBBORN REEL CANS

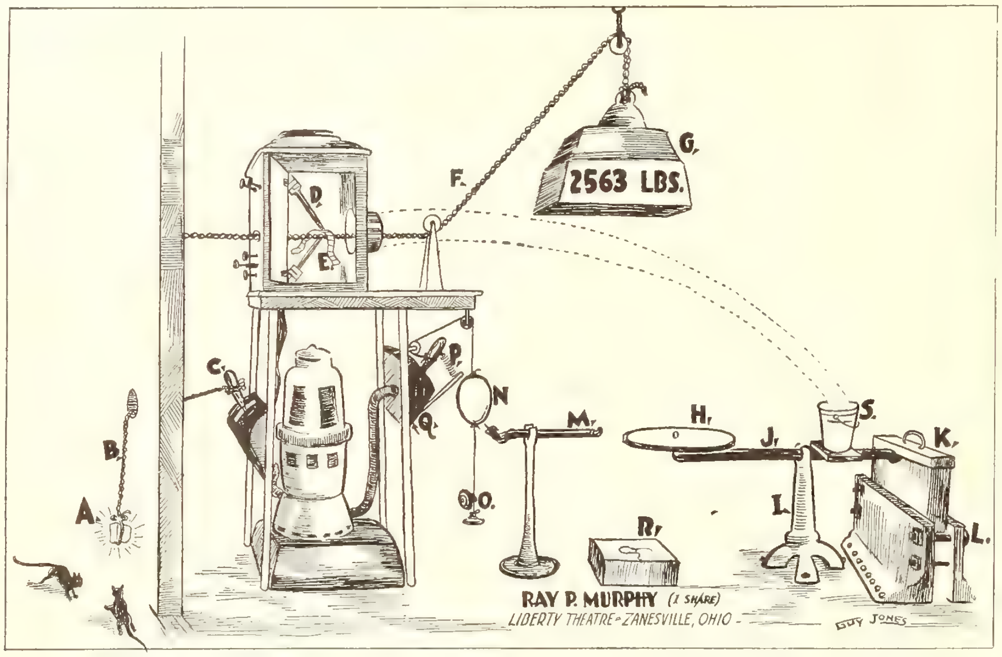
Suggested by Ray Murphy

Illustrated by Guy Jones



Don't throw away that old disc equipment. By following these instructions you can turn it into a very useful invention that will open up those dent-up, banked-up, single reel cans that the film companies call film cases. This outfit can be set up at night just before leaving the show. In the morning when you return the can will be open; that is if nothing goes wrong with the works. There are other advantages to be taken into consideration with an outfit of this sort. It opens 'em at night, thereby doing away with useless noise. It saves the projectionist's finger nails and also keeps him from talking to God about how hard it is to open the can.

IT'S AS EASY AS A. B. C.

Cheese bait, A, is attached to rope B, and then hung out of a porthole into the house. When rats fight over the cheese bait, A, it pulls rope B, thereby throwing on switch, C. Carbon, D, then sparks, and sets film, E, on fire. The film then sets rope, F, on fire, causing it to snap and drop weight, G, on turntable, H, which is supported by legs, I. This causes bar, J, to fly up and open film can, K, which is held down securely by strong press, L. As weight hits disc, H, it also hits pickup, M, causing it to puncture balloon, N. Disc weights O then fall, permitting spring, P, to pull switch, Q, which shuts off the generator. Weight G also drops on old photo electric cell, R, causing it to explode, scaring away the rats for the night, thus saving the bait for the next can to be opened. Pail of water, S, is sent into the air when weigh G flips bar J, causing water to put out burning rope F.

Now, if Ray Murphy will send us a scheme to open up the big shots' hearts we'll give him a lotta more thanks.

GARRY LASSMAN PUT OVER AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN IN UTICA

Tie-ups, a parade of newsboys, a marque loud speaker stunt and special invitations were highlights of the campaign made on "Girl Crazy" by Garry Lassman, manager of the Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

He had 100 cards made up for music stores, giving the name of the attraction and stating that George Gershwin's song hits were on sale at the music counter. The cards were hung on fixtures.

On the opening day of picture the newsboys of a leading local newspaper were invited to be guests of the theatre, for which was received an advance story and a three-column cut of photo of boys gathered in front of theatre.

A 24-sheet display of Wheeler & Woolsey was placed atop the marquee and a mike near the horns carried the music from the screen to street. Before each showing of the picture one of the ushers announced through the mike that the song hits were being taken directly from the regular performance. This stunt attracted a lot of attention and was responsible for bringing a number of passers-by to the box office.

Another stunt that earned him further goodwill from a local orphan asylum was an invitation for the inmates to be present as guests of the theatre at the opening performance. The local Lions Club furnished 30 autos for transportation.

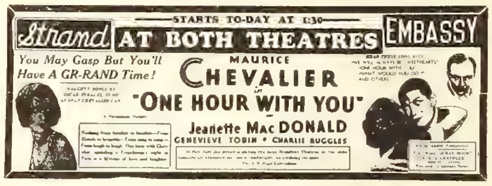
GAMMETT CASHED IN WITH GOOD CAMPAIGN ON CHEVALIER FILM

Borrowing a leaf from the book of ideas used to sell "One Hour With You" in New York City, when that picture played simultaneously at two houses, and repeating the same policy he used on "Shanghai Express," by playing two cities at the same time, Harry Gammett, manager of three A. R. Boyd houses in Bethlehem and Allentown, Pa., recently hung up another enviable advertising and exploitation campaign.

Week Beg. Sat.
GLOBE THEATRE
ONE HOUR WITH YOU

Large display ads in newspaper announced that the same treatment accorded the picture in New York City would also apply to Allentown, so that all would have an opportunity to attend. In both Bethlehem and Allentown three girls, dressed in maid costumes with masks, handed out candy kisses in envelopes bearing the following copy: "One Should Be Cautious—when accepting kisses from a strange woman in these times—but you are safe to accept this kiss—it is to tell you that the best time of all, says Maurice Chevalier, is 'One Hour with You,'" etc.



STARTS TO-DAY AT 1:30

Strand AT BOTH THEATRES EMBASSY

You May Gasp But You'll Have A GR-RAND Time!

MAURICE CHEVALIER in "ONE HOUR WITH YOU"

Jeanette MacDONALD

GENEVIEVE TOBIN • CHARLIE RUGGLES

In addition to the big newspaper campaign and the candy gag a large calliope covered both towns; cutout displays were arranged in several windows, among which was the one illustrated herewith and which came in for much comment and reproduction in the newspaper, and a number of other routine attention-getters. As Gammet states, "if anyone in both towns didn't know that picture had arrived, the fact could be attributed to either deafness or dumbness."

Besides handling the Globe in Bethlehem Gammet is also in charge of the Strand and Embassy at Allentown, which more or less keeps his mind concenrated on show business. However, he has found time to lend a hand to the newspapers in a fight against daylight saving and we'll be interested to know how the battle turns out. In the meantime, continued good luck to this Round Tabler.

MELINCOFF'S CO-OP

Max Melincoff, manager of the Palace Theatre in Lawrence, Mass., promoted a cooperative flyer for "The Crowd Roars," the expense for which was paid for by the merchants. Each of the merchants distributed 5,000 of the heralds, making a total of 50,000 that were distributed in addition to the 10,000 that the theatre put into circulation. This sort of tie-up is a natural, that dealers in the auto line are sure to go for. The flyer was printed up on 14 x 20 machine finish stock.

MATCHING WITS WITH 'OLD SOL' TO BOOST BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS!

Here Are Some Sensible Ideas That Are Practical for Almost Every Location in the Country Providing They Are Put Over!

THE time is at hand when you must fight and fight hard to overcome every obstacle that stands in the way of satisfying box office receipts. Local conditions, product, opposition nor anything else is sufficient excuse for you to throw up the sponge and accept defeat. You must analyze more infinitely than ever before and capitalize on every possible feature of your theatre and its programs in an effort to create a desire for the entertainment you have to sell that will eclipse and smother all efforts of opposition enterprises. To do this means minute attention to the condition of your theatre fronts; to the cleanliness and inviting atmosphere of your lobby; to the warmth of welcome and polite service of your front house employees; to the careful analyzing of your newspaper advertising, heralds, etc., with the thought in mind that every sentence contain the very ultimate in sales appeal as directed to the people of your particular community; to the capitalizing of the names in your short product, events in the news and other elements of these one and two-reelers that might add the "ounce" necessary to balance the "Bargain" scale of amusement seekers in your favor. It means that your projectionists and stage hands must be forcibly impressed with the responsibility that is theirs and that a keener interest be taken in capitalizing on all available effects both from the booth and stage to present your show in the most pleasing, impressing and entertaining manner. It means an inventory of stage equipment, film library and store room that might bring to light equipment, drapes, novelty presentations and other units that could be utilized at this time to make your theatre more inviting and your show more attractive.

Think and Work Hard!

The purpose of this article is to make you THINK and think hard; WORK and work hard to overcome the obstacles that confront you. Every trade journal should be carefully perused with a view of capitalizing on the schemes that have proven successful to other managers. For the last two months Publix Opinion, MOTION PICTURE HERALD and other publications devoted to theatre operation have been giving you the last minute suggestions of the brainiest men in show business on sales approach to offset shrinking receipts. The proper application of these ideas, coupled with your own ingenuity, ambition and energy, will enable you to secure the lion's share of the amusement business in your territory. Recreation is necessary to human existence, and if swimming pools, parks, dance halls, baseball and other opposition enterprises are cutting into your receipts it is because they have been made to APPEAR more inviting to the amusement seeker and it is your job to exert every effort to emphasize the superiority of your theatre and its attraction to the point where it will take its rightful place as the natural mecca of those seeking recreation.

The following suggestions and references are presented with the assurance that four out of five can be readapted and elaborated upon to fit any and every operation. However, it is necessary that each thought be analyzed as to its possibilities to your theatre.

This article was written in the form of a bulletin by Jack Jackson of the Publix-Scranton Division and sent to all theatres in that zone. We have made just a few changes in order to adapt it to this department and make it practical for every member and reader.

As a follow-up to the many summer suggestions which we have been publishing, we feel certain that wide-awake managers will quickly grasp the opportunity to put these practical ideas to work for their theatres. We heartily endorse every one of them and consider each suggestion well worth trying.

Other material practical for stimulating summer business is wanted. If you have some good ideas, or have started some form of summer activity which is bringing you business, play square with your brother showmen and pass it along. Keep the "All for One and One for All" spirit alive.

"CHICK"

Bathing Revues

Every retailer of bathing suits in your community will be interested. Begin to contact them now, arranging for a bathing revue on your stage one, two or three nights. In the bigger towns the revue can run one full week.

The Jantzen Bathing Suit dealers have a national tie-up on pictures in which Loretta Young, Joan Blondell or Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are starred. The national distributor of these suits has window display material and other sales media that will be given to the dealer for the asking. Watch your bookings and capitalize on this tie-up.

Soft Drink Tie-Ups

Reference to your files will bring to light detailed campaigns that were worked successfully in many of the theatres last year. It's time to do this again. Contact your bottling works at once, being sure to get the very utmost in cooperation. If you have misplaced the detailed plans call on some of the managers who operated this scheme successfully last year.

Gold Nights

Gold Nights proved themselves as being real revenue getters in every operation that went in for this type of activity. It is more than a year since this effort was engaged in in many of the theatres. It's good for a repeat—go after it.

Graduation Parties

Between June 1 and June 16 several hundreds of students will complete their studies. Every class is anxious to celebrate in some manner. By starting to contact school principals and class leaders at once you can influence these celebrations to be held at your theatre. Do the job thoroughly—contact every grade and high school; parochial schools; private institutions, not only in your town, but in those towns immediately surrounding it.

Ice Cream Tie-Ups

MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of May 14 carries details. Dig up the issue—study the plans thoroughly and approach your manufacturers with the kind of enthusiasm that guarantees success. It's being done other places—YOU can do it.

"Hard Work" Is the Answer to Those Who Want to Know How They Can Go Through This Summer Without Losses!

Smaller ice cream makers and retailers can be contacted for the give-away of ice cream cones, small portions of brick cream, etc., in the lobby of your theatre either on one day a week or as a regular summer advertising activity. The dealer will supply the girl attendants and the ice and is getting a marvelous break in being privileged to distribute samples to the select patronage of your theatre.

Ice cream give-aways for kiddie matinees are marvelous business stimulators—go after them.

Pony Give-Aways — Police Puppy Give-Aways, Etc.

Two theatres recently engaged in this activity with two to 20 merchants cooperating, guaranteeing herald coverage, window display and newspaper advertising over a four-week period plus the price of the pony and dogs at no cost to the theatre whatever.

Kid Business

Keep it alive by all means. Go into pet matinees with prizes for the best dogs and best cats. Go in for pie-eating contests, ice-cream-eating contests, kid games and other things of interest to the youngsters that will make them think of your theatre first when seeking amusement and then go home and tell the grown folks what a wonderful time they had. Rework all the old kiddie stunts you ever did and generate some new ones.

Bicycle Give-Aways

Every youngster in your territory is anxious to own a bicycle and every bicycle dealer is anxious to get the kind of advertising in back of his product that will mean real sales effort. You might not be able to get a new bicycle, and if you can't, follow Ed Cangley's scheme at Owego, who repainted an old one and increased his kid business 60 per cent on the day of award.

Refrigerator Give-Aways

No product on the American market is receiving the advertising today that is given automatic refrigeration. Competition in this field is keener than in any other and very little opposition confronts you in contacting dealers for give-aways either on numbers, popularity or other type of contests.

Ice Box Give-Aways—Ice Coupon Books

Dealers in natural and artificial ice are finally awakening to the menace of automatic refrigeration and are conducting demonstrations to illustrate the value of ice over electric refrigeration. These dealers are ready and willing to give ornamental ice boxes and prizes running into tons of ice in the form of coupons good for 100, 500, 1,000 and 2,000 pounds of ice to your patrons. This activity has already been worked successfully by the American Theatre, Pittston and Strand Theatre, Scranton.

Amateur Nights

Regardless of the hot weather, the presentation of amateur talent in most instances means increased business. This activity has also been deal for almost a year—revive it. Contact the prize winners of previous contests—solicit dancing schools, piano and violin teachers, band instrument stores and others who will provide you with a list of their prize pupils that will raise the roster of available talent to dimensions that will guarantee several weeks of varied presentations.

MATCHING WITS WITH 'OLD SOL'!

Stage Weddings

Wherever this activity has been indulged in the SRO signs have been hung out. June is the month! The cooperation of department stores, Jewelers, florists, lingerie merchants, shoe dealers, millinery stores, beauty parlors, auto dealers, etc., is all yours for the asking. A detailed plan of conducting a stage wedding will be found in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of December 12, 1931, and October 31, 1931. If these numbers are not on hand, a letter to "Chick" Lewis, 1790 Broadway, New York, will bring duplicates. Write for them and put this over big.

Clean-Up Week

In a lot of the cities the newspapers have already gotten in back of this annual event. If your town is one that remains untouched, contact your newspaper at once. Start the activity at your theatre. Get every usher, cleaner, stage hand, operator and yourself working to refurnish the entire house. An excellent outline of how to go about this is included in the first two paragraphs on Page 60 of MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of May 14.

Garden Week

This also offers an opportunity for newspaper cooperation. The world is in love with flowers! Every one from 6 to 66 wants a garden! Tie in with your newspaper, offering prizes of admissions to your theatre to the best examples of home grown flowers and plants. In addition to the advertising and goodwill, you will receive the flowers and plants entered in the contest will make a very attractive lobby display to which entrants will invite their friends. This idea is as big as you make it. Elaborate upon it, but, get it under way.

Lobbies

Begin at once to inaugurate a series of activities that will liven the lobby of your theatre. The give-away of ice cream; soft drinks; iced tea; cake; the exhibition of rowing machines with girl demonstrators; reducing equipment with girl demonstrators and many other ideas offer possibilities of cost free tie-ups that will liven your lobby and provide additional interest and entertainment for your patrons.

Arrange for novel ornamentation of your lobby. This can be done with colored tissue paper. Avoid warm colors during the summer months. Make use of live greens, being sure that they are changed at regular intervals and at no time allow withered leaves to predominate. There are many other ideas along this line that can be capitalized upon to lend a constantly changing atmosphere that will be welcomed by your patrons and will add to the inviting appearance of your theatre.

Cooling Plants

Those houses equipped with cooling systems have a natural edge on any other type of entertainment offered during the summer months, but they must be sold and sold forcibly. Selling your cooling system is of outstanding importance to you. Start doing it right now. Use your screen, your newspapers, programs, lobby displays and outdoor billing, if any, to impress the fact that an even temperature prevails at all times. Don't get tired of telling your patrons in every way of the cool comforts of your theatre. Sit down now and write 20 or 30 short institutional lines of your cooling system to be included immediately below or above the signature cut in every ad you publish on your theatre.

Keep these alive as long as Old Sol continues to turn on the heat. Nobody is going to take it for granted that your theatre is cool unless you tell them so every time you get a chance. Go through your house lighting; substitute greens and blues for the orange, ambers, reds and other hot colors. Look over your front displays and see that borders are changed into cool colors. Run through your film library for the cool trailers that were used last year and put them on the screen again. Supplement these from time to time with two and three frame "intimate" copy trailers that will further impress your audience with the comfort that is theirs while in your theatre.

Secure detailed data on your cooling system and arrange to break it down into four or five newspaper stories showing how much water is used; how many cubic feet of air is turned out; how often it is changed; details of the dehumidifying process; get pictures of the mayor and city engineer turning on your cooling system; get the dimensions of your fans and their possible capacity of intake; provide the details of expulsion of stale air. There are dozens of angles on the cooling plant alone, each of them good for a story. Many of these can be accompanied by art if you are ingenious enough to coin the scheme. In addition to the mayor and city engineer, get girls from the local swimming pools; the fattest man in town in a fur overcoat keeping cool at your theatre. Ideas along this line are too numerous to chronicle. Again I refer you to MOTION PICTURE HERALD issue of May 14 where five full pages from 60 to 64 provide myriad suggestions for capitalizing upon your cooling plants.

From the ideas provided here it is possible to build up a running campaign that will overlap one activity on the other throughout June, July and August. The complete plans should be laid out NOW and followed carefully unit for unit to a conclusion. Remember, HABIT has the strongest grip on the pocketbook of America, and advertising, forceful and consistent, has moulded most of the habits. IT IS UP TO YOU TO GET EVERY POSSIBLE PATRON IN THE HABIT OF GOING TO YOUR THEATRE. You can do it, but it is going to take RESOURCEFULNESS, AMBITION and ENERGY enthusiastically applied. Get busy!

ASSISTANT MANAGERS!

Managers who are members of the Club should take steps to enroll their assistants in our organization as soon as possible.

It will give them an added interest in their work and help you to impress upon them the many responsibilities that go with theatre management.

Assistants so enrolled at the request of their superiors are entitled to all the advantages of the Club but do not receive membership certificates until they have been promoted to a manager's berth.

Hundreds of our most active members joined while they were assistants and found our pages most helpful in acquiring a keen understanding of the manifold duties in theatre management, advertising, exploitation, etc. It's the real school of showmanship and provides a much-needed incentive for them to advance in the business.

POSTER ART WORK FOR THE THEATRE!

This week's contribution to the poster art series is from the work shop of D. Newton Perkins, artist, and A. M. Jacob, manager, of the Majestic in Jackson, Miss.

The top poster, while rather old, is so well done that we thought it well worth reproducing for whatever value it may possess in the way of ideas in the handling of such material. No denying the fact that it is forceful and seat-selling in more ways than one. Just what the colors consisted of we cannot say, but from all indications it must have been a swell piece of work.

The second photo shows one of the attractive pieces of art display work turned out by Perkins and is typical of the present day trend. When properly handled, spotted in a good place in the lobby, and flooded with baby spots in good color combinations, these displays can do more to emphasize some coming attraction than any other lobby means we can think of.

JUNGLE FILMS ARE NATURALS FOR YEOH AT MALACCA HOUSE

Once again we hear from T. S. Yeoh, manager of the Capitol Theatre, 'way over in Malacca, Straits Settlements, and a glance at a couple of snapshots enclosed in his letter discloses that conventional picture ballyhoos are as much in vogue in that country as in the good old U. S. A.; the only difference being that certain films appear to be naturals for native exploitation.

What could be sweeter, by the way, for real atmosphere on pictures like "Africa Speaks" and "Trader Horn" than a horde of black-skinned natives, an assortment of tom-toms, jungle shrubbery, stuffed alligators and whatnot. Take a squint at those black boys in the photos, carrying spears and dressed in tribal headgear. The bear riding the motor tricycle may be a trifle incongruous, but some allowances must be made for showbusiness, even in Malacca.

The next time we hear from Showman Yeoh, perchance he'll send along some further details on exploitation in his town. Just wait until he shows "Tarzan." We can guess the S. R. O. sign will be hung out on that occasion. In the meantime we wish him continued success.

FISCHER AND GEORGE HUEBNER GAVE AWAY FREE SEATS TO POOR

Welfare organizations can hardly be expected to dole out entertainment in addition to food, clothing and other necessities these tough times, so it remained for A. Fischer, assistant manager, and his proprietor-boss, George Hueber, of the Strand and Crystal Theatres, Oconomowoc, Wis., to take care of that end for the needy families in their community.

These two are therefore giving free tickets on certain nights of the week to those actually in need, and in return are receiving some corking publicity in local newspapers. Fischer thinks some other Club members might want to fill those extra seats on off nights and is passing the idea along. The act was certainly a charitable one and undoubtedly means of furthering good will and respect for the theatre.

San Francisco Transfers

The following are the latest changes made among RKO houses in San Francisco:

Jack Condy, formerly of the Hill Street Theatre, Los Angeles, is now house-managing the Golden Gate. Emil Numan, formerly publicity man at the Orpheum Theatre, is now handling publicity for the Golden Gate. A. S. Vidaver, recently with L. R. Greenfield Theatres, is the new publicity man for the Orpheum. Ben Black is taking care of production at the Golden Gate. All of which lends to the report that Len S. Brown, new division man, is shaking things up a bit.

SAM LEFFLER BUSY ON HIS NEW JOB AT STATE IN ALLENTOWN

The chief reason why Club members haven't been lately informed on the show-selling activities of Samuel Leffler is because this Round Tabler has been busily engaged finding his way around his newly adopted place of business at Allentown, Pa. You will recall that Samuel was formerly in charge of the Europa Theatre, Philadelphia; now he's at the helm of the State, Wilmer & Vincent house at Allentown.

By way of resuming his contributions to this department we are calling attention to a photo showing a portion of the younger element in his town responding to a celebration of Boys' Week and the inauguration of a Magic Club. Most of the youngsters are representative groups from the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts of the Central High School and carriers from two local newspapers. The idea of the club is based upon the thought that most all boys are interested in the manipulation of magic tricks. Giveaways of magic articles, etc., are handled in the usual fashion. Membership cards and buttons for the boys are furnished by the theatre.

Another box office stimulant recently used by Leffler was accomplished through a tie-up with the advertising manager of the classified department of a local paper. Scene stills from current and coming attractions were reproduced, with caption asking, "What Do You Think Bill So and So is saying to Minnie So and So in Such and Such Now Playing at the State." The words making up the answers were scattered among different ads in the classified columns. Front page promotion by the paper went with this stunt.

From time to time this department has carried accounts of how kiddie attendance has been developed at matinees through the use of magic games, etc., and we therefore judge that most of our members are familiar with the stunt. If there are any who are still desirous of learning the whereabouts of firms manufacturing this material, we'll be glad to supply the information. The cost is extremely low when bought in even small quantities. Classified gags have also been discussed quite freely in these columns and we think that Leffler gave an interesting slant to his when reproducing the scene stills with query as to dialogue.

By this time Leffler has undoubtedly hit his stride down at his new house and we'll be looking forward to hearing all about the other stunts he's been pulling to jack up the good old box office. What say, Sam? Shoot the dope along.

By KEN LONG

A LAYOUT is a diagram of an advertisement showing arrangement of all copy and illustrations. The purpose of the layout is to give the compositor a clear picture of the desired advertisement.

Here is an outline showing the various steps taken in laying out an ad using the producer's material illustrated in Fig. "A." (Mats Nos. B-3 and B-5 from RKO's "State's Attorney" press book.)

First draw a rectangle (Figure "B") the size of the ad which is to be made. Then place the illustration of Barrymore in this rectangle (Figure "C") and plan how it can be cut to give maximum space to copy and still retain a likeness of Barrymore.

Fig. "D" shows how this illustration is cut, and panels inserted.

After the illustrations have been cut, mark off on the mat, with pencil, exactly where the casting is to be made. These markings should be accurate so that the part of the casting retained for the ad is exactly like the illustration.

Copy is then lettered in roughly (Figure "F"), lettering all display lines and indicating body copy (Copy A—Figure "H").

Now letter in boldly all lines which would be emphasized. (Figure "G.") Also make panel rules as heavy as desired, and put in rules around illustration. This gives a clear picture of about how the finished ad will look.

Specify type styles and sizes of all important parts in the ad as shown in Figure "H," which represents the complete layout. If all hand-lettering on the layout is clear, body copy may be typed to one side. However, it is a better plan to type the copy complete as shown in Figure "I," then all lines are entirely legible to the compositor. If this is done, make sure there are no inconsistencies between the copy and layout.

The extra time involved in typing out your text is well spent, because it eliminates most chances of errors by the composing room. Many managers still scribble or scrawl their copy on a piece of dirty yellow paper and then wonder why it is not understood or readable.

Another thought to keep in mind is that the shape or proportions of the large and small box above and below the mat can always be arranged to suit the mat you select, within reason of course. It is even advisable to try different sizes for this purpose so as to avoid a monotonous repitition of the same kind of ads.

DON'T WAKE HIM UP!

—he certainly must have been asleep. Because it started to get dark with every indication of an approaching storm of no small proportions, and here he was with a great big theatre on the main street.

As it became dark his front should have been illuminated. Should have been fully lighted as a matter of fact so that everyone on the street could see the theatre.

But the manager and especially his cashier, located right out at the front doors, failed to meet the situation, and so throughout the storm, which lasted for the better part of two hours, the front of that theatre was as dismal looking and dead as a tomb. If none of the people on the street went into the theatre it was because they were not aware of the fact that there was a theatre to go into.

As we said before, don't wake him up. His boss will be doing that when they come to check him out.

TOM KANE AROUSED PLENTY CURIOSITY WITH A UNIQUE AD

A series of unique ads were run on "Arrowsmith" by Tom Kane, manager of the Sequoia Theatre, Redwood City, Calif., outstanding enough, we believe, to earn him a citation. At any rate we note that Advertising Director Bob Collier took occasion to reproduce one of the ads in his "Ad Bulletin" a short time back.

The copy in the accompanying reproduction tells its own story so about all the additional information we can pass along is that the ad was run on a Friday and Saturday, accompanied by a teaser in another section to effect that "Dr. Martin Arrowsmith, M.D., had a startling announcement for the Redwood City Public. Watch Monday's Tribune for Details." The "expose" was carried in the issue the day before playdate and copy was practically the same as reproduced in the ad except that name of picture, star and theatre were inserted.

A DOCTOR WHO BELIEVES IN ADVERTISING

The novel ads caused plenty of comment and we note that a Pasadena house duplicated the stunt. We're passing it along to other Club members with Tom Kane's compliments and if there's any further recognition due him for his display of originality we sincerely hope he gets it. In the meantime we'll be looking for further news about showbusiness in Redwood City.

VARIETY OF SELLING GAGS USED AT PIQUA BY MANAGER COWAN

Thanks to M. E. Cowan, resident manager of Schine's Piqua Theatre, Piqua, Ohio, we are able to inform readers on a few show-selling gags which have been used at that house for the past several weeks.

In addition to rigging up a most attractive front for "Polly of the Circus," a photo of which appears on this page, we note that he issued a herald which, along with appropriate copy on picture, carried spaces for 10 signatures. These were distributed by youngsters and a note at bottom stated that every child who returned heralds with signatures would be presented with a pass good for any performance!

The two-for-one idea was expressed by distribution of a small throw-away headed, "Let's Get Acquainted—Acquainted with you and your family. . . . Buy one admission ticket and bring your friend as your guest." The offer was limited as to time.

Other gags included the plugging of a team of radio artists with a calling card which bore names and a notation on margin, "Called But You Were Out"; a tie-up with a seed company for distribution of samples of flower seed in envelopes bearing advertising copy for both seed company and theatre; a special art herald for announcement of an Easter Fashion Show; a "closed for the day" card—gone to see 'Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood' at the Piqua," and use of the wall paper herald on the aforementioned picture, copy stating that "the paper was being scraped off the wall to make room for the crowds to see—."

We also note that Cowan is using his programs for editorial boxes on the subject of "refreshing qualities of entertainment," etc.; in other words, some institutional selling. We are glad to hear news from Piqua again, which used to be regularly represented in this department under Sid Laurence's name. The latter is still closely identified with show-selling along the Schine Ohio circuit.

KEYES IS GETTING GOOD RESULTS WITH RADIO BROADCASTS

W. A. Keyes, prominent Dayton exhibitor and owner of the Victoria Theatre, has inaugurated a weekly series of fifteen minute radio chats to movie fans and other radio listeners over Station WSMK.

Keyes' programs, which he conducts himself, are devoted a minute to the introductory announcement of the series, general copy on the information he would furnish in answer to questions from listeners; a boost for both the theatre and the current picture. The following minute and a half is devoted to a synopsis of the picture which does not reveal the climax or end of the story.

Six minutes are devoted to comment and interesting personality notes about the star, together with an outline of her career on stage and screen. Keyes talked for two and a half minutes on George Brent, bringing out the new popular hero's interesting and romantic life in Ireland and this country. After the notes on Brent, Keyes sang an Irish ballad, "Mother Machree," and made the final announcement, which consisted of an offer of complimentary tickets to the first 25 listeners who wrote letters requesting information about fans and pictures.

Newspaper space was taken to announce the first of the broadcasts and publicity was also secured on radio, theatre and general pages of the local newspapers. The first broadcast brought Keyes a preview gross several hundred dollars above average for the Victoria on such occasions.

L. W. McCuan, proprietor of the Cameo Theatre, Mountain Grove, Mo., has been experimenting with ads such as the one shown above and wants to know if it appeals to us as a variation from the straight 6" single column newspaper ad, which Mack has been using week in and week out until he tried the idea of using the same amount of space across the top of the page.

Situated as Mack is, in a small community which boasts of but a weekly paper, it looks as though his gag might work out very effectively. The very fact that it's entirely different from what he's been using ought to be in its favor. He does not show starting time in the above ad, but does so on heralds for his mailing list and on 3,000 programs wrapped each week in bread deliveries.

CARD PARTY HELD BY MISS BUCKMILLER WAS OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

More than 200 people were entertained a few weeks ago at a theatre bridge whist party as the result of invitations sent out by Myrtle Buckmiller, president of Baker Theatres, Inc., Baker, Ore. The affair was held at the Clarick Theatre and was an innovation in local society so far as the general invitation angle was concerned.

The idea of holding this affair was gained through Miss Buckmiller's attendance at several local parties which were packed and jammed with serious card players; hence, she figured that as long as it was such a popular pastime the theatre might as well get in on it.

Following the circularization of 250 local women with a form letter which was looked upon as a personal invitation, 'phone calls and other inquiries testified to the keen interest aroused in the party. Coffee, sandwiches and wafers were promoted free of charge from a wholesale grocery firm, and autographed, framed pictures of Clark Gable and Greta Garbo were provided as first and second prizes for the winners. At the close of the party Miss Buckmiller stood at the door and shook hands with all ladies as they left the theatre, thus meeting many whom she might not have come in contact with in any other way. The local newspapers all gave the affair a generous write-up.

According to Miss Buckmiller business was stimulated to a noticeable extent by putting over the stunt described above, as well as helping along the further building of good will. Another interesting fact is that she used a feature picture which was due for the shelf and succeeded in arousing interest in the star. It was a Bankhead and that star meant nothing in Baker, Ore. Now they are asking when Tallulah Bankhead's next will arrive. The bridge enthusiasts are also asking when the theatre will hold another bridge party on the stage. They liked the affair; they liked the music furnished them between times by the orchestra, and they liked the refreshments served by a number of girls from the high school.

We discussed the value of promoting these bridge parties from time to time in this department and Miss Buckmiller's letter serves as a reminder that the affairs can be made a most profitable investment for theatres with stages or mezzanines large enough to accommodate a fair sized gathering. The occasion can be made practically a costless one by way of promotion of whatever is necessary in the way of gifts, etc., from local merchants. The awards, in this case, were obtained from Hollywood. All in all it was time well invested and we venture the opinion that Miss Myrtle will hold another when the proper time arrives.

K. C. SHOWMAN PLAYS UP SHORT FEATURES

C BROOK CHAS RUGGLES IN "HUSBANDS HOLIDAY"
ADDED BING CROSBY AND OTHER UNITS

Photo above is proof that the manager of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, is not averse to dividing space on his marquee front between feature and short subjects, on this occasion featuring Bing Crosby in "One More Chance." All of which prompted Miss Peggy Goldberg, of Educational, to remark that the Newman manager is a smart showman.

Skouras To Get Liberty

The fate of the Liberty Theatre, Spokane house which went into a receivership some time ago and was subsequently bought in by Finklestein & Rosenberg, is said to have been definitely settled when Chas. Skouras visited the city a short time ago and entered into negotiations for its acquisition by the circuit he represents.

ITTIG STARTED OFF SERIAL PICTURE BY USING TWO-FOR-ONE

A two-for-one gag was successfully used by Erdman F. Ittig, manager of the Sterling Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to start off the first chapter of the serial, "Lightning Warrior."

To announce the showing he used pink-colored cards about the size of a postcard with copy reading, "Hey, Kids, Look." Name of theatre and playdate were followed by "This ticket and 15c. will admit you and one of your friends to see the first chapter of ———." The feature attraction and comedy were also mentioned.

Out of 2,000 cards distributed 745 were returned to the box office, plus 200 other admissions at the regular rate of 10c. Ittig thinks that this same stunt might work well in some other neighborhood and is therefore passing it along. The cards were largely distributed among schools.

SPENCER DID GOOD WORK ON CAMPAIGNS WAGED IN SYRACUSE

Harry Spencer, of New York City and points east, west, north and south, before leaving his post as manager of the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., to take command of the Lindy Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., added to his prestige as a showman of no mean ability by campaigns made on "Crowd Roars" and "Man Wanted."

The auto theme was kept in mind on the former picture by making up heralds in the form of speedometers for placing in all parked automobiles. Half-sheet heralds were also used all over the city. Again the racing theme was stressed with a special 40 x 60 front showing racing stars from various sections of the country, along with some actual racing scenes taken at the well known Syracuse track. Further color was obtained by having a local racing car driven around town and later displayed in front of the theatre.

A tie-up with Sears-Roebuck secured permission to use a high-wheeled car of 1905 vintage, which caused plenty of attraction and crashed the papers for some good stories. During the crack-up scenes in the picture these were tinted a light red to add to the thrill effect. Despite inclement weather the picture played to one of the best Sundays in the past year.

A newspaper ad headed "Man Wanted" was the means of obtaining some excellent publicity for the picture by that name. Following copy read, "Must Be Energetic; Good-looking; To Take The Place of One Who Had Fallen Down on the Job; Must Be a Provider of Romance and Thrills; Ready To Do Lots of Night Work. Apply (theatre address); Experienced Need Only Apply." A surprising number of calls were received via 'phone at the theatre, parties taking time to look up address in City Directory. Information on picture was given out by cashier when answering calls. Many letters were received.

Two days prior to opening of picture 200 window cards were placed in stores on the main street which read, "Man Wanted"; apply (theatre address) Friday and "Meet Kay Francis." These cards also caused plenty of talk, even taking people into the stores to find out what it was all about. Which, of course, sold the merchants on keeping up the display.

While on the subject of the Strand we must not forget to mention one of that theatre's features, a Boys Band of 100 pieces, which gives special concerts at Saturday morning Kiddie Matinees. This organization is called the Warner-Strand-Wurlitzer Boys Band, which immediately suggests the thought that it is tied-up with the Wurlitzer outfit for a substantial reduction on instruments, etc. All members of the outfit have been recruited from Syracuse schools, the oldest musician being 15 years of age. The boys are not only able to render a first class account of themselves in a musical way but are used for parades and the building of good will for the theatre. This summer the band will give a series of concerts in the Public Park as a means of providing new uniforms.

So much for the time being concerning Perry Spencer and the Syracuse Strand. We will tell you more at the first opportunity and feel sure that further news will be of interest to his fellow Club members.

SELLING THE NEWSREEL!

Here is the way the Criterion Theatre in Oklahoma City plugged their newsreel via newspaper advertising. We happened across this ad while going through a flock of theatre ad pages and it immediately attracted our attention. Thinking that others may be influenced to do likewise with so fine a selling slant as the newsreels we clipped it out of the paper and now reproduce it here.

Criterion

It must not be assumed that the Criterion gave the newsreel preference over the feature; that is not the idea. It is clearly a case of playing up a timely topic while plugging the newsreel.

Our advice is to give your own newsreels a much better break and they will do as much for you. If you still harbor a doubt about the drawing powers of your news reels, ask the first fifty patrons who come into your theatre what they think about it. Maybe then you will start running a special ad once in a while, especially when you happen to have some sort of a scoop.

SOBLER ON THE JOB WHEN STAR STOPPED OFF IN WINDY CITY

Right on the job when James Cagney passed through Chicago en route to New York City, Al Sobler in charge of advertising and exploiting for Warner theatres in Chicago territory, promoted a snappy auto speedster for exclusive use of the star while in town. The tie-up also included the sending out by the auto manufacturer of 100,000 circulars of a photograph of Cagney and car. "Crowd Roars" was the inspiration.

RESUME OF CAMPAIGN MADE BY FRED MEYER ON NEW MIX PICTURE

Following is a brief resume of exploitation done on the Tom Mix picture, "Destry Rides Again," by Fred. S. Meyer, managing director of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Several effective tie-ups contributed to the campaign.

Window tie-ups included sporting goods stores, on apparel; gift shops, on western paintings, etchings, etc.; book stores, on the book "Destry Rides Again;" another book tie-up with the Walgren Drug Company; tie-up with all Milwaukee depots on use of half-sheets with copy reading, "Welcome to Milwaukee and World Premiere of Tom Mix"; a tie-up with the two largest riding academies in city for displays of banner with copy, "Learn To Ride Like Tom Mix in 'Destry Rides Again,' Now Playing at Alhambra," and special Tom Mix riding classes conducted by same academies.

Downtown restaurants were also tied-up for use of rubber stamp on back of all meal checks, copy reading "Round Up Your Perfect Meal By Seeing Tom Mix in His First Talking Picture—Now At Alhambra." For a street bally a cowboy rode a horse similar in appearance to Mix's about town during the day, a sign on his back with copy relating to picture, theatre and playdates. Blue, silver and white colors made up the scheme for lobby and all art work.

It's been a few weeks since Showman Fred Meyer's name has appeared on these pages and we're mighty glad to see him and his familiar Alhambra again represented. Other exhibitors will be playing Mix films, now that Tom has become articulate on the screen, and we're sure that the suggestions outlined above will be appreciated by many other Round Tablers.

ROUND TABLE BIOGRAPHIES

Robert Gardner

Because it was one of the country's leading industries and interesting, as well, Robert L. Gardner decided at the age of sixteen years to enter showbusiness, and this he did via a job as usher in the Rex Theatre, Sumter, S. C. He is at present assistant manager of that house.

He worked at ushering for some little time, picking up this and that information on theatre routine and was later advanced to the job of doorman. When an opening occurred for the post of assistant manager his past experience ably fitted him to take that position and he's been at it for the past year. Only twenty-two years old at this writing, Gardner is well up the ladder and it probably won't be long before he will be placed at the helm of his own house.

Gardner was born in Sumter and educated in the grammar and high schools of that city. Were he to start all over again, showbusiness would claim his attention, and there's no indication on his part at the present of ever leaving this field for another. Yes, he's married.

FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Mitzi Green

New Orleans Saenger

After an introduction made up of scenes from the talking pictures in which she has appeared, the small Mitzi Green steps out on the immense Saenger stage, faces a packed house which must have numbered over 3,000 and proceeds to give impersonations which had the audience calling for more even after she thanked them. This is not a film star making a personal appearance, but a first rate entertainer and a perfect mime. Miss Green impersonates George Arliss, Edna May Oliver, Maurice Chevalier, Mack of Moran and Mack, all singing different songs. Without the aid of any props, before a blue velvet drop, she puts it over with a sureness which older entertainers must envy. It is noticeable that she works her impersonations mostly around personalities who are more famous for their names in the theatre than for the parts they created. If this young star continues her work, she will be an actress who can actually submerge her own personality in a part, for at present she loses herself in the mannerisms of those she impersonates. She begged off with a nice speech, then closed with "Sing You Sinners."

N. T. G. and His Hollywood Gang

New York Loew's State

"Grany" is back at the State again with his "cuties," a lot of hard working kids who make up for the inefficiency of Granlund and the act as a whole. No thought whatsoever is given the thrown-together act, apparently anything goes, but the specialty performers do their work well and were rewarded for their efforts. Except for the work of Dotty Justin, John and Mary Mason, the little Indian Princess and a young boy, the rest of the revue is strictly burlesque.—E. D.

Robbins Trio

New Orleans State

This is a fast moving skating act which has several whirlwind novelties and is well dressed. The two men are costumed in velvet and silk with sashes sewed with brilliants; girl wears a white evening gown. The act consists of skating dances and acrobatic turns.

Kuznetzoff & Nicolina (8)

New York Roxy

This pair of radio stars, assisted by five guitars and a violin, offered a number of Russian songs, in a scene depicting the Casino at Monte Carlo. Each is the possessor of a fine voice and they are equally responsible for a fine reception.—H. P.

Bob Ripa

New York Palace

Billed as "Denmark's Juggling Genius," this young fellow, with a balancing complex, lives up to his billing. He does his work with the speed of lightning and is decidedly dextrous. The audience showed its appreciation.—E. D.

Mills and Rockwell Form a Partnership to Manage Acts

The recently formed partnership between Irving Mills and Thomas G. Rockwell brings many of the most famous colored attractions in the country under single exclusive management of the new company, Mills-Rockwell, Inc., 799 Seventh Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Duke Ellington and his Famous Orchestra, Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club Orchestra and Baron Lee and his Blue Rhythm Band, all of which were sponsored by Irving Mills, and the Four Mills Brothers and Don Rodman and his Connie's Inn Orchestra which has thrived under the supervision of Thomas Rockwell, now belong to the same group under this new management.

In addition, the new office represents several name white attractions, including Ruth Etting, Eddie Elkins and his orchestra, and Victor Young and his orchestra.

The new organization is one of the largest of its character in the country, not only from the standpoint of the important attractions which it controls, but from the complete personnel of specialists which head its various departments.

Irving Mills, as president, exercises general supervision of the activities of the organization; Thomas Rockwell devotes his energies to the radio field; Harry Hollander, for years an executive with Paramount Publix, has charge of theatre bookings; Herman Rose, long identified with the Columbia Phonograph Company, handles recordings and electrical transcriptions, and Ned E. Williams directs the department of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

NBC Artists Service Chief Makes Several Appointments

George Engles, managing director of the National Broadcasting Company Artists Service, has added to his staff William B. Murray, in charge of booking talent for radio and personal appearances; Marks Levine, booking classical talent for concert and operatic engagements.

Others added include Ernest Chappell, as contact man between the NBC program and sales departments; Ernest Cutting, contact man between the Artists Service and RKO Corporation; Clifford Cairns, manager of the Artists and Repertoire division of RCA-Victor, his assistant, Joseph Higgins, and staffs, in charge of recordings and booking dance orchestras.

May Appear on Stage

Warner is negotiating with Billie Dove for a personal appearance in the circuit's eastern houses on a tour of three weeks.

SINGERS

Sophie Tucker

New York Palace

"The International Red Hot Mamma" is still queen of vaudeville. The applause that greeted her at her entrance proved that. Miss Tucker sang the songs her audiences all over the world have loved to hear her sing. Ted Shapiro is still "The Great Tucker's" pianist, accompanying her for her singing of "Something to Be Thankful For," "Tears Won't Bring Him Back," "Lawd, You Made the Night Too Long," "My Extraordinary Man," and on her second encore the song she made famous, "Some of These Days." A clever interpolation of "Eli, Eli" was used in Miss Tucker's singing of "Lawd, You Made the Night Too Long," and it looked like the audience would never stop applauding. Miss Tucker worked for 15 minutes, and those 15 minutes were the fastest and most entertaining of the entire show.—E. D.

McCann Sisters (3)

New York Paradise

This trio of harmony singers have little to do in the "Hell's Belles" unit in which they are featured, but what they have to do is done in a showmanly manner. Their first number is the optimistic song, "Put the Sun Back in the Sky," which they sing with voices that blend harmoniously. They make a good appearance and are backed up by the dancing of the ensemble, which they lead, after the song, in a well performed rhythm dance. Their second appearance is toward the finish of the show and in this they again harmonize in a song, in a setting reminiscent of our conception of "Hades." These three girls have loads of personality and put their numbers over well, to good applause from the audience.—E. D.

Lita Gray Chaplin

San Francisco Orpheum

This artist, possessed of a pleasing contralto voice, proves a real hit, with her personality aiding in getting her offerings over. She gives impersonations of Sophie Tucker, Ethel Barrymore, Bing Crosby and Ted Lewis, but her best offerings are the renditions of "A Woman Without a Man" and "Walking on Air."

Doyle Four

New Orleans State

Four pretty misses, neatly dressed, crowd the top of a midget piano a la Helen Morgan and deliver a pleasing brand of song in the quartet manner. The act is clean looking and works well.

Jules Bledsoe

Yonkers Loew's

A song routine consisting of "My Song," "River, Stay Away From My Door" and "That's Why Darkies Were Born," rendered by this colored baritone, was well received. An enthusiastic audience called for an encore and Bledsoe responded with the song he made famous in the original "Showboat," "Ol' Man River." Bledsoe will please the customers.—H. P.

REVIEWS OF ACTS FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Leon Belasco and His Orchestra (9)

New York Palace

This colorful radio maestro and his nine accomplished musicians entertain the audience for 20 minutes. Their routine consists of popular and semi-classic numbers, played instrumentally and vocalized by Belasco and Vivian Janis. Belasco's singing, in English, Russian and German, proved to be one of the most enjoyable parts of the bill. Miss Janis' singing of two hot numbers earned a good hand. What her voice lacked in quality was doubly made up in personality.—E. D.

Wilfred DuBois

Brooklyn Fox

DuBois is a juggler who entertains all of the 12 minutes he is on. Working in one throughout the act, he juggles and balances tennis rackets, balls, cues, glasses, etc., with the greatest of ease, and has the attention of the audience all of the time.—E. D.

Joe Wong

New York Palace

This young Chinese boy is a bit of Crosby, Columbo and Vallee. His impersonation of these three crooners had the added feature of a likable personality, something that at times the originals lacked. He has incorporated into his act impersonations of Morton Downey, Cliff Edwards and Cab Calloway, all of which were well done. Clever comedy and good dancing are also outstanding. Running time, 10 minutes, all of it entertaining.—E. D.

Four Vanderbilt Boys

Detroit Fisher

They open as a collegiate quartet, caricatured, grouped about a miniature piano, all attired in misshapen fur bennys. A takeoff on radio crooners with a "mike," radio interval chimes, crazy announcements and a number entitled "Crosby, Columbo and Vallee" is good for a hearty hand and a round of laughter. The showy specialty tap routine that winds up their act seems to add nothing to it.

Leon Janney

Cincinnati Albee

This juvenile screen personality, who is coheadlined, was greeted with hearty applause on his initial entrance. Accompanied by an unbilled pianist, Janney introduces himself with a song in which he makes specific reference to his picture routine and his life in Hollywood. He then announces a series of caricatures, explaining that they are just that, and not impressions. These include Ted Lewis, John Barrymore, consisting of a take-off on the picture, "Grand Hotel," Marlene Dietrich and a movie usher, each caricature being accompanied by a bit of typical costume, action, mannerism or distinctive characteristics of the original. For an encore he does a nifty soft shoe dance, and this lad swings a mean set of pedals. His peculiar laugh so familiar to screen fans is given several times throughout the turn.

Bernice Kettler

San Antonio Plaza

This fair maiden can make the baby grand piano do everything but talk.

Jack McLallen (3)

Cincinnati Albee

Very little, if any, change in routine of the act since playing this house several months ago. However, Dorus Elsingson has succeeded Mrs. McLallen as the "Sarah" of the trio, and proves an excellent foil to McLallen in her "poetry reading" bit. The same is true of the wop stooge. Miss Elsingson sings a medley of 1932 song hits, and does them in magnificent voice, which savors of the grand opera stage. Regardless of the absence of anything new in the general comedy business, the trio keeps the house roaring. It is a splendid closing act.

Six Accordion Boys

New Orleans State

This is a clever, versatile act of accordion players who fit in with a unit show nicely. They even work with the line girls as steppers. The boys play their accordions well, stage their act nicely, allowing for solo spots and teamwork, closing with a strong jazz finish that takes a nice hand.

Norman Thomas Quintette

New York Palace

Here's a group of clever colored entertainers who stopped the show. The act includes a pair of smart hoofers, a singer who goes over and a novelty drummer who rates on a par with Jack Powell. A very good bit of variety.—H. P.

Jack Roshier and Shaggs

Denver Denver

Shaggs is a dog, and a smart one. He will stay put in any position his master desires, and can skip the rope along with the best of them. Jack has a good line of chatter.

Mills, Kirk and Martin

Philadelphia Mastbaum

Varied and snappy line of gags, tap dancing, mandolin and uke playing and clowning. These three men took five curtain calls.

Alfred Latell and Sylvan Dell

New York Audubon

The act consists of antics of Latell in the costume of Bonzo the dog. It opens with rapid-fire talk by the girl, Bonzo replying by series of growls and howls. Laughs are supplied when he smokes a pipe, has an attack of mal de mer and cuts up generally. Good for kids and adults alike.

Russian Canine Actors

Milwaukee Wisconsin

A troupe of educated puppies, who stage a comedy drama without prompting from their trainer on the stage, offer something new in canine entertainment. The dogs go through their paces in a manner which is good for plenty of laughs.

DANCERS

Renoff, Renova and Bekefi

New York Palace

A firstclass dancing act, by far the best of its kind to play the boards here in a long time. The act opens with a song and dance introduction by the Sinclair Twins, two young girls with ability and plenty of personality. The first routine presented by the famous Russian trio is a fancy ballroom dance. They gained the audience's attention and held it throughout this and their closing dance of adagio work. In between the two specialties, the Sinclair Twins do a song and some snappy dancing. This sensational act earned the great applause given them.—E. D.

Pat Rooney and Pat Rooney III

New York Loew's State

The name "Rooney" is still associated with first class entertainment and Pat junior is carrying on the tradition of the family in a capable manner. His dancing is modern and he works with an ease of motion which is a heritage. During the fifteen minutes that the senior and junior Rooneys work, they offer modern dancing, gags, and naturally the dance made famous by the elder Rooney, twenty years ago. This is a great act and the audience were reluctant to have them leave.—E. D.

Ray, Ellis and La Rue

Philadelphia Mastbaum

Esthetic dancers, in conjunction with the Mastbaum Ballet, put a topnotch number which depended largely on an original and elaborate setting for effectiveness. Back of scrim curtains and with a wave effect in the background, the Mastbaum Ballet as mermaids in flowing green draperies danced on the bottom of the ocean with fish swimming about. Ray, Ellis and La Rue made a novel entrance as the two men moved over to a large shell at one side of stage, lifted the upper half, and out stepped Miss La Rue in pale green. She glided into a graceful aesthetic dance, harmonizing with the wave motion. After some spectacular passing between the two men, a huge octopus came floating by and seized the girl. After a thrilling fight she was rescued by Ray and Ellis.

Bill Robinson

Portland RKO Orpheum

Bill Robinson, with an augmented company, "Hot From Harlem," headed the initial stage show known as the "two a week" at new low prices, and in spite of the opening of three parks and various other attractions, proved popular entertainment. Bill's tap dancing brought them up from their seats and he was also master of ceremonies for foot races along Broadway that brought additional shekels in the box office.

Dorothea and Her Yellow Jackets

New York Capitol

This act, composed of Dorothea and four boys, offers a flash of routine of tap, acrobatic and Russian dancing which disclosed a talented quintet. The customers were well pleased.—H. P.

Billie Shea

San Antonio State

A good tap artist this young lady, and she should go well in any theatre booking stage shows.

New York Triboro

The beautiful young ladies present sensational routines of dancing. Wallie Brisham opens the act with an introductory song with Bernice and Emily entering via a special prop stairs in the center of the stage. The girls are dressed in summery gowns and after dancing down the stairs go into a neatly done high-kick dance with Brisham.

Lee Murray, dressed in evening suit, offers an eccentric "drunk" dance in which he features "killing" falls and some steps that make him appear to be bouncing. Bernice and Emily next offer a most graceful acrobatic dance, featuring turn-overs, high-kicks, hand-stands and walking on their hands. All of this is done in perfect unison and they earn a good reception for their efforts. Brisham next offers a song and eccentric dance that is well done (the dance, not the singing). Bernice and Emily, after a change of costume, offer a most difficult acrobatic routine on the flight of stairs, earning a good reception. A flashy song and dance routine by the entire company closes this entertaining act.—E. D.

Harland Dixon

New York Palace

Dixon and Peggy Cornell offer 15 minutes of entertaining dancing interspersed with good clean comedy. They present a dancing skit, "Around the Town," featuring the dances of different sections of New York. Dixon's impression of how John Barrymore would dance if he were a dancer was a screamingly funny bit. In it, he talks lines as he dances. Besides this dancing, Harland does a hot rhythm dance that got a good hand. The act as a whole was well received.—E. D.

---

Harry Losee

New York Capitol

Harry Losee, who recently appeared in the ballet, "Salome," offers a character dance, portraying a red-skinned Indian. He is supple, graceful and a keen student of the Dance. This audience enjoyed his work.—H. P.

John and Edna Torrence

Detroit Michigan

Under a border spot, to Lombardo's rhythm, these two offer a unison waltz that has class, but does not open with the best of timing. The act is good for the most exacting audience.

Paul Draper

New York Roxy

Though this personable young fellow's time was limited to but one rhythm-tap routine, in the finale of the show, he proved himself an accomplished dancer.—H. P.

---

Gloria Gilbert

New York Capitol

Gloria Gilbert offers toe-dancing which boasts of grace to the nth degree. Her topspin ranks her with the best and stopped the show.—H. P.

---

The Riley Kids

Detroit Michigan

Two girls and three boys in this group range in size from that of a ten-year-old boy to a girl and boy of twenty. Speed and effervescence characterize their work. A smart number is the syncopated military tap that closes the act.

COMEDY

Yorke & King

New York Capitol

Yorke & King, the originators of "the old-fashioned tintype," open their act in a sleigh of the gay nineties. The audience roared at his love-making. The next scene, a satire on royalty, is another sure-fire laugh, with the pay-off being when Rose King does a most hilarious imitation of Galli-Curci. Their daughter, True, also has a bit in this act.—H. P.

---

Pat West

Milwaukee Wisconsin

West, billed as "The Famous Admiral of Jesters," entertains with comedy patter, addressed for the most part directly to the audience. He also offers a comedy song selection consisting of a medley of tunes from popular hits, past and present.

---

Jim McWilliams

New York Palace

McWilliams, with his rapidfire hokum about nothing in particular, went over big at this show. With a few exceptions, his act is new, with up-to-the-minute gags based upon commercial blurbs of radio announcers. After working the audience into a most receptive mood, McWilliams delivers a "political speech," which stops the show.

---

Violet Carlson

New York Palace

The caricature prima donna of many musical shows is an accomplished comedienne. Her act includes an impression of a French prima donna, an "Argentine Tango" bit, some very fine singing, a comedy bit on the opera, "Rigoletto," in which she does some fine playing on a tenor saxophone, and loads of comedy talk. Little Miss Carlson stopped the show cold and made a smart curtain speech. The act runs 14 minutes.—E. D.

---

Buster and John West

New York Palace

Ten minutes of hilarious comedy. Both the boys are in sailor uniform, John at the piano and Buster capably holding up the comedy end, with his talk, singing and especially his dancing. Dorothy Van Alst does a good high-kick dance as her specialty and acts as foil for Buster's laughable antics. Buster's eccentric comedy dancing was very well done and received a generous share of applause.—E. D.

SPOTS & SHOTS ON BROADWAY

If you had been to La Guinan's La Casa on the Merrick Road last tuesdayawning, you'd have seen the-just-as-good-as-new Walter Winchell dancing with Lupe Velez. His tablemates were Mark Hellinger, Texas and Barney Gallant.

Yorke & King, the vaudevillians, celebrated a quarter of a century as partners the last twenty-three years as man and wife.—Oh, you mean sparring partners?

The Paramount clock stopped at 11:25 A. M. one day last week with the result that 36½ actors (including a midget) were late for the early performance.

Jack Powell has been signed again to appear in the fall edition of Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade."

Just got a letter from Billy Beard, better known as "that party from the South." Billy is just about the entertainingest man we've ever met and naturally we weren't the least bit surprised to learn that he just signed for a commercial hour over radio station WSB, Atlanta, Ga.

Did you know that Tucker and Schuster, known as the "Delivery Boys," have just completed 34 consecutive weeks in vaude and are being propositioned for a Broadway show next season?

Nick Kenny, radio scribe for the Daily Mirror, says: "A needle of praise to Mrs. Henry Moskowitz for discovering Gene Charles, first tenor at St. Patrick's Cathedral—." Just another one of those hard-to-beat combinations.

One day last summer, while over at the Paramount studios in Austoria, we watched the shooting of a two-reeler, "Retire Inn," featuring the rotund comedian, Billy House. One of the extras was James Dunn. Two months later, the extra was a star.

Then there was the gangster who refused to see the picture, "Scarface," unless he was allowed to pack a rod.

Broadway: The long lane that has a turning—from bright lights to dark moments—when the electric bill arrives.—Herman Pincus.

Comedians Dickering with Radio

Olsen and Johnson, stage and screen comedians, currently appearing at the RKO Orpheum in Portland, Ore., are negotiating for a Radio contract covering stage, film and radio performances.

Leaves House After 220 Weeks

Bert Williams and his 19 musicians have moved to Olentangy Park, Columbus, Ohio, with the discontinuance of vaudeville and orchestra at the Loew's Ohio, in Columbus. Mr. Williams established a record of 220 weeks, slightly over four years, at the Ohio.

STAGE ATTRACTIONS

OVERTURES

YASCHA BUNCHUK (New York Capitol) adopted for his overture selections from the musical comedy, "Rio Rita." Opening with an ensemble chorus of the song "Rio Rita," the violins then offered a solo, the brass accompanying softly. Modulating from another selection, there was a trombone solo with a violin obligato, after which the ensemble closed with the theme strain of "Rio Rita." This overture was well received.

LOU FORBES (New Orleans Saenger) and the pit orchestra again demonstrate they are a feature attraction. The overture opens with a tribute to John Philip Sousa with Forbes leading the orchestra through parts of "Washington Post," "The Thunderer," "Semper Fidelis," "Hands Across the Sea," "El Capitan," "The White Man," "The Black Man," "The Red Man," "Stars and Stripes." The second part of the overture is "Lazy Day," which opens with an orchestral introduction, then is taken up for a vocal chorus by Lee Mason. "You Beautiful Son of a Gun," however, is the show stop with clowning by the entire orchestra. It opens with a vocal trio consisting of Mason, Gordon Kirst and Godfrey Hirsch singing the song, then chatter by Kirst, Forbes and El Fontana, winding up with "Auf Wiedensehn." Louis Prima brings the clowning to a close with his crazy rendition of the song and his barrel house trumpeting.

MURRAY AUSTRIAN (Yonkers Loew's) did himself proud with his orchestral selection. This was the overture from the popular opera "Orpheus," by Offenbach. Opening with ensemble instrumentation, Austrian then offered a violin solo, playing softly and gradually changing to a crescendo which was the cue for the staccato ensemble finale. Austrian took several bows.

FRED SCHMITT (Denver Denver) and his 15 musicians are mighty popular in Denver, and their popularity was added to by their "America" overture during Memorial Day week. For the close the curtains are drawn, revealing a huge United States flag on the back drop, as a dozen high school cadets march out, drill briefly and briskly, and give a salute. Ralph Hansel, a recent addition, xylophonist, plays "Roses of Picardy" as a solo offering. Until his joining the Denver theatre orchestra, he was the most popular local radio star, being on sustaining programs at KOA, the largest station here.

UP AND DOWN THE ALLEY

Hello, Everybody (try and picture me saying it like Kate Smith does, just try). . . . We'll start out this week with a choice bit of scandal; Denny "Sooky" Lamb was seen making love to Doris Roche, wife of that really funny comedian, Sammy Cohen, in one of the dressing rooms of the Palace, the other day. . . . So that the scandal will not take on too much weight, I'll have to let you in on all the dope. . . . "Sooky" is the year-old son of Belett and Lamb, one of the acts on the bill. . . . Incidentally, the Palace is the first house in which this chubby young fellow has appeared and, though he didn't get any billing on the marquee out front, he was billed over every one backstage. . . .

Fritz Hubert, the male member of that famous "inebriate" team of Fritz and Jean Hubert, who was injured while doing his "killing" falls in the act at the Palace last week, is on the road to recovery and will be back trying to "kill" himself all over again soon.

Just heard from Ron and Don, the organ twins. . . . They have been in Chicago for the past few weeks vacationing and now inform me that they opened at Warner's Hollywood, Los Angeles, last Thursday. . . . Good luck, boys, and let's hear from you again soon. . . . I learn that Bob West is at the Fox, Seattle, and not at the Paramount. . . . Lee Weber, who for the past year has been at the Memorial, Boston, was in town for a few days, visiting his friends, and taking his Father (short "a") places. . . . Jimmy Daubert, formerly with Loew's and RKO in Cleveland and Buffalo, is now featured organist at the State, Allentown, and is the only "live" musician in town. . . .

Sammy Smith, formerly of Shapiro Bernstein and of Witmark's and now professional manager of Southern Music, didn't know until last week that he has a good baritone voice. . . . Some one sold him the idea of taking vocal lessons and you just wait until the fall; we'll be hearing Sammy on the air. . . . Well, that's all for this week. S'long.

ED. DAWSON

ORGAN SOLOS

DON MILLER (Detroit Michigan) has taken over Gutow's place at the console. He is not unknown to Detroit audiences having held sway at the Paramount and State for some time a few years back. Sounds of recognition greeted him when he made his opening appearance at a console on the stage. The single number of his solo, "Masquerade,"—a German importation, unfamiliar, but well received—was set off by a ballet waltzing before a cut drop which depicted a huge carnival mask.

MILTON CHARLES (Philadelphia Mastbaum) at the organ, with the console garlanded with roses, sang "I Send My Love With These Roses." For his singing class he selected eight old-time numbers: "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," "To My Indiana Home," "Alexander's Rag Time Band," "Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight," "Sidewalks of New York," "Whispering," "In the Good Old Summer Time" and "My Blue Heaven." In all these the audience joined with a will and gave him a rousing hand.

"WEN" KENNEDY (Champaign RKO Virginia). This week's organ presentation was compiled with the idea of "Drowning Those Examination Blues," and to hail the coming vacation period. The organist and theatre cater to the University of Illinois students, and "Wen," extremely popular with them, usually concocts a solo that will "go over" with the "gang." The set opened with Kennedy playing "Pig In the Parlor," to which the audience first hummed and then whistled. Then a slide was flashed on the screen with the words "Drown Those Exam Blues," and the audience clapped hands during the playing of the number. Followed a vacation slide and a vacation parody on "Jingle Bells," and then "Happy Days are Here Again," "Ach, du Lieber Augustine" and "Hallelujah." Next he suggested that the departing students review the song hits of the season and sing them. The five numbers Kennedy chose were lustily sung and fine applause was given him.

MISS WINWORTH (Seattle Fox) was the featured organist during the showing of "Grand Hotel," playing the beautiful theme waltz from the German film, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," and other popular numbers.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributors. Where they vary, the change is probably due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1931, unless otherwise specified.

Now they're "shooting" it on location, too

FOR some time after its announcement, Eastman Super-sensitive Panchromatic Film was used chiefly under artificial light. Now many cameramen are "shooting" it on location, too ...for these reasons: (1) Its speed substantially lengthens the photographic day...(2) It offers special advantages in photographing certain types of scenes and costumes...(3) In all scenes it yields that subtly superior quality which marks the most advanced motion picture photography...(4) It gives the cinematographer a single negative medium for all purposes...a medium which, once fully understood, affords a range of possibilities bounded only by the user's imagination and technical skill. Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

reveals "Variety"

The number of stars who are consistent boxoffice regardless of stories can be counted on two hands. A check with theatre operating departments and film buying sources reveals a total of only 11 whose draw maintains an average of 25% or more above the house average.

Falling into this circumscribed major star group is one team and a quartet, Gaynor-Farrell and the Four Marx Bros., respectively. Otherwise the personality draws are singletons, including Harold Lloyd who up to now had made only one a year, and Charlie Chaplin who has done only 'City Lights' in the past five years.

You're old enough to know the facts, so . . .

Pardon us, while we take our star light from under the bushel.

MR. AYLESWORTH'S BAD NEWS

ONLY a few minutes ago, practically speaking, Mr. Merlin H. Aylesworth came down Fifth Avenue from the offices of the National Broadcasting Company and crossed over to Broadway to divide his time with the presidency of RKO. That immediately made him what movieland calls a Major Executive. And that in turn would imply a responsibility to and for the motion picture industry. Now in the manner of Major Executives, Mr. Aylesworth has betaken himself to Hollywood and the speaker's rostrum, with, it may be observed, a most sweeping assumption of a position of devastating authority. Speaking before a meeting of the officers, directors and branch chairmen of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Mr. Aylesworth is quoted in the news dispatches of the United Press, published across the nation, as saying:

> Hollywood, June 13 (UP).—The billion-dollar motion picture industry faces bankruptcy within ninety days unless drastic measures are introduced to save it, Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of R-K-O and the National Broadcasting Company, warned fellow producers tonight. The first company that "sacrifices its pride" and applies for receivership will find every other major studio following, he declared. Financiers have refused to continue supplying funds for producing companies, Aylesworth said. He admitted the "drastic measures" necessary to keep the companies solvent have not been figured out.
> "Ridiculously large salaries" paid to stars and executives have sapped the strength of film companies, but receiverships would invalidate many of these contracts, according to Aylesworth.
> "The industry is facing the economic fact that attendance has fallen from 10,000,000 a day in 1928 to 6,000,000 a day for the first four months of 1932*," the executive said. "Film companies are not as independent as they would like to think. I would say they are interdependent, and if one goes to the wall, they all will."*

Words such as these are scarcely spoken across a conference table of industry without first a cautious survey of those in the room. That the responsible head of a corporation in the peculiar responsibility of RKO, what with its motion picture and theatre commitments, its relation to the Radio Corporation of America and back of that the great General Electric and Westinghouse, and its share of stewardship in the vast Rockefeller Radio City projects, should so daringly become the herald of disaster and ruin in the presence of the American press pertains to an order of logic which he alone, if any one, can explain.

There could have been no assumption that a meeting in Hollywood, the Hollywood where the boudoir antics and backstairs gossip of tonight will be put on the air tomorrow, was a confidential gathering. The darkest cellar in Hollywood is less private than Macy's window in Herald Square, New York.

Mr. Aylesworth, in this speech, is selling the motion picture short, Radio City short, RKO short. He is in the position, as president of RKO, of inviting the public to spend its money at the box office for entertainment merchandise produced under what he sets forth as a condition next akin to bankruptcy. He asks the American picture-going public to buy failure on the installment plan, a ticket at a time.

And so comes to flowering Radio's latest experiment in movieland.

PRIDE VS. COURAGE

THE institution which we call "Hollywood," which has so much business with writers, seems to have a sad, sad time trying to get along with them. For some years now, and increasingly recently, writers of note emerging from terms in Hollywood have the most unflattering words for the motion picture production community, its spirit and its methods. It has happened so often, Hollywood has evolved a standard procedure, a formula of contradiction and denial. Writers are credible and quotable only when they praise the makers of pictures. Otherwise they are ungrateful liars.

It is just possible there is something to be said on both sides, but the motion picture might come off better if it should venture to do something on its own creative responsibility. There was sincere intent in the words of Miss Fannie Hurst and Mr. Heywood Broun speaking before the Motion Picture Club the other day in their plea to the motion picture to make its own material and end its endless borrowings.

"What Hollywood needs," observes Mr. Broun, "is more pride. It should say 'To Hell with the stage, to Hell with the novel.' It should be able to say 'This is our own'."

Mr. Broun is a trifle in error. The motion picture has plenty of pride, but not much creative courage. It will begin to stand on its own some day when it acquires skill commensurate with the power of the medium. In all the career of the screen no picture has made a tiny fraction of the impress on civilized life of any one of scores of novels, including, enumerating offhand, Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle," Zola's "Germinal," Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street," or, to turn back the years, Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Before the motion picture can see the day of such attainment it shall have to abandon a policy of production which makes it cringingly vulnerable to censorships, and so fawningly fearsome of the controversy which every original work impinging on vital issues must necessarily precipitate. When that day comes there will be a real power of the screen, a real ability of the motion picture to take a constructive place in society.

THE BOX OFFICE RATES THE PLAYERS OF 1931-32

Announcing the first returns in a survey of American theatres to name the Ten Biggest Money Making Stars

WHO are the greatest stars? In the only terms that they can be definitely, and must be ultimately, rated—the terms of the box office? To 12,000 exhibitors, including managers as well as owners of theatres, Motion Picture Herald has put this question, and the first returns in this nation-wide survey (covering the entire Continental United States) are herewith tabulated.

Specifically, the exhibitor was asked: Please list the 10 players who drew the greatest number of patrons to your theatre since last September, without regard to age of picture, length of run, nature of competition or conditions (weather, etc.) prevailing during exhibition.

The period of time involved is that of the regular production season of 1931-32, now coming to a close. Thus the product determining the exhibitor's answer represents a contemporary appeal of our screen personalities, measured as the motion picture industry prepares the goods it will offer for sale to the public during the season of 1932-33.

As the nation's exhibitors return the questionnaires with their decisions based on the records of their box office during 1931-32, these responses are recorded, analyzed and tabulated, and the data so compiled will be kept current, with the latest results published in each week's issue of Motion Picture Herald until the final returns are announced. This final tabulation will also be broken down into various classifications representing certain interesting and significant phases of this mass of exhibitor testimony.

Dressler Leads in First Returns

In the first returns, presented with this initial publication of the survey, Marie Dressler is the player cited by the largest number of responding exhibitors among their 10 best box office draws during the season of 1931-32. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, appearing in vehicles alone at the head of the cast, and also teamed with Polly Moran, outranked all others named with a percentage of 91.

This percentage means that in 91 per cent of the first replies (all those received up to time of going to press), Miss Dressler was named among the 10 players listed by the exhibitor as his best box office draws during the 1931-32 season.

The exhibitors, in accordance with the style of the questionnaire, listed the players in the order of their box office value. Thus it would be possible for a player to be named somewhere among the ten players on fewer questionnaires than another, yet be named in first position a greater number of times. This factor, an important one in the ultimate estimate of a player's real box office value to the exhibitor, will figure in a final ranking worked out through a system of points for each of the 10 possible positions, first position on a questionnaire counting 10 points, second position nine points, third position eight points, and so on. Presentation of the results in this form will be published at the close of the survey.

Beery Tops Male List

An interesting phase of the current ranking is the designation of feminine players for the first three positions in the list. Besides Miss Dressler, both Janet Gaynor and Joan Crawford were cited by more responding exhibitors than a male player. Wallace Beery—who, it may be pointed out, is frequently merely featured in a cast headed by another—was named on more questionnaires as a box office draw than any other of his sex.

The survey concerns itself pre-eminently with the ten biggest money making stars of the season, but somewhat as an afterthought—it is merely a postscript in the questionnaire—this question has been asked the exhibitor:

If you have a favorite story or play you would like to see made for the screen, what is it?

Ask for More Music

The number and calibre of the replies to this rather tentative inquiry now give it an important place in the whole survey. The answers promise not only many a tip to the producer, but considerable general comment reflecting the exhibitor's own appraisal of the entertainment interests he serves.

Common among the replies is a plea for more music in pictures. "Without music pictures are dead," declares one exhibitor. And still another showman has more than a suggestion: "I have several plays," he writes, "but do not know how to get even a reading."

All replies to the postscript are being as carefully recorded as the box office figures on players, and will be published at the close of the survey.

POLITICAL UNITS MAKE FOOTBALL OF MOTION PICTURES IN GERMANY

Nationalist, Catholic and Bolshevik Viewpoints Strive For Ascendancy, With Films As an Important Vehicle

by HANS TINTNER, Berlin

There are in Germany approximately 17 different political parties which are represented in the Reichstag. The Right wing consists of the national parties, the Left wing is composed of the Socialist parties. The middleclass and confessional parties form the Center. The radical section of the Right wing are the National-Socialists (called Nazis), headed by Hitler; the radical section of the Left wing are the Communists. Inasmuch as the future development in Germany will be based on the outcome of the battle between these two groups, these two radical parties, namely the extreme Right and the extreme Left, are in the foreground of all political discussions in Germany.

In no other country of the world are the political extremes so irreconcilable as in Germany. One is living in a thunder-storm atmosphere which probably can be cleared only by violent eruptions. Civil war is more or less officially preached.

Of course the leaders of the big political parties understand clearly that the film with its daily appeal to many million people represents a means of propaganda of highest perfection, and all parties are making efforts to secure a sphere of influence in the motion picture field of Germany, in order to guide public opinion according to their desires.

Three Forces Seek Control

There are principally three tendencies which strive for prevalence in German films, namely: the national, the Catholic and the Bolshevik view of the world. These three systems of thought are not harmonious, and, in fact, are definitely antagonistic at various points.

The representative of national politics in the German film is in the first line, the Ufa. Being Germany's most powerful motion picture concern, Ufa has large means available to propagate political conviction. The program of Ufa contains a great number of pictures, some of which are technically excellent, which are based on national and military stories appealing to the military tradition of the German masses, in order to keep alive the military spirit and the desire for power and authority.

However, the radical group of the Right wing in German politics which hails Adolf Hitler, the leader of the National-Socialists, as the apostle of the "Third Empire," is not satisfied with the film politics of Ufa. They do not wish to confine themselves to steeling the powers for defense and building up anew by constantly recalling in a careful and diplomatical manner the historical past of Germany, but they strive for a much more distinct political expression in motion pictures.

It has been repeatedly reported that Hitler is negotiating with the second largest German film concern, Emelka, in order to obtain influence on this concern. Of course, all European countries other than Germany, particularly France, have always been closely watching the political efforts in German motion pictures. The majority of the Emelka is at present in the hands of French financiers. The efforts of the radical group of the Right wing to obtain control of the Emelka as a powerful propaganda instrument have been parried by the French through a counter-proposition which has attracted great attention in all circles concerned. For instance, the Paris daily paper, La Liberté, stated that it is of highly political importance to maintain the French influence in the Emelka, in order to compensate through liberal and pacific films the tendencies of Ufa as far as these are too onesided from the French viewpoint. Heretofore Emelka had refused to show nationalistic pictures in its theatre circuits. Owning 55 theatres and with control over almost 1,000 motion picture houses, Emelka, although not as large as Ufa, possesses considerable power on the German theatre market. What enormous service, writes La Liberté, this second propaganda instrument could render for peace and how much it could neutralize anti-pacific tendencies.

The negotiations of the radical group of the Right wing with Emelka did not lead to any conclusion. The majority control of the second largest German motion picture concern is still in the hands of the French. Further observation of the political influences struggling for predominance in the German film leads us from the Right wing to the Center party. This is the powerful Bavarian Catholic party. There are in Southern Germany producing companies under exclusively Catholic control. Throughout Europe there exist press correspondents under Catholic influence. I had the opportunity to talk with a Flemish member of the regular clergy who was seeking a connection for information from Germany for a Catholic correspondence head-office. The viewpoints for selection of this material were to be in the first line of an ethical nature. He showed strong interest in all pictures which would be suitable to stimulate the sense for the beauty of nature and the striving for a pure and moral life. It is, of course, natural and only to be welcomed from a higher viewpoint that he was at the same time endeavoring to eliminate those aberrations of our industry which give the simple-minded and easily influenced people an incorrect idea of the life of the wealthy classes and which are likely to encourage the desires for merely earthly things and a superficial view of life.

Socialist Influence in Soviet Films

The influence of the Socialist Left parties in the German film industry is in the first line represented in those pictures which are imported into Germany from Soviet Russia. In these films the workman is always pictured in an extremely onesided manner as the hero, and the employer as the villain. The conditions in the Soviet State as described in these films are seen couleur de rose, if compared with the authentic reports from other travelers, and the Russian pictures which are contemplated and produced as vehicles for political propaganda within the Soviet State prove incomparably demagogical outside their domestic boundaries.

Ufa Represents Nationals; French Thwart Hitler's Efforts To Control Emelka; Socialist Influence in Soviet Films

The severe economic depression under which the broad masses of the German people are suffering at present accounts for the fact that these pictures find a large and enthusiastic public also in Germany. On the other hand, there is also a decided rejection of the Soviet tendencies in Germany, so that the exhibition of these Russian pictures is frequently causing a turbulent clashing.

The masses visiting the motion picture houses to amuse themselves do not generally realize how many of the films which seem to be merely entertaining pictures have been produced under political influence.

The German authorities, however, who are to protect free opinion as one of the highest republican privileges but at the same time must watch over the public order and the peace of a people disunited by political extremes, consider the German films with political tendencies as a source of great trouble.

Nazis' Influence Grows

Recent political events have enormously increased the influence of the Nazis, Bruening's resignation and the formation of a new cabinet of "national concentration," which is taking place now by order of President von Hindenburg, are the outward consequences of this change in power of the political parties. In the film industry, the increase in strength for the Nazis resulted in the appearance of a new national-socialistic trade paper called "Der Deutsche Film" (The German Film), the first copy of which appeared after the last German elections and on account of the result of these elections. This paper promises the German exhibitor energetic assistance against the amusement tax, against the so-called monopoly held by the electrical concerns, and against the allegedly grinding system of the distributors. It suggests the organization of national-socialistic units among the exhibitors, the following having appeared on the first page of the first issue:

"The national-socialistic groups within the Association of German Exhibitors are showing you the way how to fight against the concerns taking advantage of you, in order that you may not be left to the mercies of the dictatorship of the Jewish capital."

The Nazis demand also that the government shall cancel all contracts with stage players who are not German citizens, that in the future no contracts shall be made with foreigners, and furthermore, that the performance and exhibition of pacific stage plays and films shall be prohibited.

LESS THAN 250 HOUSES IN 34 KEYS ARE AFFECTED BY ADMISSION TAX

Assessment Will Be Passed On To Public, Representatives of Five Leading Circuits Decide at Meeting in New York

Less than 250 theatres in 34 key cities are affected by the admission tax of 10 per cent on charges of more than 40 cents, which became a law last week, special reports from all parts of the country show. In several cases the territorial surveys covered the entire state. Furthermore, in an appreciable number of instances it was indicated that prices would be reduced to the 40 cent maximum before June 21, the day on which the admission tax becomes effective.

That the tax will be passed on to the public was the decision of executives and representatives of the five leading circuits at a meeting at the Hotel Astor in New York this week. It was pointed out that in a few cases prices will be reduced, but these are situations in which the circuits previously had determined to place a lower charge in effect.

As to Broadway, where 12 theatres at present fall in the tax-paying classification, decision is still to be made as to the final charge for admissions. Publix took its stand for $1 on admissions in that bracket, which may be interpreted as a reduction to 90 cents exclusive of tax, or an absorption of the tax on the present $1 charge. E. A. Schiller of Loew's declared for a $1.10 admission, thus passing the assessment to the patrons.

Attending the meeting were Spyros and George Skouras, operators of Fox theatres, Moe Silver and I. J. Hoffman of the Warner circuit, John Balaban and David J. Chatkin of Publix, Harry Charnas, operating Warners' Broadway theatres, Leslie Thompson of RKO and Mr. Schiller.

From Washington came word of a ruling to come from the Internal Revenue Bureau that the tax would not be applicable upon tickets purchased prior to June 21 for performances following that date.

Following is a digest of the reports from the field on theatres subject to the tax:

Albany, N. Y.

Not one motion picture theatre is affected. Several houses have reduced prices to 40 cents or less within the last four or five weeks.

Atlanta, Ga.

The Paramount and Loew's Fox are the only two of the 25 houses in Atlanta and suburbs which come within the taxation range. Whether these two will reduce prices is still undetermined.

Baltimore, Md.

Five houses within the taxable group are Loew's Century, Europa, Hippodrome, New and Loew's Stanley. Loew theatres will not reduce prices but if the Century and Hippodrome drop stage shows price changes may follow.

Birmingham, Ala.

Two subject to the tax are the Empire and Alabama. Any changes of price have not been determined, but they are expected to reduce to 40 cents.

Boston and New England

The 10 per cent will be added at the eight downtown houses and in a number more affected in the Greater Boston area. In New England as a whole, approximately 75 houses charge more than 40 cents at night. Two-thirds of them charge 40 cents or less in the afternoons.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Two theatres charging more than 40 cents are Shea's Buffalo and Shea's Century.

Charlotte and North Carolina

Not more than 15 theatres in North Carolina are affected. Two in Charlotte are the Carolina (Publix-Kincey) and the Broadway (Warner). When prices are raised for special attractions, the tax will be effective.

Chicago, Ill.

Only 24 of the 290 theatres are concerned, as a result of wholesale price reductions within the year. Publix Balaban & Katz houses are in the majority, with Warners and RKO next. It is indicated that B & K may reduce prices in the neighborhoods. Theatres are: Chicago, Oriental, United Artists, Warner's Orpheum, RKO Palace, State-Lake, Uptown, Tivoli, Paradise, Norshore, Tower, Varsity, Granada, Marbro, Century, LaGrange, Congress, Berwyn, Harding, Capitol, Avalon, Stratford, Piccadilly.

Cincinnati, Ohio

Four theatres affected are the RKO Albee, RKO Palace, Lyric, Capitol. Decision on price changes has not been made.

Cleveland, Ohio

Five are subject to the tax: RKO Palace, RKO Keith, Loew's Allen and State, and Warners' Lake.

Columbus, Ohio

Loew's Ohio is the only theatre in the tax range.

Dayton, Ohio

None of the Dayton theatres falls in the taxation classification.

Denver, Col.

Five first-runs are affected: the Denver and Paramount, Publix; RKO Orpheum; Rialto, and Aladdin, owned by Harry Huffman. In the territory, Publix and Fox West Coast have three each.

Des Moines, Iowa

One theatre, the Paramount, is in the tax group, and its policy is now under discussion. As for the state, between 50 and 50 are affected.

Detroit, Mich.

The Publix houses may absorb the tax. The Fox will add the tax. The RKO Downtown may reduce from 50 cents to 45 cents. Approximately 14 Butterfield houses charge 50 cents top.

Dover, Del.

Dover's one theatre charging over 40 cents reduced prices Monday.

Harrisburg, Pa.

Four first-runs subject to the assessment are the State, Colonial and Victoria, all Wilmer-Vincent, and Loew's Regent. There are W.-V. houses in Reading, Allentown and Altoona, and Loew's has the Penn and Aldine, Pittsburgh, and the Colonial, Reading.

Plans to Reduce Prices Within Exemption Maximum of 40 Cents Are Reported in Appreciable Number of Cases

Houston, Texas

Three houses affected are the Metropolitan (Publix), Loew's State and the RKO Majestic. Outside of Houston, Publix first-runs at Beaumont, Orange, Huntsville, Nacogdoches and Galveston are reported to have reduced prices.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Five theatres subject are Loew's Palace, the Publix Circle and Indiana, Fourth Avenue Amusement Company's Apollo and Lyric. No changes have been made in prices.

Kansas City, Mo.

Three theatres, RKO's Mainstreet, Loew's Midland and Publix-Dubinsky's Newman are in the tax bracket, as is the Fox Miller in Wichita, Kan. The Kansas City Pantages is to raise prices for special shows July 1.

Los Angeles, Cal.

Exhibitors are still undetermined as to their procedure on the tax.

Louisville, Ky.

Three houses affected are the Loew and Fourth Avenue Amusement Company's Rialto and Strand.

Memphis, Tenn.

The only houses in the Tri-State territory are Loew's State and Warner Brothers, and two Loew houses and Pulaski in Little Rock, Ark.

Milwaukee and Wisconsin

Approximately 20 theatres in Wisconsin are affected and six in Milwaukee. The six are the Wisconsin, Palace and Strand, of Fox Midwesco, RKO's Riverside, the Warner and L. K. Brin's Garden.

Minneapolis, Minn.

The RKO Orpheum and Publix State alone are in the tax limit.

New Orleans, La.

Three houses in the taxation category are Loew's State, Publix Saenger and RKO Orpheum. Downward revisions are expected.

New York City

The two newsreel theatres alone are not affected on Broadway. Loew's New York falls within the bracket on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. (Estimate for entire city as yet incomplete.)

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Three theatres hit are the Criterion and Capitol (Regal-Cooper-Publix) and Warners' Mid-West.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Fourteen in the taxation class are the Mastbaum, Stanley, Karlton, Earle, Stanton, State,

UNSIGNED PLEA FOR DUAL BILL PROTESTED

Michigan Allied Finds 80 Per Cent Favor Return to Single Showings; 5 RKO Houses in Brooklyn Drop Triple Features

Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan, which has been campaigning vigorously for the elimination of double feature programs in the theatres of the state after July 1, was incensed at the discovery this week of an anonymously conducted counter-campaign to induce Michigan theatre owners to continue the dual bills.

Unsigned bulletins were circulated among state exhibitors which featured propaganda in favor of double feature programs and pointed out, as an argument in their favor, that double headers in baseball always attract the largest crowds.

Say 80 Per Cent Favor Change

The counter program meets the Allied unit's campaign against double features at a time when an estimated 80 per cent of the exhibitors in Detroit had signified their willingness to return to single feature programs after July 1. The Publix theatres are the only important houses in the city whose attitude toward double features remains undetermined, although local Allied leaders are of the opinion that the circuit's houses will eventually agree to the elimination of the dual bill policy.

A spirited letter attacking the writer of the anonymous circulars, and questioning the motives for his championing of double features, was issued by the Michigan Allied unit. It says, in part:

"Just about the lowest form of human reptile is the sender of anonymous letters. Lacking the courage to say what he thinks, he sends out a barbed statement or letter but does not sign his name. One or two reasons can be assigned. Either he lacks the courage of his convictions or he has some ulterior motive for sending out the letters, but can't stand the spotlight of constructive debate.

"Get Back to Show Business"

"In such a category comes the latest form of anonymous publicity from the pen of a certain fellow in Detroit, who, it has been said, has indulged in this sort of thing before. In fact, his activities along this line are pretty well known to every one and only lack of absolute proof at this writing makes it impossible to name him.

"Certainly his purpose is obvious. Apparently he has some pictures to sell and fears that the elimination of double billing will make it harder to sell pictures.

"The association had no ulterior motive when it started the campaign against double billing. The sooner we can get away from double billing, give-aways, added attractions, etc., and get back to the show business, the better for all. Elimination of double bills in Detroit is the starting point."

Triple Bills Ended In Five RKO Houses

A policy of triple features in five RKO houses in Brooklyn on Friday nights has been terminated, through the efforts of Rudy Sanders and Leon Rosenblatt, independent exhibitors, who met last week with Nate Blumberg of RKO. Theatres involved are the Greenpoint, Orpheum, Prospect, Bushwick, Dyker. It had been the practice to preview the new week's feature following the final double bill program each Friday night. The practice was recently termed by Harold B. Franklin, head of RKO theatres, as "an evil."

Sees Double Feature Harmful to Children

"Too much rich entertainment diet for children," is the way Mrs. Richard M. McClure, chairman of the film department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs at Chicago, last week described the double bill. "Children come out of the theatre after sitting sometimes four hours. They are over-excited, confused, weary and benumbed, for the double feature policy has been too much for mind and body. Double features must be discontinued if we are to develop better films," Mrs. McClure said.

Ina Claire Quits Films for Stage

Ina Claire, stage and screen actress, has announced on the Coast that she has terminated her film contract with Samuel Goldwyn by mutual consent. Explaining that she has taken the motion picture "too seriously," Miss Claire said she will make no more motion pictures. Her vehicles had been distributed by United Artists.

Commenting on her decision, Miss Claire said: "It didn't work. I'm a stage actress. I need time to find the right play, the right part, the right director, to devote meticulous attention to makeup, lines, my part. Movies were all wrong for me. I made mistakes. I didn't have my say. I took the movies too seriously."

The actress is at present appearing on the stage in Hollywood in "Reunion in Vienna." After two months on the Coast she will go to London to play the same part there for Gilbert Miller, she said.

Lightman Raps Double Bills At Wisconsin MPTO Session

M. A. Lightman, president of the MPTOA, national exhibitor organization, and Fred S. Meyer, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, joined in severely criticising the double feature policy, at the opening session of the two-day annual convention of the Wisconsin unit, at the Hotel Pfister in Milwaukee.

Mr. Meyer also recommended condemnation of the Brookhart bill to ban block booking, and declared for reasonable zoning.

World Wide Buys O'Neill Play

World Wide Pictures has purchased the screen rights to the Eugene O'Neill play, "Recklessness," which will be produced as "Gambling in Souls."

Houses That Will Pay Admission Tax

Circle and Uptown (Stanley-Warner), Fox, Arcadia (Principal Theatres), Tower, Carmen (both independent).

Portland, Ore.

Two theatres affected are RKO's Orpheum and the Paramount.

Providence, R. I.

Five houses are in the range: Fay's, Majestic, RKO Albee, Paramount, Loew's. None is reducing prices.

Richmond, Va.

Four theatres subject to the tax are Loew's, the Capitol (Bendheim-Rosenbaum), and Wilmer-Vincent's National and Colonial.

Salt Lake City, Utah

The Capitol is the one downtown theatre affected. The Paramount and RKO Orpheum recently reduced prices.

San Antonio, Texas

The one theatre in San Antonio in the tax range is the Texas.

San Francisco, Cal.

Eight first-runs affected are the El Capitan, Warfield and Paramount, of Fox; Golden Gate and Orpheum, RKO; the United Artists, Warners, and Film Arte (independent). Others are four of the United California Theatres—the Coliseum, Alexandria, Rialto and Uptown. In the Oakland territory, six charging above 40 cents include two independent, one RKO and six Fox.

St. Louis, Mo.

Four taxable houses are the Missouri (Publix-Skouras), the Ambassador, Fox Grand, and Loew's State. Only rarely is the charge above 40 cents elsewhere in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

St. Paul, Minn.

Three houses come within the tax grouping: the Paramount and Riviera and the RKO Orpheum.

Tampa, Fla.

None of the Tampa houses charges more than 40 cents.

Wilmington and Delaware

Only three theatres in Delaware are taxable, and these are the Aldine and Arcadia of Stanley-Warner and the Loew's Parkway. Three downstate houses, the Capital of Dover, the Reese of Harrington and the New Plaza of Milford reduced prices this week.

Italian Society Asks State Ban on Showing of "Scarface"

The Massachusetts branch of the Order of Sons of Italy in America has requested a state ban on exhibition of "Scarface" because of alleged reflections on the Italian race said to be imparted by the Howard Hughes picture. Governor Ely, it was said, will be asked to use his influence to prohibit the showing of the picture in Massachusetts.

A spokesman for United Artists, distributor of "Scarface," said that it contemplated making no change in the picture as a result of the Italian society's protest unless forced to do so.

'TOO MANY SUGGESTIVE TITLES' EXHIBITOR SAYS OF 'INDECENT'

Several viewpoints regarding motion picture titles in general, and "Indecent" in particular, are presented in the following discussions by exhibitors, prompted by a letter from Mr. M. H. Hoffman, Allied Pictures Corporation, 5360 Melrose Avenue, Hollywood. Mr. Hoffman in his communication, printed in the June 4 issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, invited expressions of opinion from theatremen regarding the title "Indecent" for his projected production of "Madame Bovary." Mr. Harry G. Waldron of the Blue Moon Theatre, Oklahoma City, writes as follows:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

Let me register one more objection to the sensational title—"Indecent," in this case. We have had a flood of "type" films every time a certain type film made a hit, starting with the mystery pictures introduced with the talkies, going through the musical "back-stage" type, and on into the gangster, newspaper, wild animal and sensational varieties.

The titles have the same cycles. And there are too many of the suggestive kind. If certain exhibitors defend them on the ground that they draw better, I want to point out the success of films like "The Birth of a Nation," "The Miracle Man," "Trader Horn," etc., to refute that argument.

Clean, wholesome films like "Daddy Long Legs," "Riders of the Purple Sage," "Politics," and "Cimarron" can show a better B.O. report than the smutty ones. Tastes vary, but the successful film is the one the entire family can enjoy, and what is just as important, families in the small towns as well as those in the large cities.

I have been an exhibitor since 1909, and am proud of my profession, and it is my conviction the brutally sensational titles hurt the industry, instead of helping. Out of 100 films with sensational titles, 99 have acceptably clean stories, the suggested thrill not being delivered. But the title is there, to turn away clean-minded people.

There have been 15 or 20 "Hell" titles released in the last season, including such masterpieces as "Merrily We Go to Hell," "The Lady from Hell," "The Doorway to Hell," etc. Just imagine the reaction when a reformer sees a title like "The Doorway to Hell" over a theatre entrance. It would agree with his opinion exactly.

The motion picture background on which I base my conclusions has been quite varied, including theatres in towns from 1,250 people to 400,000, and state-righting and free-lancing for 17 years in 22 states, mostly in the small towns. The rest of my experience includes 7 years singing and organ playing in churches of different denominations, with a lot of plain, hard jobs mixed in between.

In all my experience I have plainly felt the antagonism, not always well concealed, of church workers and members everywhere. Very, very few church people take their religion mixed with motion pictures, in my opinion, especially the more straight-laced sects.

I have talked to men who emphatically condemned all theatres, and then admitted they had never viewed a motion picture in their entire lives.

The ideal sales item, as I understand it, is one that will appeal to the largest possible group of prospects. A clean picture does this, as it can be enjoyed by those who relish smut, murders and horrors, while the dirty and sensational film automatically cuts off a large proportion of people as prospects.

The managers of downtown theatres in large cities have a rather sophisticated and cynical patronage, not at all reflecting the real, typical American family trade, the backbone of this or any other industry. Their viewpoint may be OK as regards poolrooms and speakeasies, but if they want the honest opinion of the great mass of clean-thinking families they had better go to the small towns and the suburban theatres to get it.

In times like these we need the support of the most critical, and pictures like "The Great Meadow," "East Lynne," "Politics," "The Big Shot," and "Emma" will get it. We must make money on the patronage of friends, because our enemies won't trade with us. The way to get their trade is to make friends of them. And we certainly can't expect to gain their friendship by asking them to walk through "The Doorway to Hell," and be "Indecent."

HARRY G. WALDRON,
The Blue Moon Theatre,

Mr. Will Burns, manager of the Princess Theatre at Joliet, Ill., has this to say of the title "Indecent" and of the elements of showmanship:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

The title "Indecent," from many past experiences of this kind, will no doubt disappoint the moronic types usually attracted by this type label . . . breed still more unbelief in our advertising and end up by adding insult to injury to our regular dependable patrons by forcing upon them another of the already tiresome "sex-plot" stories.

Would that we had the opportunity to invite the many members of a production staff to our theatres to stand in the foyers as the patrons filed out after seeing one of their masterpieces—to view the dissatisfied expressions on their faces, or to hear the adverse comments, pleas for "the good old time" relaxing, entertaining comedy-farces and clean dramas, or the inquiries as to where we get the idea they go hook-line-and-sinker for "sex" on the screen played to mixed audiences. Many times they ask what we must think of them to be certain this type entertainment meets their height of intelligence. Many times they wonder what kind of minds direct the production of this steady diet of screen play. And, (sad but true) many times they wonder if Hollywood doesn't really live up to the name given it by the Reformers.

The title "Indecent" doesn't necessarily reflect box-office value. More likely it deflects appeal in the majority of cases. Showmanship doesn't mean fooling the public with titles not related to the true plot, but showmanship does mean selling the public on the point of entertainment they will like about the picture you have. A showman is one who can find something about every picture to sell his prospective patrons.

WILL BURNS,
Manager, Princess Theatre,
Joliet, Ill.

Mr. A. J. Gibbons of Metropolis, Ill., raises a distinction between the "aesthetic viewpoint" and the "box office" in a letter to Mr. Hoffman, as follows:

TO MR. M. H. HOFFMAN:

I have just read your letter in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and because I am familiar with the story "Madame Bovary" I avail myself of the invitation to express an opinion.

From an aesthetic standpoint and because of the vogue of this novel I regret you did not retain the original title. From the standpoint of an exhibitor and the box office I am not so sure.

It is my opinion and belief that "Indecent" will get more dimes than "Madame Bovary."

There is this merit about your choice: Those who don't like "Indecent" need not go in the theatre, while "Madame Bovary" is more or less of a deception. It explains nothing while "Indecent" covers the whole work. If the audience doesn't like it they have little ground for complaint: They were under no illusion before they put up their money.

A. J. GIBBONS,
Metropolis, Ill.

THE NEWEST PICTURES

Two of the Promised Cycle of Films With Hollywood Background Appear and Set a Pace

by LEO MEEHAN, Hollywood

Two of the promised cycle of pictures with Hollywood and its studio life for backgrounds popped out this week. And if the others are as good as these samples, hurrah for Hollywood!

"What Price Hollywood," starring Constance Bennett, is a knockout, according to everyone who has seen it, including the opinion of this reporter. It is exactly the Hollywood that the fan magazine reader has long visualized: all the glamour, he little waitress becoming a great star, the high pressure of production activities, grand premieres, the works, in short. And it is capitally done from script to finish.

Supporting Miss Bennett in one of the best performances of her career are Lowell Sherman, Neil Hamilton, Gregory Ratoff in a trio of swell characterizations. Sherman, in the role of a famous director who discovers that film fame is soluble in alcohol, comes near stealing the show. Neil Hamilton never was better than he is as the nine-goal polo king who falls for a picture star. It all started with a film story by Adela Rogers St. John, who knows Hollywood from seams to stern. Scripting was done by Rowland Brown, Gene Fowler (who quit us in a huff last week), Jane Murfin and Ben Markson. George Cukor's direction is splendid. Here's Hollywood, without trying to be satirical, or weepy; just pointing up dramatically the romance, the tragedy, the comedy, the reality, the absurdities.

"Merton" Remade as Talker

The other one, from Paramount, is called "Make Me a Star," and is a new talking version of the old favorite, "Merton of the Movies." It is a distinct personal triumph for Stuart Erwin, long a favorite in less important roles. He does a whale of a job in the role of the Simsbury boy who tried to crash Hollywood as a dramatic actor, and turned out to be a riotous comedian. Sound has done a lot for this picture over the old silent version, and with a group of comic experts supporting Erwin, like Zasu Pitts, Ben Turpin, Helen Jerome Eddy, Sam Hardy, Arthur Hoyt and others, you can imagine it is a continuous cure for the blues.

Tallulah Bankhead's latest, "Thunder Below," with a Central America locale, is one of those neurotic mixtures of gin, tropical fever, sex and bad temper. Why will Americans go to the tropics, anyhow? If alcohol doesn't get them, some siren will, and they ought to know it by now. Goodness knows the pictures have warned 'em often enough. The exotic Tallulah has a terrific struggle trying to decide between her husband, her husband's best friend, and a "visiting fireman" (oilman, really, in this case) for her bedside companion. She winds up by dashing her fevered brain out upon a cliff theretofore inhabited by a flock of fairly peaceable sea gulls, who get very angry when she splashes down among them. The title, "Thunder Below," is ascribed to some allegorical connection with earthquakes: and the picture is very jarring at times. Tallulah is pretty listless most of the time. Good support is given by Charles Bickford, Paul Lukas, Ralph Forbes, Eugene Pallette and James Finlayson, actors worthy of better opportunities.

Small Town and Chorus Girl

"Big City Blues," which comes from the busy plant of the Brothers Warner, is a story of the small town boy who doesn't make good in the big city, and of the New York chorus lady who likes him, but doesn't prefer life in the country to life in the Mazda belt. So the boy (Eric Linden) goes home—sadder but wiser and minus his roll —and the girl (Joan Blondell) stays in New York and under her blonde wig. Walter Catlett does some very funny wise-cracking early in the piece. Police, night clubs, heavy drinking, fair-weather friends, all enter into the plot.

My secret service agents make some glowing reports about Doug Fairbanks' new picture, laid among the atolls of the South Seas and now in the process of cutting. They say Doug more nearly approaches the romantic style of his unforgettable "Robin Hood" than anything he has done since. It's due for a title of "Robinson Crusoe of the South Seas." What ho—maybe they'll make it "Robin Hood of the Coral Strands." Why not! Still, there's to be a tax on the electric light bills soon. Producers should begin thinking up short titles for the marquees.

The same underground source says Jack Warner and his boys are setting great store by "Blessed Event," due for preview in a few days. This features Lee Tracy and Mary Brian. Jack thinks he is going to give the cycle of "Broadway Columnist" stories something to shoot at. Well, he's not done so badly. Incidentally, a new type of exploitation has been done on this one. In "Week-end Marriage" and "Big City Blues" (both Warner productions) references to "Blessed Event" have been adroitly inserted.

Aleograph To File New Suit Against Erpi, Says Attorney

The Aleograph Company, which last week brought suit in Brooklyn for alleged patent infringement against Western Electric, plans a second suit in the near future against Electrical Research Products, Western Electric subsidiary, seeking to enjoin Erpi from further enforcement of recording contracts with producers, on the ground that the contracts are in restraint of trade and violations of the anti-trust laws, according to the attorney for Aleograph, Frank H. Booth of New York.

The suit, according to Mr. Booth, will be instituted to enable Aleograph to compete with Erpi in leasing or selling equipment to producers, thereby substantially reducing the present charge of $500 per negative reel, said the attorney's statement. The present contracts between the producers and Erpi do not expire until December 31, 1944, the statement says.

Consolidated Film Cutting Pay July 1

Substantial reductions in salaries of all officers and employees of Consolidated Film Industries will be placed in effect July 1, a meeting of the board of directors of the corporation, held late last week, was told.

The reductions, which vary according to earning classifications, were voted voluntarily by the management, according to R. I. Poucher, vice-president. Exclusive of these reductions, the payrolls of the corporation have been reduced 44 per cent since 1930, and other substantial economies have been effected, the directors were told.

Although H. J. Yates, president, reported earnings for the first quarter sufficient to meet the dividend requirements on the preferred stock, no action was taken by the directors on the quarterly dividend due June 30. The customary quarterly dividend on the 400,000 shares of preferred outstanding is 50 cents.

"Because of the uncertainty of present conditions," Mr. Yates said, "the directors thought it better to pass the dividend at this time, and to conserve the cash position of the company, thus providing additional working capital for the opportunities for new and profitable business which is expected to develop in the motion picture industry in the immediate future."

Father of Dick Sears Dead; Seaman of the Old School

Captain Eden W. Sears, father of Dick Sears, who is the dean of New England newsreel cameramen, died Friday at his home in Lynn, Mass., at the age of 79. Captain Sears was a seaman of the old school. He first went to sea in his father's ship, the famous clipper Stagbound, the vessel which carried the first copy of Abraham Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation to England. He leaves a daughter and four sons. Dick Sears is now New England representative of Pathe News. He has been on the staffs of most of the newsreels of the last twenty years and is a Yankee institution.

Minsky, Burlesque Leader, Dies

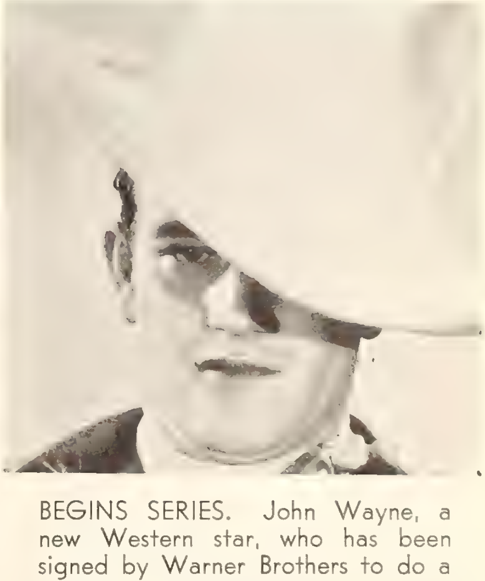
Billy Minsky, successful New York burlesque impressario for many years with his three brothers, died late last week at his home in Brooklyn, from a lung affection. He was 41 years old. In 1912 he began his theatrical career, at the National Winter Garden, on the East side, where he showed motion pictures and vaudeville at a 20-cent top admission.

GERMANIZED. (Below) Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., newly coiffured, moustached and bereted for dramatic purposes, thus effecting quite a perfect disguise, for "Revolt," his latest First National starring vehicle.

COVER DESIGN. Helene Barclay, recently signed by MGM for featured roles, posing for her husband, McClelland Barclay, the magazine cover artist. Newsstand fame is already hers.

FRESH-GROWN. (Below) A bit of banter at the Warner studio between William Powell, star, and Jack L. Warner, production chief, which proves as entertaining to William Koenig, production manager, and Tay Garnett.



BEGINS SERIES. John Wayne, a new Western star, who has been signed by Warner Brothers to do a series of cowboy pictures. The first of the group is "Ride Him, Cowboy."

CHARGES RKO STOCK POOL "ILLEGAL" ACT

Witness Before Senate Banking Committee Sets Blame for Collapse of RKO Stock; Cites Acquisition of Shares by RCA

"Illegal" action on the stock exchange during the fall and winter of 1931, by which directors of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation caused the collapse of the RKO stock, and the acquisition of control in the company, through "bear raids," by Radio Corporation of America at a fraction of its value, were charged by Ernest W. Stirn, economist connected with the University of Chicago, at a hearing before the Senate banking and currency committee at Washington last week.

Mr. Stirn, characterized by Senator Peter Norbeck, chairman of the committee, as the first "lamb" to be heard in the inquiry, was accompanied by William J. Morgan, former attorney general of Wisconsin, who acted as voluntary counsel. Summarizing the RKO deal on the stock market, Mr. Morgan termed it the "most dramatic squeezeout in history."

Michael J. Meehan, who had already figured in the committee's records as specialist in the "bull" pool in Radio in 1930, was designated by both Mr. Stirn and Mr. Morgan as the specialist in RKO stock at the time of the heavy short-selling that was credited with having driven down the stock's price.

Mr. Morgan said the concerted drive in October and November, 1931, resulted in "Radio Corporation of America, for $11,500,000, acquiring RKO, which had assets of $352,000,000, of which $67,000,000 were clear assets." He contended that stockholders were "squeezed out" by being assessed $5 per share on penalty of losing three-quarters of their shares, and that this stock was acquired by RCA.

Mr. Stirn told the committee that RKO stock, after reaching a high of 50 on April 24, 1931, had dropped to 9 on October 21. On November 30, the last date for which he had records of short sales, the quotations ranged between 1-5/8 and 2. The stock declined to 3/4 on December 29, and the next day trading was suspended, the stock thereafter being dealt in over the counter and no longer on the exchange.

In October the "short position" in RKO on the Stock Exchange, according to figures furnished by Richard Whitney, president of the organization, had amounted to about 10,000 shares, rose steadily late in the month and reached a peak of 148,681 shares in November. Mr. Stirn asserted this was "inferentially evidence of an inside rigging operation," and he pointed out that the short sales were nearly all covered after directors, by meeting on November 5 and public announcement on November 10, put out the reorganization plan.

In a brief accompanying Mr. Stirn's testimony it was stated: "By the refinancing plan, and by the short raids against the stock of the Radio-Keith Orpheum Corporation, the minority stockholders were frozen out of the company, with the result that the Radio Corporation of America bought the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation practically for the price of the debentures."

Mr. Stirn charged illegality in the action of the RKO directors on the basis of a Maryland law which he and Mr. Morgan said forbade reduction of the stock of a solvent corporation.

He testified that when the meeting was held on November 5, RKO had outstanding 4,000,000 shares of Class A stock, much of which was owned by RCA and 500,000 shares of Class B stock, owned entirely by RCA. He stated flatly that "both companies are controlled by the same interests," adding that they were members in a group also including the General Electric Corporation and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

In the letter of November 10 sent out by Mr. Brown, it was shown that the company had reduced the shares of stockholders to one-quarter of a share of new common stock for each share of Class A stock and had given shareholders an opportunity to reclaim the remainder of their stock through purchase of a $5 debenture for each share of common stock.

"In other words, the plan announced an assessment on the stockholder," Mr. Stirn told the committee. "If the stockholder could not afford to present the company with $5 for every share, which was hardly possible during these times of depression, he lost his original holdings and received one-quarter of his original holdings in the form of new stock."

In a subsequent committee session, J. Cookman Boyd, Baltimore attorney, told of filing suit against the RKO directorate, because he considered that they had "acted illegally" and "with almost indecent haste." Mr. Boyd, in response to questions from committee members, said that his legal attack on the reorganization had resulted in the purchase of his stock by the RKO directors, for "a substantial sum—very close to a respectable price for the stock." He withheld exact amounts, however.

Simmons Leaves Principal To Form Distributing Firm

Ira H. Simmons, sales executive with Principal Distributing Corporation, of which Sol Lesser is president, has resigned to head a new company, Stanley Distributing Company, with offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York. The new organization will distribute independent productions.

Floyd Gibbons In Chicago To Broadcast Conventions

Floyd Gibbons, radio commentator on news events, is in Chicago, where he will broadcast the two political conventions for the National Broadcasting Company. In addition, he will report the two meetings for the Hearst organization, and recount the story in a series of personal appearances.

Optimism Needed To Clear the Air, Roxy Tells Club

A wave of optimism to carry America up from the depths of despond to the salty crests is all that is needed to bring about the end of the current period of economic stress, S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel told the New York Motion Picture Club's weekly forum on Tuesday.

"The depression will end," Mr. Rothafel said in the course of his message of encouragement and cheer, "when optimism has come to replace pessimism."

His message was delivered with the utmost seriousness, unrelieved by any flights of humor or levity. Roxy seized the occasion to spread further his doctrine of "institutionalism," without which, particularly in the theatre business, there is little chance of sustained success, he believes.

In answer to questions put to him at the close of his speech, Roxy said that he believes motion pictures have a definite future of their own in large theatres, which he interpreted to mean the end of stage presentations as a complement to picture programs. He said that double features were a confession of lack of showmanship, and that had theatres been established as institutions they never would have found it necessary to resort to double features as a policy to attract patronage.

In reply to another question relating to the influence of television on theatres, Roxy said: "Television is not here. I would advise you not to worry about it. When it does arrive, hitch your wagon to it."

Frank Buck, author of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," also a guest speaker at the forum, related several experiences he had had in the course of his work in capturing wild animals for American zoos, and discussed the photographic problems encountered in the Malayan jungles where sequences for the RKO picture were filmed.

Indifference of Public Held An Obstacle to Better Films

Indifference of the theatre-going public and its preference for action over art are the chief obstacles to improving motion picture standards, according to a report of the motion picture commission of the Detroit Council of Churches. The commission was formed to obtain better pictures for children and to advise the public of important pictures.

"The motion picture industry, like every other factor in our industrial and social life, must accept responsibility for its adverse effects on the life and behavior of the people," the report says. "Pictures above a very moderate intellectual and esthetic plane hardly ever receive adequate patronage, even by the elements that have clamored loudest for improvement."

E. Schnitzer With Educational

Edward Schnitzer, for the past eight years manager of the Fox Brooklyn and Greater New York Exchange, has resigned to take the post of New York manager for Educational and World Wide exchanges.

TELEVISING THE ENGLISH DERBY

Two Thousand at London Theatre "Attend" Race and Hear Running Commentary from the Course

A most ambitious experiment with television, of particular importance to the native Briton because of the subject matter and of special interest to the theatre-going Briton, was the showing of televised pictures of the actual running of the Derby at Epsom Downs, in England. Two thousand "attended" the classic horserace from their seats in the Metropole Victoria in London, and heard the running commentary from the course as the pictures appeared on the large screen.

Details of the television broadcast, which was arranged by Graham Hewett for Baird Television, Ltd., and Phil Hyams for the theatre, show that comprehensive plans were made for the exploit. On the Downs, opposite the grand stand, was stationed a van containing the equipment for transmission. From the van six cables had been laid under the course and to a telephone circuit of 25 miles to London.

The audience saw first the Grand Parade, and it is reported that the figures of the horses and riders were easily distinguishable. One factor was the use of a screen 10 feet by 8 feet and free from the spots of light which, it was pointed out, had been noticeable in earlier experimental showings.

Of the general effect of a large picture slightly out of focus, as reported in The Daily Film Renter, Mr. J. L. Baird explained that electrical disturbances due to the use of telephone lines presented the chief difficulty in the way of obtaining brilliant definition. Mr. Baird said this obstacle is not so formidable in short transmission.

Three photoelectric circuits are employed in the system which was used for the demonstration, and the screen image as a result is divided into three vertical panels, unequally illuminated. The writer in the Film Renter pointed out that "vertical bars of light travel constantly across the screen from left to right with a somewhat disconcerting effect, though the eye accommodates itself in time."

The Metropole Victoria presented the television transmissions throughout the week of the Derby.

The Derby seems to be destined to an enduring historical relation to the development of the picture art. The television exploit of June 1 is a direct sequel to that amazing performance of three decades ago when Charles Urban, newly arrived in England, to merchandise Edison pictures and equipment, proceeded to photograph the Derby and display the picture of the race that same evening in London.

Urban set a pace for the yet unborn newsreels in that distant day, when he installed a complete film laboratory in a railway car and developed and printed his films en route to London.

The Urban Derby pictures set London agog and did a deal toward making England and all of the Continent cinema conscious.

Next to a coronation the Derby is England's greatest pictorial event. It is likely to remain so as long as there is a horse, or an Englishman, alive.—THE EDITOR.

Operators Union In Defense Drive

The Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, Local 306, of New York, launched a campaign in New York newspapers this week to defend itself against printed attacks and "to retain its reputation."

The campaign is comprised of a series of paid advertisements which will be continued over a period of weeks in daily newspapers. Members of Local 306, which is affiliated with the IATSE, are reported to have voluntarily assessed themselves in order to conduct the campaign. The subject of the advertisements, it was announced, would relate to facts concerning members of the local designed to show that they are "representative American citizens pursuing the normal course of rearing their families in accordance with the requirements of society."

Sam Kaplan, president of the local, said his organization "had enjoyed an excellent reputation, established more than two decades ago with the advent of motion pictures," and that, in addition to the defense of that reputation by the advertising campaign, the local would eventually seek "legal redress" against its detractors. Spokesmen for Local 306 cited editorials and other published matter which they regard as slanderous to Kaplan and the local.

"Anonymous letters attacking Local 306," said a spokesman, "have been published in New York newspapers from time to time, but answers to these attacks are not printed. While Mr. Kaplan was attending the IATSE convention in Cleveland last week letters were published charging that Mr. Kaplan did not employ union labor in his own industrial shops. That charge is not true, but no space was given our denials. We are forced to launch our defensive campaign with paid advertisements in order to counteract adverse propaganda.

"Members of the local have unanimously decided that the time has arrived for decisive and specific action on their part," the spokesman said. "They do not intend to sit idly by and permit these attacks to continue indefinitely."

Sam Kaplan said that the resolution pertaining to the employment of non-union workers by locals as "permit men," which was adopted at the Columbus convention of the IATSE last week, "legalized" the status of these workers and was of inestimable aid to Local 306.

"The resolution adopted by the convention," he said, "classifies so-called 'permit men' as apprentices, and comprises an official recognition of the status of these men. Heretofore, their status in the union ranks was wholly unofficial."

IATSE Re-Elects Elliott as Meeting Bans Kaplan System

William C. Elliott was re-elected president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Machine Operators, at the biennial convention at Columbus, Ohio, last week. Other officers elected are: John P. Nick, St. Louis, first vice-president; Fred J. Dempsey, Boston, general secretary and treasurer; Thomas B. Covert, Toronto, second vice-president; William J. Harrer, Newark, third vice-president; John B. Campbell, Guthrie, Okla., fourth vice-president; William P. Madigan, Minneapolis, fifth vice-president; Floyd M. Billingsley, San Francisco, sixth vice-president, and Harlan Holman, Cleveland, seventh vice-president.

The convention abolished with acclaim the "permit system," as practiced by certain locals, particularly 306, New York.

Schulberg in N. Y. On Contract Deal

The contractual status of B. P. Schulberg, Paramount general manager of production, is under discussion currently in New York. Although Mr. Schulberg, now at the home office to discuss a renewal of his seven-year contract which expires January 1, has announced his intention of returning to Hollywood at the end of the week, no agreement, as a result of the discussions, had been announced up to Wednesday.

Various reports, in New York and on the Coast, pertaining to Mr. Schulberg's contractual status, led to the issuance of a denial by Sam Katz that the Schulberg contract had been terminated and Emanuel Cohn placed in charge of Paramount production. Mr. Katz is now at the company's Hollywood studios for inspection and advisory purposes.

Mr. Schulberg's contract carries a proviso that a new agreement is to be reached by July 1 of this year. His original contract was for five years, and later was extended two additional years. It also includes a two months' option which, if it were exercised, would extend his present contract to March 1, 1933.

Harvey - Jaediker Reorganized Under Name of Harvey Agency

Harvey-Jaediker, general advertising and publicity agency in New York, has reorganized, taking the name of Harvey Agency. George W. Harvey is president and general manager. John Level remains in charge of copy, William Grotz, the art department, and Guy Fowler publicity. A. A. Wallgren, cartoonist to the A. E. F. will continue to handle advertising cartoons.

THE BOX OFFICE CHAMPIONS FOR MAY

The nation's key-city box offices selected an entirely new group of productions as their best draws, none of the six champions for the month being one that appeared on the honor list for any previous month. With considerable logic based on the unusual current fame of the story, and on the number of celebrities-extraordinary in the cast, MGM's picturization of the Vicki Baum novel and stage play, "Grand Hotel," drew enough in dollars and cents at its roadshow performances to win, despite its less general distribution, the unofficial designation of champion of champions for the month, which ranking must also be considered in the light of the fact that all the showings thus represented were at top prices considerably greater than those of the regular program houses.

An interesting aspect of the May group of box office leaders is its inclusion of Paramount's "The Miracle Man," the picture which etched deeply into the record of the motion picture the names of George Tucker, Lon Chaney, Thomas Meighan and Betty Compson, and the name of the producer as well, when made a dozen years ago in the silent eloquence of its day. Given voice, it apparently speaks in the same terms of its predecessor. Its month's ranking is sixth.

A variety of appeal marks the remaining productions in the May group. Second ranking was won by another MGM picture, "Letty Lynton," which revolves briskly around affairs biological. A domestic problem is the theme of the third-place production, First National's "The Rich Are Always With Us," while in fourth position is United Artists' "Scarface," Howard Hughes' reflections upon contemporary American life. Certain aspects of the same scene form the subject matter of RKO Radio's "State's Attorney," the fifth picture in the list.

Allied Proposes Vigilance Groups To Assist Owners

Allied State Association sees in "recent business declines" a further threat of new theatre taxation and, at its eastern meeting, to be held at Atlantic City, June 22, 23 and 24, will formulate plans for the establishment of a vigilance committee in every congressional district "to protect the interests of the small theatre-owner." In its "preparedness" policy, Allied foresees a possibility of a lowering of exemptions to 10 cents.

"Washington observers are agreed," an Allied statement says, "that due to recent business declines, the treasury estimates are short and that the new revenue bill will not have the necessary effect of balancing the budget. Present indications are, therefore, that efforts will be renewed at the next session of Congress to lower the exemption on admission tax to 10 cents. Independent exhibitors at their meeting next week at Atlantic City will formulate plans for the maintenance of vigilance committees in every congressional district for the protection of their interests."

Representatives of independent producers will be on hand at the Atlantic City meeting, it was announced, to discuss with the independent exhibitors plans for the cooperative booking of independent product "as an offset to the proposed exclusive-run distribution policy under consideration by certain theatre-owning producers."

Plunkett Gets RKO Dismissal Notice, Officials Declare

RKO officials on Wednesday divulged the information that Joseph B. Plunkett, former theatre head of the circuit and member of the board of Radio Pictures, had been officially advised by the theatre corporation that his services would be terminated after July 9.

Mr. Plunkett denied that he had tendered his resignation, but refused to say whether he had received a notice such as described. He also refused to state whether a contract between himself and the theatre corporation existed. Since the appointment one month ago of Herschel Stuart to a position in charge of field theatre operations, Mr. Plunkett has been relieved of his former duties.

Kent and Aylesworth Voted to MPPDA Board

Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox Film Corporation, and Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of RKO, were elected to the board of directors of the MPPDA, at the quarterly meeting of directors of the organization, held late last week. Mr. Kent succeeds Harley L. Clarke, former Fox representative on the board, and Mr. Aylesworth takes the place of Joseph I. Schnitzer, former Radio Pictures representative.

Chicago Decides to Retain Censor, but with Board Cut

Chicago has decided that it will retain the services of a censor board, the abolition of which was proposed recently by Mayor Anton Cermak, but with four instead of eight members. The decision was reached this week following a public hearing before the finance committee of the city council.

Chicago's film people, who had hoped the board would be eliminated when the finance group refused to vote the board's appropriation several weeks ago, are in a measure disappointed. Various civic groups attended the hearing and defended the retention of the board.

Vaudeville Needs "New Faces," Says Martin Beck, Home

American vaudeville needs new faces and a radical departure from the "cut and dried formula" at present prevailing, in the opinion of Martin Beck, managing director of RKO vaudeville, expressed on his return to New York from a European survey on which he was accompanied by S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel.

Noting "a very certain need for the Continental atmosphere and variety which can best be supplied by the outstanding and cleverest performers from other lands," Mr. Beck said he had arranged to bring a certain number of the outstanding variety acts of Europe to this country and RKO vaudeville. The impresario qualified his remarks with regard to the need of new talent here, however, with the statement that "our own artists excel in singing, in dancing and in comedy," and said he had no intention of bringing over many foreign numbers.

Mr. Beck said he found a decided revival of public interest in variety and music halls, corresponding to American vaudeville performances, in England, France and Germany. The bulk of the European city patronage, he said, is favoring theatres showing variety entertainment. A significant factor also pointed out by the RKO executive, is the readiness with which newspapers are giving liberal space to a current "Boom in Variety" movement abroad.

Kliegl Bros. Given Contract For Lighting Center Houses

Kliegl Bros. Universal Electric Stage Lighting Company, Inc., has been awarded contracts for complete stage lighting equipment and special lighting devices for two theatres now under construction in Rockefeller Center, New York.

Among the special devices, which were all designed particularly for these theatres, are program lights for the backs of orchestra seats, portable stage lighting units, special cyclorama foot and border lights.

Name World Wide Story Heads

Katherine Hilliker and Captain H. H. Caldwell, screen writers, have been signed to supervise the story department of World Wide Pictures. Both leave for the Coast studio this week.

Louisiana Measure Would Make Illegal All Exclusive Runs

A bill aimed at "preferential" contracts between distributors and exhibitors, and which would make the sale of "exclusive runs" illegal, has been introduced in the Louisiana state legislature, and is said to be sponsored by independent exhibitors of the state.

The bill would make it a felony to fix arbitrary film rentals, would regulate the protection given advance-run theatres and is so worded as to prohibit the sale of exclusive territorial exhibition rights.

Additional theatre taxation bills, aggregating 30 per cent on admissions, are now before the Louisiana House at Baton Rouge, and will probably come up for consideration within the week.

Other theatre bills before the Louisiana legislature would establish censor boards whose maintenance would be borne by theatres, and would compel the licensing of projectionists. Independent exhibitors are opposing both measures. Senate Bill 262 would increase the penalties on convictions for theatre bombings.

Roxy Receivership Extended 6 Months

Continuation of the receivership of the Roxy theatre, New York, was granted for an additional six months by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey, upon agreement this week of creditors, stockholders and second mortgage holders. The court ordered Harry G. Kosch, temporary receiver, to remain in charge for the additional six months.

Although the continuance of the receivership will permit the Roxy theatre to remain in operation for the time being, there is still the possibility that first-mortgage holders will institute foreclosure proceedings. Mr. Kosch announced he was now engaged in negotiations with the first mortgage holders to prevent this. Closing of the theatre, he said, would cost between $6,000 and $7,000 a week, whereas, if it is permitted to remain open he hopes to be able to restore grosses to a $50,000 or $60,000 weekly level, on which a profit would be realized.

The receiver's report for the period beginning May 18 showed a deficit of $60,697, on the basis of total receipts to June 9 of $97,849, and total expenditures of $158,546. Mr. Kosch said that with receipts of $31,987 to Monday afternoon of this week, gross for the current seven-day period was expected to total $60,000, on which the theatre would realize a profit of approximately $10,000. It was revealed that, under the receivership, operating expenses had been reduced to $40,214 weekly, from $48,000, and that further economies were in prospect.

Mr. Kosch's management was given the indorsement of second-mortgage holders, Fox Film Corporation, and Donahue & Coe, advertising agency. The latter are two of the principal creditors.

Behind the assignment was a direct political background. The picture had been sold away from the town's most important theatre owing to a percentage disagreement, and it also had been booked later for a day and date showing, first run in two grind houses. A half owner of the injured theatre was the editor of the town's only newspaper.

The initial discussion for space with the newspaper chief was a mighty chilly affair. Without referring to the fact that the circuit was a political outcast, the editor declared that his columns were closed unless the circuit presented justified publicity.

Then began the search for an idea which could be localized. Nothing materialized, but the exploitation man did find a story of local interest which had nothing to do with the theatre itself. He discovered a group of Italians in the city who made the rounds of buildings at night to catch sparrows sleeping on fire escapes—the birds eventually becoming sparrow pot pie. With names and addresses it was a pretty good human interest feature The exploitation man wrote it and submitted it. The aftermath was the suspension of the editorial barrier, and the editor himself enabled the house to crash page one of his paper by having the star of the production donate $5 to the town's milk fund

LAST week's paragraph about Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld reminds us of how that title of "Doctor" came to be. Some 13 years ago when, among other things, Terry Ramsaye, was conducting the publicity and promotional affairs of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, there was a conference in the office of Mr. Samuel Lionel Rothafel. Roxy had discovered that Dr. Firmin Schwinnen, famous Rialto organist, appeared so designated in the house program, in honor of his Ph.D. from an American university.

Roxy was a shade disturbed. Riesenfeld, the director of music and, therefore, in superior position to all organists, was merely Hugo Riesenfeld on the program.

Roxy sent for his musical chief.

"Hugo," he demanded, "have you ever been to school—a university?" Riesenfeld, a bit puzzled, paused and then answered, "Yes, a few."

"Such as?" inquired Roxy.

"Such as the University of Paris."

"Okay! exclaimed Roxy. And turning to Ramsaye, he added, "It'll be Doctor Riesenfeld on the program after this."

And so it was—until Roxy left those theatres. Meanwhile visiting stars making personal appearances occasionally embarrassed Doctor Riesenfeld by asking him "what to do for a cold."

EDUCATIONAL WILL RELEASE 145 SHORT SUBJECTS DURING 1932-33

AN EXPERIMENT IN LANGUAGE

Manager Henry Sommers of the Paramount, in Hamilton, Ohio, is experimenting with foreign language pictures, looking to the regular presentation of them, in the event they prove successful in the experiment. He has booked one of the new German feature productions for one night, as half of a double feature bill with "The Misleading Lady." It marks the first time a foreign language picture will be shown in the city, and the German population was notified directly of the event by mail.

Baltimore Manager at Head Of Local Protection Group

C. Elmer Nolte, manager of the Grand theatre, Baltimore and vice-president of the Exchange Club of his vicinity, is actively working with his organization to protect the merchants from the curb vendors in the section.

Nolte claims curb dealers compete with storekeepers paying high rentals and various license fees, and employing assistants. Objection is made because merchants are selling at low figures and profits are small. A protest will be made to the local board of estimate.

Crash Verdict Set Aside

Supreme Court Justice Lewis J. Smith, Mineola, Long Island, has set aside a sealed verdict for the defense in the trial of a $50,000 suit brought by Mrs. May Voyes of Woodmere, widow of William Fox's chauffeur, Joseph, against Muriel and Dorothy Kane of New York. Voyes was killed when Mr. Fox's car collided with that of Muriel Kane.

35 Owners Join Kansas MPTA

Owners of 35 Kansas City suburban houses automatically became members of the MPTA of Kansas and Missouri when the Independent Theatre Owners, Inc., of Greater Kansas City, voted to defray part of the office expense of the MPTA. The organization as a whole will not be affiliated, however.

Howson Umpires Tennis

Albert Howson, director of censorship for Warner, officiated at the Davis Cup inter-zone tennis matches between the United States and Brazil at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, Long Island, June 9 to 11. Howson is a member of the Tennis Umpires' Association.

Bank Closing Hits Stars

Numerous film stars, including Greta Garbo, Will Rogers, Harold Lloyd and Jean Harlow are said to have suffered financially through the closing of the First National Bank of Beverly Hills.

Schedule Will Be Divided Into 17 Series; Eight To Be Two-Reelers, Eight One-Reelers and One a Burlesque Serial

Educational will offer 145 short subjects during the 1932-33 season, of which total 56 will be two-reelers, 88 one-reel novelties and comedies, and a burlesque serial, to be released in the form of six two-reel episodes.

There will be 17 series in the complete production schedule, eight of two reels each, the serial group and eight of one reel each. Harry Langdon, who has been off the screen for some time, will return in one group.

Seven Two-Reel Series Set

Seven of the two reel series, already set, are as follows:

Eight Mermaid comedies, with Harry Langdon starring. Harry S. Edwards will direct part of these and Arvid Gillstrom the remainder.

Six sports featurettes, with Charles Paddock writing the stories and James Gleason directing. James, Lucille and Russell Gleason will be featured. The comedies will have a sports angle, but will be along the lines of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew comedies.

Six Kendall-de Vally Operalogues, done in English with music from popular operas.

Seven Vanity Comedies, to be produced by Al Christie with Mary Carlisle, Helen Mann, Eleanor Hunt, Betty Lorraine, Bobby Vernon, Glen Tryon, Bill Bevan, Vernon Dent and John and Buster West.

Eight Torchy Comedies, to be produced by C. C. Burr, with Ray Cooke again in the title role.

Tom Howard comedies, to be produced in the east by Larry Kent, former Paramount short subject chief. All other shorts will be produced on the Coast.

Six episodes of "The Great Hokum Mystery," a satirized version of an old-time serial, with the original film and comedy chatter by Lew Lahr and Harry Miller.

Nine comedies starring Andy Clyde. These will not be produced by Mack Sennett for Educational release, as in the past.

Six One-Reel Groups

The six series of one-reel subjects on the program and already determined are:

Six Spirit of the Campus numbers with Reinald Werrenrath, to be produced by Larry Kent and to center around campus songs. The Alumni Club will sing in them.

Six Baby Burlesks with youngsters from 18 months to four years. Each will be a comedy treatment of a serious drama or story. Jack Hays will produce.

Do You Remember series, flashbacks to the "gay nineties," accompanied by humorous patter, to be produced by Johnny Walker.

Twenty-six Terry-Toons to be done by Frank Moser and Paul Terry, with Philip Scheib.

Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, with Robert E. Gillaum in charge of production.

Nathan, Woodard and Fairbanks will produce a series of 13 one-reelers, titled "Battle For Life." The series will be devoted to the struggle for life carried on by insects. Micro and macro-photography will be extensively used in the films.

One additional series of two-reelers and two other groups of one-reelers will be announced shortly to complete the program.

OLYMPICS FUNNY TO PARAMOUNT

The Paramount Coast studio claims to have monopolized the comedy stage talent of Hollywood for the film, "Million Dollar Legs," farce based on the impending Olympic Games. The list announced includes Heinie Conklin, Al Bridge, Ted Stanhope, Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields, Andy Clyde, Ben Turpin, Hank Mann, George Barbier, High Herbert, Billy Gilbert, Vernon Dent, Teddy Hart, and so forth. Lyda Roberti will have a leading feminine role and Dickie Moore will head the younger element.

Paramount Plans 15 Features, 9 Shorts from French Studio

Paramount will produce 15 features and nine shorts at the Joinville studio, near Paris, during the 1932-33 season. The shorts will be comedies exclusively, as a result of the success during the past season of that type of subject, the company announces.

Among the artists to be features in the productions will be Suzy Vernon, Meg Lemmonier, Saint Granier, Henry Garat, Marie Glory, Fernand Gravey, Baron Fils, Noel-Noel and Pierre Etchepare.

U. S. Releases Film on Roads

The United States Department of Agriculture has released a six-reel sound film, "An International Study of American Roads," showing the extent of the highway system in the country, construction methods and engineering activities. It was recorded on RCA Photophone system, and scored by the United States Marine Band. On 35 mm. sound-on-film, it is loaned to responsible borrowers by the Office of Motion Pictures of the department, with borrower paying carrying charges.

Loew to Drop Atlanta House

The Loew circuit will relinquish control of the Fox in Atlanta, which it has operating under a pooling arrangement, when the agreement expires August 1, according to E. A. Schiller, Loew executive, returned last week from a southern trip.

Hutchinson, Steiner to Coast

Charles Hutchinson, Allied Pictures director, and Bill Steiner, production supervisor, have left New York for the Coast to begin work on the new season's product.

LEADING STAGE PRODUCERS MERGE THEIR BOOKINGS TO "SAVE ROAD"

Shubert Receivers Have Second Plan for Deal with Erlangers to Consolidate Booking in Cities Outside of New York

The Theatre Guild, the Shuberts and Erlangers have merged their producing and booking interests in twelve subscription cities for the coming season. The merger will operate under the name The American Theatre Society.

Immediately following the announcement of this merger, a supplementary move this week, initiated by the receivers of the Shubert Theatre Corporation and its subsidiaries, calls for the consolidation of other booking activities of the Shubert and Erlanger offices outside of New York, under one company, soon to be formed. Marcus Heiman, an Erlanger executive and former president of the Orpheum circuit, will head the new booking company, according to C. Fiske, representing the Irving Trust Company, co-receiver with Lee Shubert. Under the agreement, the Shubert and Erlanger booking offices, long-standing rivals, will be represented equally on a supervisory board, the receivers and the Erlanger interests each holding 50 per cent of the company's stock. Each party will contribute equally to a small capital, not to exceed $10,000.

The three-way deal, due in part to the straits in which the stage has found itself as a result of the competition of the motion picture, follows several years of promulgation of varied suggestions to "save the stage." It is purposed eventually to provide, through The American Theatre Society, an entire season of trademarked attractions, selected by a committee of judges, from the output of cooperating and allied producers. The three organizations will have established subscription audiences for their plays and, says Beauvais Fox, past president of The Theatrical Press Representatives of America, in The T. P. R. O. A. Quill, will "be in a position to extend a season's bookings to selected productions from Gilbert Miller, Arthur Hopkins, John Golden, Jos. P. Bickerton, Jr., Brock Pemberton, Eva LeGalliene's Repertory or any other independent producer who may like to take advantage of the 'American Theatre Society' plan."

The arrangement calls for the raising of a fund among those in the pool for the purpose of covering the expenses of organizing the subscription audiences and extending the plan into other cities.

The Theatre Guild, which will maintain its policy of guaranteed productions, in its announcement declared that the agreement "may mean the renaissance of the road." It is planned to have one efficient booking office and the Guild is to direct the movement with a corps of publicity salesmen. The announcement says "there will be a local management of subscription, with a deputy of the merged interests in charge in each center and a number of field agents organizing the audiences." It is reported that a $2.50 top is to be set and competing theatres are to be eliminated except in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

The Theatre Guild initiated the subscription audience plan in tour cities in 1927 and the Shuberts two years later under auspices of the Professional Players in Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh and Buffalo, under the Dramatic League in Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Kansas City, and under the Drama Association in St. Louis. The Guild has had seasons in most of these cities and in Baltimore.

The press representatives' long-standing appeal for a United Producers of America had been endorsed by John Golden, George M. Cohan, Sam H. Harris and by a number of drama editors.

The purpose of the Shubert-Erlanger merger in general will be of the same nature as the other, looking to the prevention of booking conflicts and unnecessary losses through competition. It is announced that "the plan may involve additional (theatre) abandonments, though in some instances it is likely to involve the taking back of theatres already given up."

It will be necessary that court sanction be obtained for the participation of the Shubert receivers in the plan, which authorization will be sought immediately from Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey.

It is intended that the Erlanger office and the receivers are to operate their own theatres separately, while additional houses will be operated through subsidiaries, by the booking company itself or by independents. The company would receive a fee, or share of the profits, to be agreed upon, and the remaining profits would be divided equally by the local subsidiaries of the Shuberts and the Erlanger interests. Despite recent rumors of a complete merger of the two companies, it is announced that no combination is contemplated in production, or booking in New York.

Universal Film To Be Shown To Police Chiefs in Session

The Universal picture, "Radio Patrol," dealing with the radio-equipped police car, will be shown on June 16 at the annual convention of the International Police Chiefs, scheduled for the Multnomah Hotel, Portland, Ore. The grand ballroom of the hotel has been equipped for the showing.

The film was recently viewed by police groups in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Arrangements for the screening have been concluded between A. J. O'Keefe, Universal manager in Portland, and the convention committee in charge of arrangements.

Jewish Film Booked

"Joseph in the Land of Egypt," Jewish talking film directed by George Roland, is scheduled for three days at the Warner Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia, this week. Guaranteed Pictures Company, Inc., is producer and distributor.

No Sales Session By United Artists

United Artists will hold no sales meetings of any kind this year, Al Lichtman, vice president in charge of distribution, announced. Mr. Lichtman said that the company's new product, and any innovations in sales plans, would be communicated to field sales staffs in a routine manner and without the holding of either national or regional meetings.

Mr. Lichtman intimated that considerations of economy played an important part in the decision to do away with sales meetings this year.

"Conventions are costly," he said, "and their chief benefit is found in the cheerfulness they instill in the men. The same thing can be accomplished in other ways. I am considering giving salesmen a week's vacation."

United Artists held its first sales convention four years ago.

Mr. Lichtman said that United Artists will not be limited to any specific number of pictures in carrying out next season's program, but would produce a picture for every good story it acquired.

"I might say right now that we will make 12 pictures in the forthcoming season, but if we come across 20 stories which we believe suitable for production, then we will make that many," Mr. Lichtman declared.

Warner Revises Release Program

Warner has revised its general release schedule up to and including the week of September 10, with a sufficient number of features already completed to allow release of a picture a week up to December 31.

The new schedule with release dates follows:

"The Tenderfoot," starring Joe E. Brown, June 18 (formerly June 11); "Love Is a Racket," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., June 25 (formerly June 18); "The Dark Horse," with Warren William, July 2 (formerly June 25); "Week-End Marriage," with Loretta Young, July 9 (formerly June 18); "Winner Take All," starring James Cagney, July 16 (formerly July 2); "The Night Flower," starring Barbara Stanwyck, July 23 (formerly August 6); "Miss Pinkerton," Joan Blondell's first starring picture, July 30 (formerly July 16); "Without Consent," with Chic Sale, August 6 (formerly July 23); "Jewel Robbery," starring William Powell and Kay Francis, August 13 (formerly July 30); "Crooner," with David Manners, August 20 (formerly August 13); "Doctor X," with Lionel Atwill, August 27th (formerly July 9); "Two Against the World," starring Constance Bennett, September 3 (formerly August 20); "Big City Blues," with John Blondell, September 10 (formerly August 27).

The 100 per cent line represents the average weekly receipts during the entire year 1930.

MAYFAIR SCHEDULES 24 FEATURES FOR 1932-33

Four Specials, 10 Melodramas, 10 Action Pictures Planned By Independent; Signing of Players to Await Production

Mayfair Pictures, one of the larger of the independent producing companies, of which George W. Weeks is president, will offer 24 features during the 1932-33 season. The schedule will be divided into three divisions: four "specials," 10 melodramas and 10 action pictures.

The company announces no player or directorial assignments, stating its belief that it is more advantageous to arrange players and directors at the time of individual picture production. The program, arranged by Mr. Weeks, Claude Macgowan, executive vice-president and general manager, and Cliff Broughton, vice-president in charge of production, follows:

The "specials" are: "Sister to Judas," story of the effort of a sister to check her brother's criminality; "Vanishing Women," a story of ignorant women and their patronage of quack fortune tellers; "Her Resale Value," in which a woman of loose morals sees herself 20 years hence; "Society's Children," concerning the attempts of children, no longer wealthy, to disguise their situation.

The melodramas planned are: "Velvet Vultures," a story of suave racketeers, preying upon the drink-crazed youngsters of society; "Her Mad Night," a story of complications arising out of one girl's slight indiscretion; "Red Heads vs. Blondes," a reopening of the feud between the "preferred" girls; "Malay Nights," one woman selling herself for money with which to return to civilization; "Behind Jury Doors," a court room story; "Phantom Fingers," a crime years ago acts as a boomerang on its perpetrator; "Midnight Warnings," a mystery story; "Dance Hall Hostess," a treating of the trials and tribulations of a taxi dancer; "Visiting Nurse," glorifying an unsung heroine; "Revenge at Monte Carlo," a story of adventure at the famed playground.

In the action division will be "Heart Punch," a story of the prize ring; "When Chinatown Sleeps," an adventure in San Francisco's Chinatown; "When a Marine Sees Red," a story of the service; "Wicked Wings," a story of the air lanes; "Where There's Smoke——," a new angle on firefighting; "Night Cab," detailing the troubles of a taxi night hawk; "Hot Pages," a story behind the scenes of a "beat"; "The Open Switch," treating of railroads and railroad men; "The Riot Squad," the story of a factory riot; "Brothers of the Road," a tale of a "has-been" and a youngster who were thrown together.

Sol Edwards Named Assistant Sales Manager at Educational

Sol Edwards, formerly with World Wide Pictures, feature product organization of Educational, has been appointed assistant sales manager of Educational, under J. H. Skirball, general sales manager. Mr. Edwards was at one time connected with Universal, United Artists and Warner.

Majestic Formed By Goldstone On Cooperative Basis

Majestic Distributing Corporation, new national independent producing-distributing organization, built upon the principle of the old First National, with 22 independent exchange operators equal partners, will offer during the coming season 26 features, comprising four specials, 18 features and six westerns starring Jack Hoxie.

These details of the organization, chiefly sponsored and financially supported by Phil Goldstone, independent producer and financier, were determined at a three-day session held late last week at the Congress Hotel in Chicago. Three features, "Phantom Express," "Unwritten Law" and "By Whose Hand" have already been completed by Majestic on the Coast. Exchange operators present at the session represented 22 key cities. The company will operate as a cooperate franchise organization.

Herman Gluckman of Capitol Film Exchange, New York, was elected president; William D. Shapiro of Boston, first vice-president; Ben Judell of Chicago, second vice-president. The three, with Mr. Goldstone, J. Berkowitz of Buffalo, Tony Luchese of Philadelphia and Sam Wolf of Los Angeles form the directorate of the company. Mr. Goldstone will produce the 26 films, but under the arrangement members will have a voice in all company policies.

A production budget of $3,000,000 for Majestic's 26 features was announced by Mr. Goldstone on his arrival in New York, following the Chicago meetings.

The independent producer is enthusiastic over the new Majestic studios in Hollywood, which, he says, are the only all-brick studios on the Coast. RCA "high fidelity" equipment is used, and has a range of 18,000 cycles, Mr. Goldstone said. Modern facilities, he added, will result in savings on studio overhead of from 10 to 15 per cent annually.

Coast Exhibitors Refuse Affiliation

Independent exhibitors of southern California have formed the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, thereby settling a long-standing internal controversy as to whether or not the group should affiliate with either the MPTOA or Allied States, national organizations. Approximately 300 are members.

Gus Metzger has been elected president; B. M. Beringer, vice-president; George Bromley, secretary; R. D. Whitson, treasurer. Directors are Glenn Harper, Harry Hicks, John M. Young, Harry Chotiner, Lawrence Cohen. Metzger has stated the organization may back either of the national bodies, depending entirely upon the merits of the question involved at any particular time. In this policy the new association follows closely that of the TOCC in New York, which, affiliated with neither major group, supports any measure thought of benefit to the local exhibitors.

Because there are millions who dream as Merton Gill dreamed, you have an audience that is already waiting to be pulled in. You can do it with the right kind of selling copy, copy that emphasizes the humanness of "Make Me a Star," catchlines for ads and foundations for publicity stories built on the Hollywood of fascination and failure, of dough and despair, of hopes and helplessness, of ambitions and ambiguities, of glory and of oblivion.

Tell your patrons that they'll laugh with him and at him, that they will cry with him and at him, that they'll fight his battles for him, that they will hope as he hopes, and that when he finally gets across, when fame is his and a career of a star lies before him, they will be just as tearfully glad as he was.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by William Beaudine. Screen play by Sam Mintz, Walter De Leon and Arthur Kober. From the novel, "Merton of the Movies," by Harry Leon Wilson. Stage play by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly. Release date, July 1, 1932. Running time, 68 minutes.

The Doomed Battalion

(Universal)

Drama

Every so often appears a film which, in dramatic power, scenic sweep and story value, offers an opportunity to the exhibitor to sell something unusual with almost a certainty of profitable results. "The Doomed Battalion" is that sort of production.

Set in the magnificent Tyrolean Alps, on the border between Austria and Italy, in the time of the World War, all exteriors in this stark drama of the bleak mountain struggle were actually filmed in its locale. Splendidly the camera has caught angled shots of the high peaks, treacherous reaches of rock, avalanches, and the drama of Austrians at war, marooned by headquarters at the top of a mountain, with orders to hold the position until the last man dies, against the advance of the Italian army.

The cast, in respect to salable names, is of no real value, despite the fact that the members give excellent performances. Luis Trenker, author, adaptor, leading player, is especially strong, but unknown. This is comparatively small loss, however, since the production offers so much else. The title is obviously a natural. A battalion of soldiers, close to their village homes, unable to see or communicate with their families, are doomed to hold their mountain post against all odds. When all else fails, the Italians determine to undermine the mountain, blow it up, and its defenders with it. They wait for what seems certain death. There is suspense, action, drama, sweeping scenic beauty that should draw the patron to the edge of his seat. A squadron of Austrians led by Trenker, is ordered to discover the reason for the strange activity of the Italians far below. Dressed in white capes for snow camouflage, mounted on skis, the patrol sweeps down the mountain, in sequences which may well be reckoned among the most impressive photographic effects ever caught by a film camera. The Rivoli on Broadway opened the screen to extra size for these shots, and the effect was tremendous.

Concentrate in exploitation on a powerful drama, in a most brilliantly photographed and impressive setting. The lack of cast names is more than amply compensated. The film warrants a spread beyond the ordinary. Play it any time, on the best night or the worst, but make certain the patrons know they will see something extraordinary, something gripping which they will not soon forget. Certainly the children will appreciate it. The boys in particular will enjoy the thrill of their lives during the patrol sequences.—Aaronson.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Directed by Cyril Gardner. Story by Luis Trenker. Adaptation by Luis Trenker and Carl Hartl. Continuity by Paul Perez. Dialogue by Patrick Kearney. Cameramen, Charles Stumar and Sepp Allgeier. Release date, June 16, 1932. Running time, 82 minutes.

Merrily We Go To Hell

(Paramount)

Drama

One swell selling title, but not such a good picture. With all the possibilities of such a strong b. o. name to work with, the net results fall far below par. Audiences, we have found, do not take kindly to drunken leading men (even if that leading man is Fredric March), who keeps on getting drunk for no good reason whatsoever. Insipidness is not supposed to be a leading character's best qualification.

The title is charged with all sorts of magnetism for seat-selling purposes. The "hell" reference, however, must be treated strictly in accordance with good common sense and the type of community in which you are catering to public tastes and entertainment. Twisted around a bit, this title could be made to mean about everything but what it really means. And after seeing the picture we must admit that they were not going to hell merrily at all. So watch that when you start to work out a campaign.

Audience value is of the rapidly changing variety. At times you are completely wrapped up in these two leading characters. Sylvia Sydney is adorable, and really carried the greater portion of the burden of trying to make this good entertainment. March is at a disadvantage by reason of an often unsympathetic role. As gauged in terms of comparison, "Merrily We Go to Hell" rates a classification above the general run of pictures, but falls short of really being one of the better screen offerings of the season.

Supporting the two leading stars are Skeets Gallagher (always able and acceptable) and Adrianne Allen. Others in the cast are OK, but mean nothing on the marquee.

It is suggested that you get the pressbook and read the synopsis of the story so as to get a better line on the best selling slants to be used. Besides, the exchange mats offer excellent material for the building up of excellent newspaper ads, and since this will be the most important selling angle for most theatres outside the key cities, every showman ought to try to make his newspaper advertising unusually good for an attraction like this. Remember, smart selling and advertising will prepare your prospective customers for what they are going to see and still give them little chance for finding fault.

Not suitable for children or for Sunday showings in smaller towns, but it possesses enough merchandising material to warrant a good showing at the box office for most theatres in both the large and small cities.—Lewis.

Diary of a Revolutionist

(Amkino)

Drama

An obviously studied effort to increase the cadence action brings this production closer to the American public's expectations in screen plays than is the case with much of the product from the Soviet studio. The audience at the Cameo Theatre in New York, an audience with a distinct Russian flavor, showed genuine enthusiasm.

Military and industrial activity of the U. S. S. R. are combined in the production. The propaganda is frank, but this time it takes rather the form of extended footage of the out-of-door, and of statues of Soviet leaders, and if your audience enjoys such filmfare it is entertainment regardless of producer-intent. The war shots, while not spectacular, do reach one realistic climax when an armored train runs the gauntlet of machine gun and shell fire in carrying ammunition to the beleaguered Red forces.

The plot development leaves a confusion as to the real central character of the production. Rybakon, a hero of the Revolution (the military and industrial ends are connected by his diary), finds that the wife of Bagour, to whom he brought the ammunition, is plotting sabotage at the shipyard over which Bagour now has charge. Rybakon dies of a heart attack and Bagour carries on.

The native music, military or otherwise, but of a patriotic nature in either case, apparently was well received (patrons on both sides of us hummed the airs throughout the showing).

For a patronage appreciatively foreign, the picture offers a homeland appeal, and in any case there is less of the heavy tread of slow-moving drama than might be expected.—Rovelstad.

Without Consent

(Warner Bros.)

Comedy

If you're lucky enough to have this one included in your future booking sheets, start shouting about it now. Use a whispering campaign, any kind of a teaser lead-up you care to use, but start early letting your patrons know that you've got a Chic Sale picture coming up that tops anything he has ever offered before.

It's a picture that will appeal to every member of the family from the youngsters to the grandmothers, and every age will get a different kick out of it. The title is meaningless as far as the story and picture go, therefore in all your advertising concentrate your attention on Chic Sale. You've got others to talk about—Ann Dvorak of "Scarface," David Manners, Noah Beery, Maude Eburne and Lyle Talbot—but the more your campaign boosts Sale in a picture of good clean wholesome fun, the like of which has been missing from the screen for a long, long time, the better your box office grosses should be.

The picture is comedy from beginning to end, but it deals with a timely topic in which there is great interest, particularly in the smaller and more rural cities and towns, of how the local independent merchant can compete with the high organized, price cutting chain outfits, with comedy all the way through, it winds up with a whirlwind finish that should send your patrons out of the house shouting its praises.

Yet you've got a lot more than names and comedy to sell. It's difficult to sell the scope of a story in an ordinary ad or piece of publicity. But in "Without Consent" you've got a story, plain, simple, appealing, withal making good, clean, most enjoyable entertainment. There's romance without sex, drama that everyone knows is burlesque, right from the start, Sale wins and holds audience sympathy. There's a happy combination of modernism against "old times" through which the way is open to all kinds of exploitation angles. You can build a sweet campaign around the idea that although Crickle (Chic Sale) was an oldtimer he was always miles ahead and much more modern than the smart fellows. Metropolitan exhibitors can stir up interest by exploiting the picture as to how they do business in the tank town, while the smaller and more rural communities have a natural appeal to local pride along the line of how the hick merchant outsmarted the city slickers.

Unless you're pretty sure of your ground, don't line up any kind of a campaign that would show you taking sides in the independent owned-chain operated argument. The temptation to do so, inasmuch as so much of the story is hinged on that peg, will be strong, but our warning is: look before you leap. Lining up with one side or the other on exploitation gags might be a nifty right now, but you never can tell how it might backfire in the future.

You've got plenty to interest your patrons—originality, a good cast, a clean wholesome family picture, plenty of fun in both action and dialogue, a little devilment, and a nice romance and a thrill at the finish that's a sweet combination of comedy and danger.

Get behind this and your box office should jingle a merry tune.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Based on the story "Competition," by Carl Erickson. Adaptation and dialogue by Carl Erickson and Harvey Thew. Photographed by Dev. Jennings. Art director, Esdres Hartley. Release date, July 23, 1932. Running time, 72 minutes.

What Price Hollywood

(RKO Pathe)

Comedy Drama

Grab this picture while it's hot! It's a pacemaker!

It's a veritable tornado of dollars. If you've been doing business, it should keep the tide surging. If your box office has been in doldrums. "What Price Hollywood" ought to transform it into the busiest spot in town.

Here's what it is, a serio-burlesque load of inside dope on what the folks everywhere outside of Hollywood like to think that Hollywood and its people are. It's packed to the hilt with glamour, as vivid as a fireworks display, chock full of intimate inside stuff, the lowdown on how people think that stars get the breaks and make the grade, in short, full of that stuff which to the uninitiated is fascinatingly mysterious.

It's ready-made showmanship and calls for showmanship of the highest order. Start selling it the minute that you are sure you have it booked. Rave about it. Stick the title and cast names every place you can stick 'em, in newspapers, on bill boards, in your programs and heralds, in your advance trailer, and don't forget the radio. You've got something to sell, and no matter how enthusiastic you become in your campaign you won't disappoint anyone.

Out of the following summary, you should be able to pick adaptable suggestions that will sell "What Price Hollywood" to S. R. O. business any place in the country.

Out of Hollywood comes the story of how pictures are made—all the triumphs, all the disappointments, the fun and frivolity, the tragedy, plus a continuous vein of humanness that will get under anybody's skin—of Mary Evans (Constance Bennett), a waitress in the Brown Derby who gets a break when Max Carey (Lowell Sherman), a great if continually tipsy director, takes her to the opening of his newest picture at Grauman's Chinese theatre. You have all the thrill of such an opening. Atmospheric shots of a dozen great openings put it over.

She gets her chance and flops as thousands of other girls have. Think of the lines you can use here to lure the flapper contingent of your patronage. But she rehearses her bit, gets another chance, and when Julius Saxe (Gregory Ratoff) sees the rushes, he discovers a new star. Comedy mingles with sensationalism as Saxe unloosens the floodgates of ballyhoo. Mary shoots to fame. "America's Pal!"

Then comes romance that should slay them as Lonny Borden (Neil Hamilton), wealthy, socially prominent, a blue blood, falls for her, but not 'till he drags her out of bed in her nightgown does he get any place. There's sex there if you want it. Then comes all the ballyhoo of picture making, and the exploited wedding that's a riot. All the way through runs the figure of Sherman, almost to steal it. Then follows tragedy, audience sympathy as the lovable character is on the downgrade. Only Mary the girl he skyrocketed to stardom is in his corner. Then comes the thrill of realty as the director, in Mary's home recovering from a "bat," sees a picture of the Carey that was and his reflection in the mirror of the Carey that is. There's suicide and scandal which the world is all too ready to believe of Hollywood. But there's more of that human element as Mary, who has fled to Europe to escape it all, learns that the truth has been told and that she can return and resume her glittering career.

You've got everything to sell. There's a greater Constance Bennett than ever before, different from the "Bought" and "Common Law" type, a lovable girl, because she sticks to her friends. Lowell Sherman will be a revelation—comic, dramatic, tragic. Gregory Ratoff is great as the popular idea of a home-made producer who can think only in the term of "terrifics." Neil Hamilton—well you've had raves enough about the rest—apply them all.

Sell it as an amazing story of amazing people. Don't overlook the opportunity of shouting about inside stuff—there's plenty of it, a story of soaring ambitions of people whose imagination knows no limits—of jealousies, of friendships, of the thrills of reality—a story of pictures and all their related ballyhoo, so ballyhoo it. Don't worry about dignity. It's all in fun—the fun of shooting back at your people the things they like to believe. Put on the nearest thing you can to a Hollywood opening night, the night you open the picture. Use lights, music, radio or loudspeaker broadcasts. If you can get stars, get 'em. Get your local celebrities anyway.

In "What Price Hollywood" you've got a picture, story and cast that you can exploit all the way down the line. Go to it and clean up!

Society Girl

Fox

Comedy-Drama

Having seen the stage play, I was looking forward with some misgivings to what would happen to such excellent screen material when it finally reached the silver sheet. (All right, sound screen; have it your own way.) But I can now report that my fears were wasted. Fox has turned out a swell picture of the sort that cash customers on Times Square or Main Street should go for in a big way.

"Society Girl" is not a "great" picture, but it is human and handles its characters with far more sense than most pictures generally do. Jimmy Dunn is his usual carefree self and fits the role like a glove. Spencer Tracy at times steals the picture; as the fighter's manager he is right at home. Peggy Shannon, we felt, was a trifle too sweet and lovable to be the type of woman this characterization called for. However, she looks and acts fine and will win many new admirers.

Box office value of this title depends entirely on how you propose to sell it. The name is in the neutral class and unless it is backed up with smart showmanship will not count for early returns. We say early returns because we feel that word-of-mouth publicity will bring them in after the opening day. That title, built up with the three star names above or immediately below it, should come first in your selling campaign. Catchlines and clever mat copy should just about top off the campaign and pull them into the house.

Audience value is fine. Dunn, Tracy and Shannon keep them interested all the way through and leave you wondering time and again how this peculiar love affair is going to end for all parties concerned. Which is the way it should be, since there are all too many plots revealed from the very start of a picture. Clever direction and story treatment improved rather than hurt the screen version as compared to the stage play. But the typical screen ending of everybody happy is always a good way to send the cash customers home satisfied.

Managers who make it a point to screen their coming attractions will be 'way ahead of brother showmen who fail to do so. Seeing a picture like "Society Girl" will point out many good selling angles which it would be impossible to include in any particular review, since every individual situation is a situation unto itself—if we don't sound too Greek-like.

Not suitable for children, but otherwise OK. Small towns might play safe and spot it somewhere midweek.—Lewis.

The Dark Horse

(First National)

Comedy

An almost perfect "natural" in point of timeliness, this more or less hilarious election campaign farce gives the showman an opportunity to spread his selling high, wide and handsome. The fact that it is cleverly satirical of the manner and method of "selling" a candidate to an open-mouthed public, is an angle worth playing with, but that is only one. Let your imagination go on the exploitation campaign. Promise the potential customers a hilarious time, with the most amusingly stupid candidate for governor that ever evaded an issue, in the person of round-faced, spare-haired Guy Kibbee. Guarantee fun and fast thinking from a campaign manager with a near genius for "putting it over," in the person of Warren William, who is jumping to the front with large strides and will need very little name exploitation.

Wrap Guy Kibbee around the title and sell them as one parcel—of electioneering fun. Kibbee is the dark horse, and his mental equipment is a complete blackout. But William puts him over with a bang, despite the opposition tactics, over and through amusing complications, partly concerned with William's difficulties with his ex-wife, Vivienne Osborne, as an obstacle in the way of his marital pursuit of his secretary, pretty Bette Davis. Frank McHugh is William's assistant, and as usual, he contributes a performance which can be counted upon to bulwark the comedy end of the film. There are the names. Every one is good, has "name" value, and does his work neatly, competently, with Kibbee and William carrying the development along with humor and fast action, respectively.

There are innumerable tie-ups which can be made. The local papers might be induced to take a fling at campaigning in general, candidates in particular, on the basis of the satirization in the picture. Contact the town party committees. Let them have all the fun they want at the expense of the picture, but the exhibitor should get it, and a great deal more, back at the box office. The possibility of a straw vote on some local issue, with ballots cast at the theatre, might be worth consideration, and profits. The press books will show several exploitation illustrations which should make excellent "draw" copy. Kibbee, candidate for governor, in his underwear, is too good to miss. The romance of William and Miss Davis is just sufficiently serious to compensate the comedy, which far and away predominates.

This can be played any time, anywhere. There is probably little in it which has any particularly definite appeal to the youngsters, but there is nothing in it objectionable for them.—AARONSON.

Love Is a Racket

(First National)

Comedy-Drama

Another in the group of columnist stories of the screen, with personable Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in this instance the clever Broadway newspaper writer, who knows his feminine sex just well enough to be thrown over, and his racketeers just well enough to come very close to being a repository for lead slugs.

There is as yet still sufficient live interest in the particular species of animal known as the Broadway columnist for this film to stand up well under emphasis on that sort of selling slant. The columnist has to do with all sorts of rackets, but he finds, through his own experience, that the one with the greatest punch, the one about which one never knows a thing, is romance. The title is good for a zestful selling campaign, hooking up the comedy and tragedy, the breezy carelessness of the columnist and the romance that proved he knew somewhat less than he thought. Lean toward the light side, the comedy angle, remain clear of the heavy tragedy, racket angle. The film is possessed of enough lightness, speed and general activity to safeguard your promise of an entertaining picture.

There is no lack of good "light" names for the marquee. Leave Fairbanks, Jr., on top. He belongs and turns in a first rate, lively performance. The women, especially, will enjoy his characterization. Ann Dvorak offers a quiet, unassuming role, but does it well, as the girl who sticks by Fairbanks through his heavy romance. Frances Dee is that romance. Attractive and capable, wearing good clothes well, she will not fail the patrons. She is thrown into a slightly unsympathetic situation at the close, but it does no real damage. Lee Tracy, who concludes the top billing, supplies the better part of the comedy, does it with his own unique touch of breeziness and naturalness. Tracy left an assured position on the New York stage for pictures, is making an equally sure position for himself on the screen and will be starred in several productions next season. Build him up with the patrons. He warrrants the support, and it will help in the future.

There is pace, good dialogue and a lively story to hold the patrons and entertain them once they are on the inside. The story is from a Rian James novel, which might open the way for book tie-ups locally. The film can be played to advantage in almost any spot in the week, though there is nothing in it that should appeal to juveniles.—AARONSON.

Produced and distributed by First National. Directed by William A. Wellman. From the novel by Rian James. Adaptation by Courtenay Terrett. Film editor, William Holmes. Cameraman, Sid Hickox. Release date, June 18, 1932. Running time, 72 minutes.

Flames

(Monogram)

If you're a showman, "Flames" is a picture that will give you plenty of opportunity to exercise your talents. It's a natural for tieups with fire departments because it glorifies fire-fighters and some of the modern life saving devices that never has been done before. Line up your local department for cooperation and the rest should be easy.

Here's the angle on which you can approach the fire chief for tieups. "Flames" was made with the cooperation of the Los Angeles Fire Department. It introduces some of the new and more modern methods of life saving, particularly the use of the lifeline, whereby a fireman, carrying a person, practically walks down the side of a building to safety. It graphically illustrates the kind of propaganda that fire departments everywhere are trying to get over to the public.

Also go after the saefty equipment dealers in your town, as well as the fire departments. If you can prevail upon either to put on a demonstration of life saving methods, being sure that there are plenty of your banners announcing that actual scenes of the demonstrations now being presented are to be seen in "Flames" and the dates it is playing your house, you'll kick up a lot of interest that otherwise might be difficult to stimulate.

You won't have to worry about getting the kids to this picture on its atmospheric basis alone. And if you have the cooperation of the fire department as well as civic authorities who are always clamoring about the waste and danger of careless fires, you'll get the men folks, too.

But you can't forget the women, and you've got an angle to lure them also. Johnny Mack Brown is popular with the ladies. They'll turn out to see him, if you make the right kind of effort to let them know that he's heading the cast.

Sell it with costless showmanship exploitation that's doing the fire department a real favor along propaganda and educational lines and you should have no trouble in doing business.

For startling newspaper catchlines use ideas based on these: "If you were trapped on the roof of a ten-story building, would you jump down into a life net? Noel did it." "Would you crawl through a blazing, smoke-filled building to rescue your worst enemy? Johnny Mack Brown did." Such thrill questions, twisted around and elaborated as you will, should stimulate curiosity.

Don't overlook the chances for tieups with fire insurance companies in your advertising. The title is a nifty peg for them to hang all sorts of advertising on. And your personal appearance addressing social and service clubs, urging support of the fire department, should prove helpful.—MCCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Mouogram. Supervised by Trem Carr. Directed by Karl Brown. Original story, adaptation and dialogue by Karl Brown and Lee Chadwick. Photographed by Archie Stout. Release date, May 30, 1932. Running time, 63 minutes.

SHORTS

What Price Air

(Paramount)

Highly Amusing

Tom Howard, comedian, contributes numerous laughs, in humorous situations, as he makes varied futile attempts to board a train at the metropolitan terminal for a vacation and the air the doctor has told him he needs. Each time, after prolonged conversation with the ticket seller, he is stopped by a friend, and misses the train. Each time, a porter takes his baggage, returns the luggage of another person when he attempts to board another train. It is a laugh-provoking short, good on any bill.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Farmer Al Falfa's Bedtime Story

Clever Cartoon

The farmer goes to bed, the cat goes out for the night—and the mice come out to play, as only the animated cartoon artist can make them play. Their tricks and stunts are cleverly drawn, amusing. This rates as among the better of the cartoon shorts.—Running time, 6 minutes.

Heroes of the West

(Universal)

Action Serial

This is the stuff of which youngsters' howls are made. They should stand up on their seats and give full vent to the power of their lungs, when the action of this transcontinental railroad yarn unfolds. The first three episodes of this new serial give promise of excitement to come. Ray Taylor directed the episode play from a story by Peter B. Kyne, centering about the building of the railroad back in 1867, when the Indians were on the warpath, the Pony Express was in its glory, and wagon trains wended their way across the plains. Noah Beery, Jr., young son of senior, looks like his dad, acts well. Titles are thrown against an action sequence on the screen, a voice recounts the story "thus far." Indian fights, hard riding shots are photographed sharply, effectively. William Desmond, Philo McCullough are among the featured players. Plan it for Saturdays. Make the youngsters look forward to it. Episodes run two-reels, each 18 or 20 minutes.

When in Rome

(Vitaphone)

Most Interesting

Most interesting and enlightening, and withal photographically excellent, this subject in the Travel Talk series produced by E. M. Newman should have a place on any program. Clearly pictured, well described are the ancient ruins, some recently excavated in the Italian capital, and the contrast of the movement of the modern city. Intimate closeups of Il Duce, Signor Mussolini, lend a certain personality interest to the short. A musical background is wholly in keeping, never obtrusive.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

Theatre receipts for the calendar week ended June 11, 1932, in the aggregate, with 175 theatres in 31 key cities of the country represented, reached a total of $1,928,776. The decrease, of $127,681, from the total of the previous calendar week, ended on June 4, when $2,056,457 was totaled, is accounted for at least in a measure, by the fact that fewer theatres are listed. During the earlier week, 182 theatres in 31 cities were reported. During the more recent week no new high individual theatre records were established, while 21 new low individual house figures were recorded. This compares with one new "high" and 14 new "lows" noted during the earlier seven-day period.

William Poster
Is My Face Red ?

Ed. (Robert Armstrong) Maloney, columnist on the Examiner, sends in this bleat: "What Park Row drunkard flipped the chip from whose wrong shoulder and woke up to find himself a cigar store Indian?"

Broadway's leading columnist (the sap) is too much of a gentleman to call a polecat a skunk or he'd tell the world that a certain smudge column peep-holer on an evening rag has double crossed himself out of the scene.

Glimpsed what village nudie with popsie Vanderquiller last day-break? . . From Harlem on the North to Broadway on the souse, the electric refrigerator sales conventioneers are White Rocking their baby to sleep. . . . Peggy (Helen Twelvetrees) Bannon is that way about guess who, but your Willyum turns on the heat where he finds it.

Hear a certain broker must pay yellimony to his aluminum blonde heart bumper. . . . Wonder why the milk trust major, in conference at a 56th St. speak-freely at dawning, swore that those garters were sleeve holders. (Was his face red?) The Mrs. should have a more elastic mind. . . . A certain keyhole in the upper seventies reveals new scandalliance. The unnamed shipbuilder in question (Ah there, Hector!) prefers to ignore the rumor (Adelaide, be brave). The rowdy-dowdy dowager who wore two gigolos last night (one on each chin) will probably turn this on and take a cold shiver.

Daughter of American Pickle Co. and son of Amalgamated Horse Radish Ltd. are having a heart-to-heart balk. Happy couple will be in the market for new throwing china tomorrow Business as usual during altercations.

The chaperones got lost overnight in the engineroom on a yatch-cha party last Sat.-Sun. Party started optimistic, ended misty-optic. Matron of margerine millions, at exactly 3·27 A. M., accosted her chauffeur-hubby giving a music lesson to Whose Little Whosis? Another re-penthouse will be Reno-vated this summer (heigho!)

A Broadway columnist whose initials are W.P will soon middle-aisle it with a Park Ave. angel Don't tell me the answer See if I can guess.

Speaking of murder, there's blood on the cheese knife in a well known mid-town speak, and a certain beer czar aint been seen since 3 A. M. When the police read this, will their face be red?

It's all in the picture, Mr. and Mrs. America. You'll want to shoot him, but you can't help loving Mrs. Poster's little boy Willie (the sap) and you'll trickle out of the

The first real "Colyumnist" story, weeks ahead of the field, while the critics go Ga-Ga and get "that way" about it and box-offices get their faces lifted!*

"As spiced and sparkling as tomorrow's gossip column . . . top-skill playing, crisp wit, driving action, the tang of Broadway—well, whatever comedy drama needs to recommend it." —N. Y. American

"A shrewd, witty and scathing portrait and Mr. Cortez plays it to the hilt . . . —New York Times

"Star creates full-bodied character as newspaper gentleman at the keyhole . . . they handed him a rattling good story and he knows what to do with an opportunity . . . fast paced . . . entire cast is excellent." —New York World-Telegram

KNOCKS HOLLYWOOD FOR A ROW OF STARS

And we present herewith the pictures to prove it—with the "Roar of the Dragon" in progress at the RKO Studios, the Almanac arrived adjacent to the set and called a recess. Left to right we have here Richard Dix, with the Almanac open to the Biographies, Section "D"; Arline Judge, with the Almanac open at Section "J"; Wesley Ruggles with the Almanac open at the letter "R", and Eddie Cronjager, cameraman, looking into the "C's."

On the principle that we are always for actors, and that every press agent down the eons of history has been entitled to a break when he pictured a client reading a publication, we are giving the Almanac only 95 per cent of the pictorial space in this display. We think it's a great little book.

THE SUMMER SHOW

by
RITA C. McGOLDRICK

THE school year is winding itself up. Within two weeks the children of the nation will be small free agents wondering what to do with their time and eager to go more often to the pictures. Retrenchment in the family budget for entertainment undoubtedly will be emphasized, but after all, clouds have linings and it is true of the people of this nation that they do not remain beaten for long. The pendulum may swing far—but it has to swing back. The arc may be of smaller range, but the balance is sure. All of which is to say that the summer entertainment problem will require all of the energy, ingenuity, industry, vision and executive capacity that every theatre man is possessed of. It is a simple matter of fundamental psychology that wearied people require entertainment; and the motion picture offers more for one's money than any other commodity in the world.

Corral the Children!

In the past year MOTION PICTURE HERALD through the department School and Screen has accomplished definite strides toward the winning of school children's interest in the better things of the screen. Cooperating teachers, educators, parent-teacher units and clubwomen have made practical use of this service. Through the summer, most of these organized groups are inactive. The theatre man, however, cannot afford to allow a paying possibility to wither on his hands because of the heat! For that reason, it is the purpose of this department to continue to review and to list all pictures of importance to juveniles and to supplement the reviews with suggestions for the further development of the Junior Show idea. The summer should be the harvest time for the winning of child interest in your theatre. Now is the time for intelligent planning for results.

An Idea from Publix Theatres

Amherst, Mass.

The manager of the Amherst theatre, Raymond F. Smith, has sent us his idea of the Junior Show and the summer's possibilities. He says: "We have had two Junior Shows during the past two months in cooperation with the local Parent-Teachers Association, whose members acted as sponsors and furnished a great deal of valuable publicity at no cost to the theatre. We could not have obtained these under any other conditions.

"We used 'Alice in Wonderland' for the first show and 'Puss in Boots' for the second, with selected cartoons and novelties added to the feature at each show. We started our show at 4:30 p.m. after the regular matinee on Friday. Regular children's admission price prevailed—10c—with an admission fee of 30c for adults. Both shows were very successful financially, but the children as a whole did not seem to be very enthusiastic about the attractions.

"Cooperation from the Parent-Teachers Association consisted of the distribution of 1,500 announcement cards throughout the public schools of Amherst, mention in all Sunday School classes, special articles in newspapers and discussion of the project at women's clubs, lodges, etc.

"During the summer period we are planning to have a Family Show each Thursday. On this program we will use a selected group of shorts and an appropriate feature, together with a chapter of 'The Last of the Mohicans.' We are going to advertise these programs as such, and there is no doubt in my mind that they will be an outstanding success."

Endorsed Lists

The national organizations engaged in the preview and classification of current motion pictures ordinarily discontinue the mailing of their lists through the vacation period. This year, because of the increasing demand for this type of service, several of the organizations have sent out announcements asking for a written statement of request from those persons or groups having definite use for the lists during the summertime. The answering mail has been something of a surprise to everyone connected with this work. The letters are pouring in, all begging to have the service continued. Many of the letters are from public libraries. Here are typical ones:

"We note on the list of Endorsed Motion Pictures for June that the list will be discontinued through the summer months unless there is a special request for a continuance.

"We post the list on our library bulletin boards each month and our patrons look them over frequently. It is very important for us to have the lists sent continuously.

"We appreciate this means of bringing before our people the best of the films that are produced and thank you for this important service."

Rockingham Free Public Library,
Bellows Falls, Vermont.

"We want to thank you for your list of selections and beg of you to continue this service during July and August. The list is an invaluable help and is used to a great extent in our library. Our patrons would miss them seriously if they were discontinued."

The Narragansett Library Association,
Peace Dale, R. I.

These are random samples of an outpouring of appreciation and proves beyond any doubt that there is a definite and wide field for this form of free publicity for motion pictures!

Perhaps of more importance to the industry and to the public is the reaction of the editors of newspapers. It is only a short step back to the day when most newspapers of any standing would have nothing to do with free publicity for the motion picture that might otherwise be a contributing account in the papers' advertising department. But that day has passed. Some of the most influential chains of papers are now eager to cooperate in this work, and the following letter from an editor whose paper has a circulation of more than one million says:

"In compliance with the notice attached to the June list of selected pictures, I wish hereby to ask you to continue sending us the service on selected films. We will need it particularly during the summer months.

"As you perhaps know, the names of the endorsed motion pictures are reprinted in our papers for the benefit of our readers. We thank you for supplying us with this invaluable service."

There are many more. The letters are a most heartening sign. Interest as keen and as wideflung as this must have resultant good.

This department is particularly interested in your experience, your viewpoint. Send us news of your experiments. What are your plans for the summer? How are you developing programs to win bigger audiences of children? Your experience is valuable to the theatre man in another town or another state. This department, as a clearing house for audience problems, welcomes a message from you.

MPTOA Convention May Meet At Kansas City Next Year

Kansas City may be the scene of the next annual convention of the MPTOA, according to E. Van Hyning, president of the MPTOA of Kansas and Missouri, who is a member of the executive board of the national organization.

While St. Louis is making a strong bid for the annual meeting and Pinehurst, N. C., also is a contender, Van Hyning is of the opinion the executive board will decide on Kansas City, although it will not meet to decide until early in the fall. The Kansas City Chamber of Commerce intends to wage a vigorous campaign to bring the gathering to Kansas City.

Hays Asks Resubmission of Prohibition Question

Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, identified himself as one of the Republican leaders for resubmission of the prohibition question, by appearing at the Republican National Convention in Chicago this week in charge of the Indiana Republican delegation's fight for a resubmission plank. Mr. Hays, who attended the nominating convention as a delegate-at-large, has been an advocate of prohibition for years.

Dickinson Gets $1,154 Verdict

Glen W. Dickinson, head of the Dickinson theatres in Kansas, has been awarded a verdict of $1,154 in his suit for $72,000 against the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Lawrence. Dickinson alleged the organization failed to build a theatre on a site which it owned, according to a contract signed in 1926.

Tower Plans 12 Features

Tower Pictures plans the production of 12 melodramas next season, all to be released on the state rights market. Capitol Exchange will handle the features in New York.

LOOK AHEAD, NOT BEHIND!

THE theatrical season of 1931-32 now closed has been heavy with many crucial problems encountered in the life of the men who are responsible for the operation of the thousands of theatres throughout the land.

To many of these men, toiling against heavy odds, the past season has brought discouragement, weariness of body and spirit, and to some, even defeat. But it is typical of the class of men who make up the great army of American showmen that they come through smiling even though they carry many battle scars. And when the new season gets under way next fall they will have almost entirely forgotten the trials and tribulations of the past season in their usual optimistic and aggressive way.

If you are laboring under the illusion that showbusiness was the only field where much had to be swallowed and overlooked, then you are blind to conditions surrounding you wherever you may be. Every business in the country has had its ups and downs, mostly downs, and those employed in the different enterprises have had to go through as much or more than we did.

It is but a true statement of fact that poor product has been our biggest handicap, but it is just as true that where showmen put forth extra effort and energetic showmanship they were rewarded by seeing the receipts in their theatres holding up to somewhere near normal.

On the other hand, where the house managers were seized with panic and "laid down" both on the job and the merchandising, the business fell to new low levels. And many, yes too many, got away with it because those above them believed that the condition was general and not local.

"Necessity is the mother of invention." Never was there a truer statement as applied to showbusiness. Before grosses took nose-dives we were not compelled to do almost impossible things to keep out of the red. But when we were faced with terrible grosses, constant falling away of admissions and a far from happy outlook for the immediate future we had to dig deep into the recesses of our brains to discover new and different methods and ideas to get patrons to the box office. But in accomplishing this almost impossible feat we demonstrated our ability to cope with the toughest of situations and come through it even if only with a limited measure of success for our efforts.

This is no time for day-dreaming. The heat of the summer may have a "slowing-down" effect on your friends but so far as you are concerned you must devote all your spare time to doping out ways and means of keeping that ticket machine going to the tune of profits. And against hot weather, carnivals, circuses, outdoor amusements, bathing beaches and other forms of summer competition.

And not too far in the offing is that "new season" which must be ushered in with every indication to your public and community that theatres were built for amusement, entertainment and relaxation and you fully intend to let them have their share in your particular house.

Start early—and often—to let them know about the elaborate plans of the studios to present the finest of pictures since the advent of sound. As new contracts are made for next season's product be sure to get your newspapers to carry stories about it. Start to key up interest and keep it sustained so that your theatre will enjoy the benefits of a vast advance campaign designed to start the new season off in a blaze of glory and profits which you must maintain for the forty odd weeks of the season.

Ideas. Ideas. Ideas. You will find them on every side you turn. The brains of the entire industry, and the advertising industry as well, are obtained in these inserts about next season's product. No smart showman can honestly say that he cannot glean dozens of ideas and selling angles from those inserts and the subsequent product ads which are carried in MOTION PICTURE HERALD fifty-two weeks of the year. How anyone can thumb through one of the issues without finding some new slant to capitalize on is a mystery.

Merchandising. Brand new angles. Old ideas revamped or dressed in new clothes. And all designed to pull patrons to your theatre. Surely you cannot conscientiously say that you are isolated or lacking in aids to help you run your theatre or advertise its pictures. There is no other business in this whole wide world where so much is done to help you sell the industry's output to the consumer.

Take advantage of every means offered to help you. Read the trade papers; get the campaign books on every picture; see what the other fellow is doing. Then see what you can do. AND DO IT.

The wounds of the past season will soon fade away in the plans and preparations for the season to come. The weariness of the body will soon fall away under the enthusiasm of a brighter outlook and, call me what you will, I still insist on looking at the bright side of life.

MAYBE YOUR USHERS CAN DO AS WELL AS THESE TWO IOWA LADS

Of direct interest to ushers who aim to improve their time and opportunities for advancement in showbusiness is the essence of a newspaper clipping sent the Club by Richard Clark, former usher at the Majestic Theatre, Centerville, Iowa, and now somewhere in Mexico, where he went following graduation from a local school.

Clark and another usher-associate, Robert Garrett, who also edited the high school newspaper at the time, wrote and directed a clever Kiddie Revue which, due to success of its first presentation, had to be repeated. Two newspaper ads at hand are enlightening to the extent that while the first mentioned the revue in a small box, the next ad for the second performance split space with the feature attraction, thus testifying to what the theatre management thought of it as a draw.

The above is mentioned to show that many ushers take their jobs seriously and are ever on the alert to help out their manager with extra time. A goodly percentage of the boys fill in at theatres while attending high school or college and practically all may be classed as potential showmen of high calibre. Might it not be well for some of us to take a leaf from the Majestic's book and offer the boys every encouragement in their climb up the ladder?

TIME SERVICE AND OTHER GAGS IN USE BY ROLAND DOUGLAS

A few weeks ago we wrote Roland Rogers, manager of the RKO Orpheum Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, for details on a "correct time service" gag he had been using to good results and he not only favored us with that information but threw in a couple of more gags for good measure.

First let us describe the time service stunt which was alluded to in a past issue of this department. Maybe you've a regular time service company in your town and then again maybe you haven't. Douglas happens to have one in his city and has arranged for the concern to take care of calls in lieu of an exchange of tickets. He advertises on his screen that anyone may call a certain telephone number and receive the correct time. This is plugged consistently. When the call comes in the current program is named and then follows the correct time. Managers in towns not having a regular time service can get a rate from the Telephone Company for an extra 'phone for a theatre time service. It is most important to stress the telephone number in all screen or other advertising.

Douglas and his mates often dig through newspaper morgues for old ideas and then adapt them to modern use. For instance, we see by one of his tear sheets a two-column cut headed "Movie Fans All Agog Over Wheeler-Woolsey Contest," or a which is which, who's whoozis stunt. The photo contains a dozen shots of the comedians in different character roles and the idea is to sort them out and then answer such questions as: "Is Woolsey the short fellow? Does Wheeler wear eyeglasses? Is Wheeler the better looking? Who makes love to Dorothy Lee? Which is the funnier? Which the better dancer," etc.

Tremendous Response!

Over 8,300 answers were received to the above and Douglas tells us that the stunt clicked first rate with the newspaper. One reason the paper liked it was because the management could get a check on men and women readers, since names were signed to all contributions.

Inspiration for another gag recently used by Douglas came when walking past the Salvation Army booth in St. Paul where unemployed persons were eating apples. On his return to Sioux City he went around to the newspaper office and told the advertising man that the theatre wanted to hire some local men (he used five) at $1 per hour to advertise a picture. He sought advice from the paper as to whom he should go to secure this service, implying that the work should go to members of distressed families. Experience leads Douglas to state that nine times out of ten the Welfare Board of the Salvation Army will be named as the proper place to secure the men, also that in as many instances the paper will come through with free space for story and art.

Get Well Organized!

The next step is to collect your men and tell them that you want them to pass out apples on the streets at high noon and that you will pay them $1 per hour for their services, but will use them only two hours each day for two or three days. Then tie-up with some fruit-produce concern to furnish six barrels of apples, or whatever quantity you may decide to distribute. Next have 2¼x4¼ inch tags printed with theatre copy. On "Forbidden" Douglas used, "Forbidden Fruit—What Eve Did to Adam With an Apple Is Nothing to What Barbara Stanwyck Does to Adolphe Menjou in 'Forbidden' at the Empire." You can suit yourselves as to copy and apply same to any number of pictures. Tags are fastened to apples with a staple carpet tack. Don't forget that the produce company will pay half of all printing, since the theatre stand for cost of men.

We are indeed grateful to Douglas for sending along additional information on the time service gag and as well appreciative of his other suggestions. We are certain all three will be picked up and used by other members of this organization. Let's have some more of the same calibre, Doug.

NOT NERVY—JUST PARTICULAR!

The manager, William Codkas, of the Publix Paramount Theatre, Newport, R. I., recently conducted a tea-party in conjunction with a 10c. matinee.

Imagine his amusement upon being the recipient of a telephone call from a stranger requesting that in accordance with the wishes of two Swedish friends would he mind serving coffee in place of tea!

COPPOCK STILL VERY MUCH ON THE JOB AT STATEN ISLAND HOUSE

Here are a few of the show-selling stunts used by E. S. C. Coppock, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Staten Island, N. Y., when putting over "When a Feller Needs a Friend" and "Explorers of the World."

Ice cream party on Saturday opening matinee with 500 dishes of ice cream promoted from Castles Ice Cream Company; 30" ad in Staten Island Press Friday in advance free on promotional angle of extending age limit for Saturday matinee from 12 to 14 years to bearers of ad clipped from paper; in appreciation of past advertising, the Staten Island Transcript gave a 30" ad Friday in advance for price of 15"; newsboys theatre party for Staten Island Advance carriers which netted two special stories; Inmates of Farm Colony seeing picture Monday afternoon as guests of Daughters of American Revolution; Entire week designated as "Family Week"; Stage attraction "Dauntless" movie dog. This booking netted two free radio plugs and free space in New York Daily Mirror; Better Films Council sponsoring pictures and sending special letters to all organizations and schools on the Island plugging the entire weeks' program and the fact that features were repeated on matinees to enable school children to see it before supper; Representatives of Better Films Council sent speakers to all luncheon clubs plugging programs; Better Films Council persuaded Superintendent of Schools to have principals of every school make announcements at assembly plugging programs; Special 15' lobby display adapted from 24-sheet suspended from grand staircase one week in advance; Staten Island Press, Transcript and Advance have accepted special ¼-page feature stories on "Explorers of the World"; Monday and Thursday designated as "Father & Son Day" for civic clubs; Chief Scout Executive sent bulletins to all Scoutmasters recommending week's attractions; All posting and mailing carried copy about "Family Week"; In appreciation of past business B. & O. gave us free card display in Staten Island trains; Promoted from National City Bank of New York interesting display of 350 silver dollars, representing the dollar coinage of all nations of the world from the year 1250 A.D.

BERT LEIGHTON HAD TRICK HERALD MADE UP ON "MAN WANTED"

A novelty herald was used to good advantage by Bert Leighton, manager of the Stanley Theatre, Utica, N. Y., when selling "Man Wanted." It was 13 inches long by 4½ inches wide and folded a la accordion. Three folds displayed the title head, "Man Wanted—Young, Handsome, etc., to Take the Place of One Who Has Fallen Down on His Job," etc.; the next fold displayed, "See Kay Francis," and the next, "At the Stanley." When pulled open a number of catchlines and other copy greeted the eye.

Leighton's gag was an attractive variation of the teaser folder and large enough to permit use of plenty of copy. This is the first news we've had of the Strand since Ed Hart left there for Troy, and we hope that Leighton will keep this department informed on what's going on.

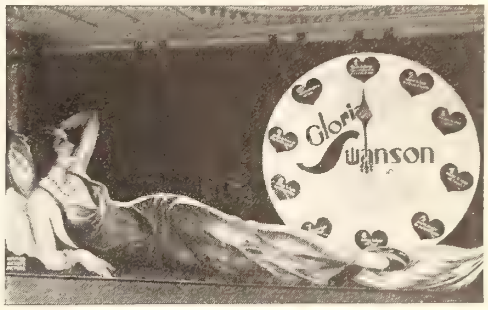
TIME ELEMENT WAS EFFECTIVE ANGLE IN FRANK HILL DISPLAY

The element of time as suggested by the title, "Tonight or Never," inspired Frank B. Hill, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Walla Walla, Wash., to use a novel mechanical front for an attention-getter on that picture. The same idea was followed out both in newspaper ads and heralds.

Note that the hand of the clock in the photo showing cut-out figure of Miss Swanson points to Heart No. 1, which carries the first of a series of catchlines. When the hand hits the numeral it lights up two 1,000-watt lamps placed in back of the cutout. These were covered with red to give out a deep red light, but show up only on Heart No. 1 in order to stress the copy, "He Gave Her 1 Minute to Change from a Creature of Ice—To a Woman of Fire." The hand stops about 10 seconds at each of the 10 hearts as it makes its rounds. "He Gave Her" appears on all of them and all copy was done in metallics.



Next note the newspaper ad and you will be able to pick up the balance of the catchlines. Also, that the "10-minute" idea has been faithfully carried out by placing a sketch of a clock near the mat of Miss Swanson and by the box containing the 10 catchlines. The herald was an exact replica of the ad except that the catchlines were run off in red.

BEN KATZ COVERING LOT OF GROUND OUT IN MILWAUKEE ZONE

Two campaigns waged recently by Ben Katz, Warner publicity man in the Milwaukee zone, indicates that he is following his customary swift pace. Below is a brief resume of work done on "Mouthpiece" and "So Big":

Included in "Mouthpiece" were special twenty-five line teasers used in newspapers four days in advance; special space for regular ad campaign; announcements of opening over regular radio time; a tie-up with radio station for free announcements during daily organ broadcast; a special screening for 100 of Milwaukee's outstanding attorneys; the contacting of executive members of the local Bar Association; 1,500 letters mailed to all attorneys in Milwaukee county; special front display; special art and stories in all papers; 3,000 "Mouthpiece" hangers tied to telephones in downtown area; the display of 22 special stills in windows of leading merchants on a main thoroughfare, and special copy trailer plugging picture in all Warner neighborhood theatres.

On "So Big" he tied up with the public library for the insertion of 6,000 bookmarks; tied up with a leading paper for three special quarter-page display ads at no cost to theatre; mailed special anniversary and picture announcements to all on house mailing list; effected a tie-up with 48 Walgreen Drug Co. stores for displays and plug on "So Big" sundae; arranged with all book stores and department stores for Edna Ferber—"So Big" window displays; used special truck bally of hugh book for three days; had a special balcony hanger in lobby for two weeks in advance; decorated front of theatre with banners and lights; made elaborate front display for current showing; placed illuminated birthday cake in lobby; tied up with bakery for small cakes for ladies at matinees; promoted floral display from florist; used regular radio time to announce anniversary and picture; ran special copy trailers in all Warner neighborhood houses; used special anniversary trailer at theatre; arranged parade with local Chevrolet dealer on opening day; placed special art and stories in all papers, and contacted city editors for special gag pictures during anniversary week.

If Ben missed anyone around Milwaukee who could have been of further assistance in the two campaigns outlined above, maybe he'll tell us about it later on, but it looks as though he covered the town like an April shower. A lot of work for any one man to do, without a doubt, but productive of gratifying results and that's what counts these days. We hope a number of the stunts he used will find favor with his fellow Club members.

ONCE A SHOWMAN, ALWAYS!

We honestly believe the acme of opportunism in exploitation was reached when Clarence ReQua, manager of the Cozy Theatre, Norton, Kas., tied-up with the local newspaper for a publicity gag on the occasion of the birth of a son and heir. Says the "Norton Champion" under the head of "New Cozy Manager":

"The Cozy Theatre has a new manager. He started work Sunday morning at 11:05 from the Laird hospital. He weighs only 8½ pounds, has red hair and a husky voice and will make his future home with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence ReQua.

"When you meet him remember his name is L. W. ReQua.

"Leonidas Wellington ReQua?

"Lancelot Warwick ReQua?

"Leander Wallenstein ReQua?

"Lincoln Washington ReQua?

"We give the reader only one guess. Fill in the blanks correctly and get The Champion free one year.

"L.......... W.......... ReQua."

Okay, Clarence, that was fast work. Why not make it a twin deal next time?

ASTOR LOBBY DISPLAY VERY ATTRACTIVE

Above reproduction of the side wall treatment of the lobby of the Astor Theatre, New York City, on "Grand Hotel," falls 'way short of doing justice to the fine piece of work turned out by the local M-G-M art department. All scene stills and photos of the stars surrounding the one of Miss Garbo in center are several times enlarged and the effect is quite striking. Directly below the Garbo portrait is a photo of a hotel directory, bearing signatures of the principal players. A piece of art work slantingly obscures the balance of names.

KEN LONG'S SERIES ON EXCHANGE MATS AND ADVERTISING!

Illustrated on Opposite Page

Your advertisement is your SALESMAN IN PRINT! It sells only to the extent of the thought and preparation put into it. A well written ad does not necessarily mean it is an ad that sells. No matter how much punch the copy may have, if it is not read, it is worthless. Make your ad COMPEL the attention of a reader AND KEEP IT. Use clear, simple illustrations, unusual catchlines and good typographical display. Keep the reader reading by making it easy for him.

Six point, upper and lower case, should be the minimum size type for body copy. Avoid setting such copy too wide—thirty-five to forty letters and spaces to the line is plenty. Also avoid setting it too narrow—this necessitates the dividing of too many words, which naturally makes the reading hard.

Bold faced type is essential in a theatre ad, but it should be confined to display lines—ALL emphasis is NO emphasis.

Underlining words slows up the reader. This device has its advantages but should be used with discretion.

White lettering on black has attention value, as has black letters on a gray background, but both are hard to read, especially when letters are small.

Too many imaginary margins should be avoided. Note the neat appearance brought about by even margins in the layouts on the opposite page. Careful arrangement of type achieves this neatness so desirable for easy reading.

The position of the theatre name in an ad has always been a debatable question—should it be at the top or bottom of the ad. Of course, there is no definite rule as to where it should ALWAYS be placed. However, if the copy begins with a dramatic catchline, it is advisable to let this catchline be the beginning of the entire ad, and carry the signature cut at the bottom. Compare Illustration "A" with Illustration "B" on the opposite page. Both layouts have the same copy, but note how the full value of the catchline is lost by the dominance of the theatre name in Illustration "B".

In ads of unusual depth (Illustration "C") the theatre name may be used at top AND bottom. However, with this amount of space available, it is better to use it in as nearly a five by eight ratio as possible.

Illustrations "A" and "B" are two-column by six-inch layouts on "Society Girl." Mat. No. 2-D is used in both. Illustration "C" is a one-column by nine inches, using mat No. 1-C.

Illustration "D" is a two-column by seven and one-half-inch display on "As You Desire Me" using mat. No. 539-H. Illustration "E" is a one-column by five inches using mat No. 539-A13. Illustration "F" is a one-column by three-inch all type ad. Copy for all ads is suggested from the press sheet.

BOB CHAMBERS WON FIRST HONORS FOR BEST THEATRE ADV.

Robert W. Chambers, artist for the R. E. Bair theatres in Indianapolis, and whose work you have seen reproduced in this department, was recently awarded first prize in a theatre ad layout contest sponsored by a local newspaper and the Indiana Theatre.

The winning ad was chosen because of its general excellence as well as its "theatrical feeling." It was a two-column by 12-inch display, headed in bold italics "It Should Do Your Heart Good," a quote from a reviewer on the newspaper. A scene cut followed, under which was mentioned the title, "Symphony of Six Million," catchline, principals in cast, playdate and theatre.

We will hope to present further evidence of Chambers' work in future issues.

Keeping Up With The Times!

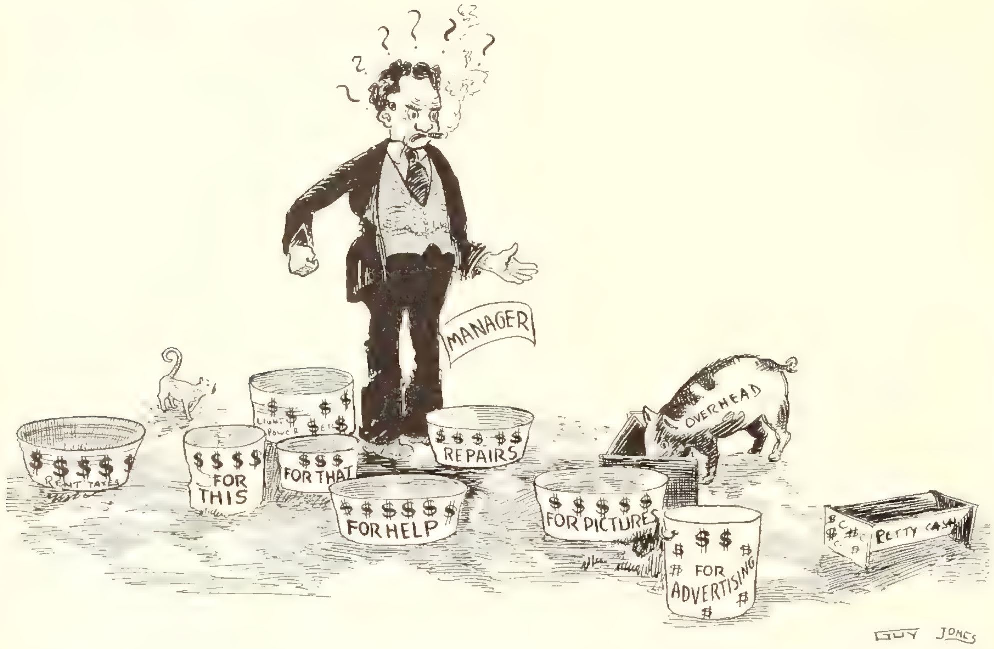
By GUY JONES



After many years of heavy eating, this hog must now be put on a very strict diet, otherwise he will be eating you out of theatre and business. How to curb his immense appetite is the major problem of the day. Possibly cutting down a little on each dish will bring about the desired results. At any rate, economy is the ruling factor of today and good showmen must learn to be practical business men in the handling of expenses and waste. Think it over, boys, before someone else must do the thinking for you.

ALEXANDER STAGED ANNIVERSARY WEEK IN ROXBURY HOUSE

Anniversary Week was celebrated a short time ago by Irving P. Alexander, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, Roxbury, Mass. Following are some of the advertising activities employed for the occasion:

Publication of 5,000 co-operative heralds in the form of a 6-page tab size newspaper by the service staff of the theatre, which were distributed throughout Roxbury and at the theatre; a local orchestra was secured for lobby during week, playing from 7 to 7.30 P. M., which afforded patrons the opportunity of dancing before evening performance. Through a tie-up with a local beverage company a tonic was served in the lobby each day of the week.

Novelty matinees for the children were staged for the children every afternoon during the week, which featured balloon blowing, tug-o'-war contests and tonic-drinking. The tug-o'-war stunts have become a weekly occasion.

An inner-lobby stunt was used to obtain word-o'-mouth advertising. A thirteen-year-old boy, clever at the piano, was secured for the week and used every evening after the orchestra finished. The boy was masked and placed in the center lobby alcove, flooded by spot lights. He rendered vocal and piano numbers and the theatre management received much favorable comment on his performance.

All the above was handled at no cost to the theatre and we'll certainly have to give the staff credit for getting a corking co-operative newspaper. It was chock full of interesting stories. We're obliged to Alexander for making it possible to get the above information of his anniversary and will hope to be kept posted on future show-selling activities at the Rivoli.

Invited All Preachers

Special invitations to witness "Man Who Played God" were sent to all ministers in his city by James R. Work, manager of the Mission Theatre, San Diego, Calif. The invitations were accompanied by a letter written in the nature of a friendly challenge to see the picture. Work states that a number of the ministers praised the picture from the pulpit and wrote letters of congratulation and encouragement for efforts to improve films. The house enjoyed splendid business as a result of the attendant publicity.

FRED MEYER WAGED A HEAVY CAMPAIGN ON SINGLE REELER

When exploiting a short subject of the Aimee McPherson-Walter Huston "Wet or Dry" debate, Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., used a large mailing list and a street bally to arouse interest.

The post cards mailed were headed in bold face, "Prohibition Debate." Following copy read, "Wet or dry, you'll respond to the most telling arguments yet set forth on today's greatest issue. Not since the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate on Slavery, in 1860, has anything approached this for smashing dramatic effect and forceful logic. Hear and see—Aimee Semple McPherson (speaking for prohibition)—Walter Huston (protesting for the wets)—recording for the talking screen as they appeared at the Angelus Temple in Los Angeles. Now playing at the Alhambra."

A beer truck loaded with beer kegs, drawn by horses, was paraded up and down the streets for a bally, bannered with, "Will This Ever Carry Beer Again—Alhambra This Week—Prohibition Debate Between Aimee McPherson and Walter Huston." The box office was enclosed to resemble a stein of beer, and "Wet or Dry" was flashed in big letters above the box office.

That was considerable exploitation for a single reel subject, but Fred Meyer was keen enough showman to realize that history may shortly be written on the prohibition situation at the forthcoming Republican and Democratic conventions and knew that a screen debate between two persons in the public eye would be of interest. With the stands being taken by other prominent citizens during pre-convention days, the subject was a timely one and certainly worthy of the attention he gave it.

The Alhambra is closed for the summer months at this writing but Fred Meyer will remain in his territory until he again opens up for fall trade. He is too live a showman to rest on his laurels even during the summer so don't be surprised if more of his stunts pop up before Fall.

RANDFORCE EXECUTIVES AND SUPERVISORS

LYKES IS PLUGGING ALONG AND SELLING SHOWS AT HIS HOUSE

Once again we're able to report on the interesting activities of J. E. Lykes, manager of Loew's Park Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, this time on campaigns made on "Tarzan," "Business and Pleasure" and "One Hour With You." All bear witness that this Round Tabler is forever plugging along.

The accompanying photo is a reproduction of the lobby display he made on "Tarzan" and we're here to tell you that the lion in the cage is a real one. A number of palms and grass mats were used for further atmosphere and a life-size cutout of Tarzan carrying the girl in his arms also lent to the general scheme. This display was used one week in advance and currently.

Other advertising and exploitation included a large, illuminated shadow-box of 12 photos three weeks in advance; the posting of 24-sheets three weeks in advance; teaser trailers three weeks in advance; a marquee valance with extra large letters and cutouts; distribution of 5,000 tabloids in homes; 3,000 die-cut heralds in connection with regular school contest; 2,000 mimeographed heralds in stores, etc.; 100 window cards in good locations; 50 hanging cards in stores, etc.; use of special matinee coupon in "Shopping News" for children, good for 5c on regular admission; a midnight show, and street bally.

A voting booth was used one week in advance in the lobby of "Business and Pleasure" and ballots were mimeographed for the occasion. Names of candidates included Herbert Hoover, Al Smith, Gov. Ritchie, Chas. Dawes, Newton Baker, Owen Young, Gov. Murray, Franklin Roosevelt and, of course, Will Rogers, star of the picture. A desk was provided for making notation on ballots, as well as a receptacle for them. So many votes were cast that the box had to be emptied every day.

A "Jeanette MacDonald Resemblance" contest proved an effective means of exploiting "One Hour With You," and this stunt was tied up with a local "Danceland." Chevalier Night was featured for the playing of music from the show and awards of a dress, hat, shoes, hosiery and a necklace were promoted from local merchants for the winner. The awards were displayed in the theatre lobby for ten days prior to showing of picture. Plugs for the event were made by daily announcements over radio and at the dance hall, where 15,000 special tickets for Chevalier Night were distributed at no cost to theatre. This tie-up created a lot of interest and materially aided the box office. The photos of the girl entrants were also promoted from a local photographer.

All of which proves, as we stated above, that Manager Lykes has been plugging along in his effective way of selling shows at the Park. The Club has a live lot of members out in Cleveland and this Round Tabler is one of them. We hope he'll keep his fellow showmen posted on future happenings.

Kansas City Changes

C. P. Forbes, formerly manager of the Fox Theatre, Topeka, Kas., has been appointed manager of the Fox-Grand Theatre, Kansas City, according to a recent announcement by Harry McClure, district manager.

SPEAKING OF ADVERTISING!

Robert R. Sisk in the May 30th issue of RKO NOW says:

As important a job as a theatre manager has is attention to his advertising.

Millions of dollars per year are spent on it.

Yet, too often, ads appear which fail in their purpose.

And their purpose is important and obvious . . . these ads MUST sell our show.

Vaudeville and pictures. Pictures and vaudeville.

Maybe the picture over the vaudeville or the vaudeville over the picture, according to the importance of the individual item.

Small cuts that tell nothing ruin ads.

Great details of line drawing, the effort to sell too many ideas in too small a space . . . harmful.

Freakish art stuff . . . harmful.

The ads should be simple, should have a decent quality and should tell their story in as few words as possible.

You are kidding yourself if you rely upon row after row of superlatives to do the trick.

White space is important. Crowding it into every line you buy is making those lines more costly than you might believe—because it means throwing them away.

None of us would let a show come in without giving it an ad break. But too often shows do come in without having been properly advertised.

One cut can often do the trick.

A few lines of copy can often do the trick.

And, week after week, there must be a tone to the ads which makes the people of your community have respect for what you advertise. Truthful advertising never cost anyone a dollar. The other type has cost millions.

Keep it simple?

By all means.

There is the story in circulation of a Western community which had a sign posted on a bridge "minimum speed crossing this bridge 25 miles per hour."

The speeding continued and it was checked. The reasons developed led to the elimination of the word "minimum."

Advertising has proved itself.

The first ad in English appeared in 1477.

The first newspaper ad appeared in 1625.

Just 14 years after that, in 1639, tobacco ads began appearing. Coffee ads began appearing in 1657.

Theatrical ads shortly after, though it was well into the nineteenth century before display theatre advertising developed.

Now it is well developed. You have hundreds of good ad examples before you in the daily papers. Watch them and study them and always know that if your show isn't well presented in your advertising that it has been placed under a terrific handicap.

Few shows advertise themselves.

SHEPHERD'S MICKEY MOUSE NUMBER STILL CLICKING IN MIAMI

Looking over a Miami newspaper recently we were again reminded that Sonny Shepherd, manager of the Biltmore Theatre in that city, is still writing his column for his famous Mickey Mouse Club, of which we've had occasion to comment upon many times. The column carries a slug at the top that reads, "News and Notes—Mickey Mouse Club—For Boys and Girls," with Shepherd's byline following. The paragraphs are newsy, interesting and of a kind which undoubtedly carry strong appeal to the members.

Again reminding Round Tablers that this Mickey Mouse Club boasts a group of entertainers, all carefully coached by Shepherd, we note that they have become a weekly feature over local radio station WIOD every Wednesday. Under direction of Maestro Shepherd the 13-piece orchestra and other talented members of the large organization are entertaining the radio public and, incidentally, getting in a good plug for the Biltmore.

Okay, Sonny, and continued success to you and your gang of Mickey Mousers. Also, thanks for the copy of "The Hornet," which appears to carry quite a sting. May we congratulate both you and Jack Fink on occasion of the "social" items. Take time off from daily routine and admiration of the g.f.'s recent gift of the golf bag and tell us more about showbusiness in your attractive city until next winter when we hope to go back there and see for ourselves.

There are other Round Tablers in Winter resorts who will be very much interested to know what methods you are employing to boost trade in the off-season.

MORE SUMMER SUGGESTIONS!

Check and Double-Check . . .

Check your cooling system. See that it is clean and in working condition. If it is in need of repairs . . . have the work done at once . . . don't wait!

Clean up . . . have everything as clean as spring.

Get cool colors into your lobby displays . . . greens and blues—greys and straw; keep away from warm reds.

Floral displays always help—palms in the lobby . . . flowers in the foyer . . . hanging baskets with vines from your marquee. In this regard . . . try to work up an arrangement with your leading florist. Give him a card . . . "Floral Displays from —" in a conspicuous place.

Fountain Tie-up . . .

Soon people will be flocking to the soda fountains . . . work up specials . . . "Joan Crawford Sundae"—and the score of others to meet your picture bookings.

Cards back of the counter . . . on the mirror base . . . are in full sight of everyone.

Do you want paper napkins for soda fountains?

Tie-up with your local merchant and have the napkins imprinted. You can have a one time run off with "cool copy" or have a run off each week with the name of your current attraction.

Ice . . . .

The ice dealers are constantly fighting the electric refrigerator people . . . here's your chance to give the ice dealer some free publicity—

The first few days of summer . . . keep a few cakes of ice on the sidewalk in front of your theatre . . . with a sign—"Cool and Comfortable in the Blank Theatre—New, clean, fresh air changed every five minutes."

Is there a sculptor in your town?

Engage him for a week . . . get a metal trough . . . place it on a table . . . get him some cakes of clear ice . . . let him "sculp" figures as the audience enters the theatre.

Can you get a breeze from your lobby so that it will hit the street? Two years ago . . . the coolest spot on Broadway was the lobby of the Paramount Theatre. People stopped, as that draught of cool air hit them . . . many of them going to the box office. To me . . . the coolness of the lobby is one of your best advertising bets.

Bathing Parade . . .

Can you organize a bathing suit parade . . . do it through the best dealer in merchandise of this sort. Have the revue on your stage . . . on your mezzanine—anywhere that it will attract attention. Give a series of cups for the prizes—best suit . . . most original . . . best figure . . . prettiest girl.

Publicity Aids . . .

Who made your cooling plant? Write to them . . . ask for literature concerning it . . . then from this, make up some newspaper stories, giving the details of its construction and operation.

Here's a cool copy line . . .

"The Blank Theatre
Is the Coolest
Summer Resort
In (Your City Name)"

Can you string a wire from one wall to the other at the sidewalk end of your lobby?

To this attach cool colored ribbons . . . back of them some place . . . electric fans that will keep the ribbons blowing and the cool air circulating.

NEVER before have we devoted as much space to emphasize the importance of stimulating business during the hot weather. Here are some more suggestions which we came across in a "Hot Weather" folder. It appeared in one of the circuit house-organs last year and will be found just as good now as a year ago. Don't miss up on a single opportunity to keep out of the red this summer. IT CAN BE DONE.

Suggestions . . .

Is THERE a municipal pool?

Here's a gag that went great last summer. A fish run.

Get a half dozen good size trout . . . turn one at a time loose in the pool . . . have kids catch them . . . free tickets to the kids . . . it's sure fire for stories and always gets a crowd.

When YOU throw the cooling plant into operation—Can you have some prominent person start the machinery?

How MANY times do people say . . . "Warm today, isn't it?"

Have some cards printed . . . reading—

Yes . . . It Is Warm—
BUT IT'S COOL
AT THE BLANK THEATRE
Clean . . . Purified . . . Cool Air
Changed Every 5 Minutes!

It will be a good gag . . . people will talk about it—leave the card with the person that makes that silly remark . . . "Gee, isn't it hot today?"

The huge thermometer in the front of your theatre is always a good gag.

Have a lobby card ready . . . 20 per cent.

COOLER

and try to plant it in the middle of the sidewalk . . . at least out of your lobby line or off the curbstone line.

Can you make a tea tie-up with a merchant? Service iced tea . . . and small cakes . . . on your mezzanine . . . the same thing goes for iced coffee.

You Keep Cool . . .

Keep cool yourself. . . . Mentally cool. The weather is no respecter of persons. You can't get away from that fact . . . you can't forget it . . . but you can ignore it. Bodily discomfort is a state of mind . . . the man who is constantly thinking about the heat makes himself hotter.

Don't Get Excited . . .

If business is not all that it should be . . . don't go up in the air. Pull yourself together. Keep cool and collected . . . your brain won't function if you're fretting about many things. The problem of stimulating conditions is enough to occupy a calm, orderly mind. Nobody is expected to do any more than the best he can . . . if you are all astir mentally and physically you can't do that. . . . You are trying to impress coolness on everybody else . . . practice the doctrine yourself.

You have to keep them coming to the theatre. Advising you to take things easy doesn't grant any one license to lay down on the job . . . not putting forth his best efforts. You managers have two problems . . . keeping the temperature down and keeping business up . . . to normal.

This may be far-fetched . . . but if it works—it's good—

Can you dig up some relics of the Northland? Esquimo hunting equipment . . . polar bear skins (no use hoping for a stuffed polar bear), photographs of icebergs, etc., etc. Then make a hook-up with a book store, they display their books of Northland adventure or travel . . . you scatter stills from your picture in the display and feature a card—"It's as cool as Greenland at . . . . Theatre."

Keep Coolness into your ads . . .

Should you have a trailer? . . . like this—

Cool . . . isn't it?
(Fade out)

Cool and comfortable . . . fresh, pure air . . . washed through chilled spraying water . . . is gently circulating about you . . . when you leave—you will be refreshed . . . invigorated . . . please come again—and tell your friends about our cool theatre!

You should . . . if your theatre is cool . . . if you have a modern plant . . . but don't cheat . . . don't use this trailer if every word isn't true.

Can You have a beaver board front on your marquee . . . painted to represent icicles? Get green lights behind them for night illumination.

Have you a radio contest?

When the cooling plant goes into operation . . . see that the news goes over the air. For a legitimate excuse for the broadcast . . . have the radio invite their listeners to inspect the plant the next time they attend the theatre.

After you get going . . . can you arrange for tours of inspection and instruction with the high school authorities? (This goes, of course, for those theatres with modern cooling plants.)

Pool Stunt . . .

Is there a summer resort in your town . . . is there a swimming pool? Get some signs up . . . near and around them . . . on the coolness of your theatre.

Watch Your Advertising . . .

. . . Create the impression that your house possesses all the refreshing features of some famous spa . . . The Alps . . . Canadian Rockies . . . the lakes . . . beach resorts. In hot weather you can't prevent people thinking of them. It's natural. . . . Tell them that they can have the same thing in your theatre.

Catch Lines for the newspapers . . . cool and fresh as a mountain top . . . restful and quiet as a forest . . . invigorating as a dip in a sheltered pool . . . many others you can devise yourself will help you greatly in your summer campaign.

Influence doctors and health officials to issue hints for keeping cool, make them part of your publicity. Watch the reports for predictions of coming hot waves . . . prepare for them. . . . Catch the tired business man, the fatigued shopper with appealing advertising.

Keep your theatre cool always, but don't make it an ice house. Your cooling system depends on keeping all doors shut. . . . Keep the heat out . . . give your system a chance to function efficiently. . . . Avoid drafts and too low temperature . . . having people say the house is too cold is just as bad as having it hot.

JUNE HERE, LIKEWISE BRIDES; AND SO IS GUY HAMMITT'S CAMPAIGN

Although Guy D. Hammitt, of the Vonderschmitt Amusement Enterprises, Bloomington, Ind., promoted and staged his theatre wedding last April, it reminds us that the month of June will produce its inevitable crop of optimistic young couples who will sign on the dotted line and march to some altar. Maybe the crop will not be as large as of yore on account of the dwindled and dwindling bankrolls, but there will be crop just the same, with June, we predict, living up to its reputation for being the occasion for matrimonial events extraordinary.

In view of all this, we direct your gaze to a double truck which Hammitt worked up in connection with his local newspaper. Strikingly attractive, isn't it, with the bride and groom mat over in the upper left hand corner, and the variety of merchants' ads. The ads were worth $150 to the paper and now, Hammitt tells us, the paper's advertising manager is always willing to listen to him when he comes in with some proposition for a tie-up.

You will also note that he used a few gags in connection with his affair, such as having a glass jar of wedding rings in a prominent store window. All one had to do in order to be a guest of the theatre was to advise the box office of the number of rings in the jar, which, as all of you know, is an elementary problem. He also used a "who's the bride and who's the groom gag" in the ads in double truck. Characteristics of the couple appeared in the several ads and guest tickets were awarded the people returning the most descriptive answers. Dozens of merchants kicked in to make up a list of worthwhile gifts for the couple, cost, of course, taken care of through credits on screen, in lobby or otherwise arranged.

We've carried considerable in past issues on the staging of weddings, June and otherwise; in fact, the October 31st, 1931, HERALD contained a complete plan for one of these affairs. So we'll consider Hammitt's reminder as a last minute call to get out and promote one of these popular attractions if local conditions warrant such a move. In certain localities we are fully aware that it's not an easy matter to find an attractive couple who will lend themselves to exploitation of this sort. At the same time, with conditions such as the present, there may be less opposition to starting off life with a little publicity when compensation manifests itself in the form of many worthwhile gifts, which, if properly promoted, shouldn't cost the theatre manager anything outside of his time.

Several other plans for this popular stunt will be published in this department in forthcoming issues and we see no reason why the campaigns need be restricted to June. As you know yourselves, any month is a good month for the ball and chain idea if. . . .

WHAT! NO DESSERT?

To Avoid Giving Your Patrons Indigestion, Keep Your Cocktails, Salads and Desserts Tasty and in Harmony with the Main Course

By VIC GAUNTLETT

Director of Advertising, Fox-West Coast Theatres, Northwest Division

A real dinner would be a poor one indeed if cocktails, salads and deserts were eliminated.

The short subjects are to the main feature what the cocktails, salads and deserts are to the main course of a dinner. 'Tis true that a hungry appetite would not be satisfied with the trimmings and not the main course, yet 'tis true that the main course alone without the trimmings would not leave that satisfied feeling.

People the world over are victims of habit. That's why New Year's resolutions are made and broken.

Be a Good Chef!

The motion picture exhibitor, through his program, has for many years formed the habits of his patron. The patron of any first-run, de luxe operation expects, besides the main feature, to see the latest newsreel, comedy and a reel or two more of entertaining, diversified subjects. He expects it on his program just the same as he expects the salads, cocktails and the desserts with a full course dinner. He has been accustomed to receiving this and unless he gets it, he is going to be a disgruntled, dissatisfied patron.

Very rarely indeed is there a short subject that is so powerful that it predominates in itself over the pulling power of the main feature of the program. However, there are many short subjects that pull a lot of business into the theatre regardless of the feature.

Don't Book Crazy!

If showmen would select their short subjects as carefully as they select their features, the show business would be much better off today. Why, I have seen Laurel and Hardy comedies booked with Will Rogers features, and I have seen Scenics booked with heavy drama. Crazy bookings, absolutely idiotic, and the showman who books his shorts in this manner certainly should be ashamed to even be in the business.

The short subject affords showmen an opportunity of giving a diversified, all-around program to the public. How silly it would be if the chef in a big, de luxe restaurant or hotel was as careless in the selection of the proper salads, cocktails and desserts to surround the main course of his dinner. Shorts are not valuable merely as time-users in the program, but should be as appetizing and tasty as the trimmings for the main course of a dinner.

They Are Not Step-Children!

The carelessness in buying short subjects is responsible for the quality of short subjects. If they were looked at and selected upon their merits and not bought for their cheapness, the short subject market would be higher in quality and less in quantity.

In closing, I want to state briefly my opinion on the advertising of short subjects. If a newsreel has a big outstanding subject in it that is of national importance from the quantity of space given the subject before it hits the screen by the newspapers, step out on it. Run extra space under extra added attractions; but just an ordinary newsreel deserves no more than just mentioning in your ad.

Comedies, of course, are advertised according to the importance of the pulling power of the comedians themselves.

Short subjects that have a direct appeal to sports, of which there are many, should be plugged with publicity, photos and special ads in the sport section of the paper and not in the dramatic. In other words, select the sections of the paper that are read by people who are interested in this special subject, and not in just merely drama pages, and you will get greater returns at the box office for the money expended.

IT REALLY HAPPENS!

By ROY HUFFORD

YOU'LL HAVE TO SELL THE MIRACLE MAN USE PAPER—GET CO-OP PAGE—RADIO TIEUP—ETC.—ETC.
I'LL HAVE TO BE A MIRACLE MAN TO DO THAT IN MY BUDGET.
Roy J. Hufford.

Aside from the truthful humor of Roy's latest cartoon, we are wondering whether there is any significance to that "sweet" expression on the district's manager's face. Of course, we have some suspicions of our own but we won't air them here.

DICK MOSS WAGED A GOOD CAMPAIGN ON NEW CHEVALIER FILM

The campaign made on "One Hour With You" by Dick Moss, while manager of the Paramount Theatre, Los Angeles, yielded such gratifying results that we are sure it will be of much interest to other members of this organization. A brief description follows:

Every important music window in downtown Los Angeles was tied in for a week's display of musical numbers and major radio stations were contacted to have the hit songs played by orchestras and sung by performers. One station made several announcements daily.

Chevalier was contacted to send telegrams to the manager of the theatre and 10,000 copies were distributed by boys in office buildings. Several were crumpled and dropped along a principal street for those who have a habit of picking up articles.

Other effort included four choice windows in a prominent drug store chain; use of Chevalier stills and a credit card in well known department store; placing of stills and cards in large haberdashery store; a tie-up with a drug store chain for the placing of 500 posters in windows; all menus of a restaurant chain carried notice of special "One Hour With You Sundae," A Jeanette MacDonald "Sweetheart Sundae," etc.; distribution of 20,000 small cards on fountains of restaurant chain, and window tie-up.

A billboard stunt that attracted a lot of attention consisted of posting a 23-sheet upside down, which caused many people to 'phone the theatre management about the error. A dynamic loud speaker placed atop a building at one of the busiest sections in the city, through which Chevalier's latest records were played, also came in for a good share of comment. Two giant enlargements of Chevalier were placed in the outer lobby of the theatre. A shirt shop distributed 3,000 attractive roto heralds.

Dick at this time is in charge of the RKO Orpheum Theatre, Los Angeles, where he went after the Paramount closed down for the summer. He has been a conscientious contributor to this department and we hope he will keep up the good work.

Huwig Busy Showman

In addition to acting as relief manager for Don Ross, manager of Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., while Ross was on vacation, Jack Huwig, well known Round Tabler, was appointed Company Manager for the local engagement of "Grand Hotel," when that picture played the State Theatre, Harrisburg, the latter part of May.

VAUDEVILLE THEATRES!

Managers booking their acts direct should avail themselves of the service offered by the Stage Attractions Department of Motion Picture Herald.

This department, besides carrying reviews of different types of acts playing in and around New York City, can furnish you with full information about any act you are interested in booking. Such as a description of the act, type of material and agent through whom you can book direct.

It would also be a good idea if you filed act reviews as a ready reference guide which will eventually give you, at your finger tips, a complete file of all acts together with everything you ought to know about them.

Turn to the Stage Attractions Section and keep posted on what is going on in the world of "flesh."

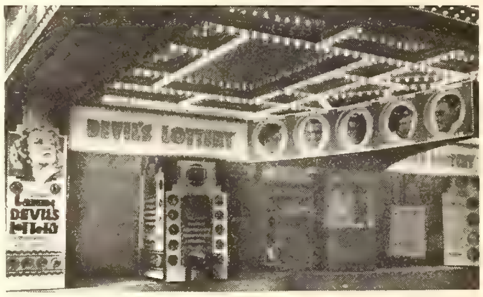
HART KNOWS HOW TO STIR UP TRADE FOR ACADEMY BOX OFFICE

Nothing more serious than just every day hard work has kept Lou S. Hart's name from appearing regularly in this department the past few weeks. Most of you will recall that Lou is publicity director for the Academy of Music, that famous institution down on what is about the busiest corner of East Fourteenth Street, New York City. The folk in that neighborhood are somewhat inclined to take their window shopping seriously, Lou tells us, and it therefore keeps him busy thinking up ideas to get them inside the doors.

For instance there was the time he tied-up with Hearn's department store, an institution as firmly imbedded in neighborhood history as the Academy. The occasion was the appearance of an F. & M. act called "Nursery Rhymes," starring Tom Patricola. The store put on a special sale in the children's department in conjunction with a Saturday morning show arranged for the kiddies at the store, which also featured a window display two days in advance of the stunt. Three acts from the show unit were taken over to the store for the edification of the youngsters. Mention was made in store ads in two New York newspapers.

A three day appearance of Esther Ralston was also good for a tie-up with a well known Broadway jewelry firm, which ran a two column ad in a leading tab paper featuring photo of Miss Ralston and stating that the star would personally autograph photos of herself while at the Academy. It was advertised that her appearance was sponsored by the manufacturers of a watch. This stunt aroused so much interest among neighboring department stores that several have been trying to arrange similar deals.



On "Devil's Lottery" Hart arranged for a novel stunt which not only created a whole lot of attention along the street but produced unlooked-for results at the box office. The gag was in the form of a wheel such as used at carnivals, etc., sometimes called "the wheel of fate." One of the ushers, dressed in full dress suit, top hat and cane, attended it. Every half hour he would start his bark and in less time than it's taking to write these words the usual 14th Street window shoppers would be craning their necks to see what it was all about. Well, you know the rest. After talking about the picture, the barker would hand out tickets and someone would be admitted to the theatre free of charge. Invariably the guest would be accompanied by one or more who would pay their admissions at the box office.

The accompanying photo shows the front executed by Hart for the picture mentioned above, which, due to the lighting effects built around heads of stars, was the cause of considerable comment. We're obliged to Lou for keeping in touch with us.

SHOWMAN MADDEN OF NORFOLK SENDS US A PACK OF TEAR-SHEETS

A bundle of newspaper tear-sheets smeared with red-stamped "Free Space," is the mute but effective way that J. J. Madden, manager of the Granby Theatre, Norfolk, Va., has of letting us know that he is still pounding away at showbusiness and, apparently, doing just as well as ever in the art of extracting his bit from the newspaper boys.

Jayjay never does much explaining when he communicates with Club headquarters, so we'll have to do our usual Sherlock Holmes act in explanation of a full page of free space and other nuumerous plugs on "Grand Hotel." First we'll try to alibi the full page and our clue is another large, four-column ad on "Man Wanted," which carried a box effect that readers could earn 6 free admissions to the Granby by securing a new subscription to the newspaper. So we gather that for a handful or two of passes this veteran showman made a very profitable deal with the paper. In fact, we'll go so far as to state that it was profitable, for Madden deals are always that way.

We also note that he had a tie-up with the classified department of the same newspaper, whereby a hunt was conducted for names inserted between the ads. The honors were guest tickets to the current attraction at the Granby. But not for "Grand Hotel." Neither the classified gag nor the subscription passes, it was announced in that full page of free space, would be honored on that occasion.

How's that for a deal, you Round Tablers? Here's a man who not only can promote free space in large quantities but dictates his terms on passes in bold type. That's making them like it, we'll say.

We're glad to have heard from Showman Madden again, for it's been some little time since word of his activities has been passed along. However, the above is plenty evidence to us that he still has his health and knack of selling his wares to the public for little next to nothing in the way of cost to theatre. If we've got the wrong slant on how he engineered all that free publicity, maybe he'll send along further information.

SUMMER STYLE SHOWS AND BATHING BEAUTIES!

Early reports indicate that this form of activity is meeting with unusually large box-office response wherever tried. Inasmuch as we should avail ourselves of every opportunity to stimulate business via the most practical means at our command, we are urging the members and readers of our pages to give the Summer Style Show idea serious consideration before discarding the idea as impractical.

You can line up a score or more of merchants in this plan besides enlisting the full co-operation and support of your local papers. Another angle is to work it in conjunction with the local Chamber of Commerce, too.

By all means work out your arrangements so that the burden of cost is carried by the merchants even to the furnishing of the models for the summer fashions and bathing attire. They can be secured from the sales force of the various stores or by means of a contest choosing them from among the young girls of the community.

Build up your Summer Style Show to large proportions. Have it run for not less than three days. Stage it with a professional eye. Surround it with all the importance and dignity it deserves according to the class of theatre you are operating and the patronage you draw from.

This idea is chock full of profits for the smart showman. And the beauty of it is, that it can be successfully put across in almost every type of theatre.

HERE'S ONE MADE-TO-ORDER!

We've just heard about an excellent stunt engineered by Julius Lamm, manager of the Variety Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, and since it is more or less of a seasonable proposition we're passing it along pronto.

The photo on this page shows how the lobby was used for announcement of the free vacation trips Lamm promoted. Camping paraphernalia, pictures of the health farm and other attractive copy were used to stir up interest among the youngsters, who ranged in age from seven to fifteen years. All the kiddies had to do in order to participate in the event was to fill out a card provided for name and address. These were handled at the box office in the usual fashion. The fortunate youngsters were named at the theatre during a Saturday matinee.

Lamm not only promoted four of the above trips, each worth $20 per week, for his house but arranged four more for the Uptown Theatre on the other side of the town. He also secured free of charge a number of articles from local merchants which were useful for the winners to take on their trips. The entire stunt was put over without one cent of cost to the theatre, with exception of lobby space given vacation farm and merchants for a display.

This one is ready for handling right now, fellow Round Tablers, if you are in a position to contact those in charge of some boys or girls summer camp. In the above case the proprietors were glad to provide free accommodation for eight youngsters in exchange for advertising received.

ATTRACTIVE CO-OP. IN TWO COLORS WAS PROMOTED BY BERMAN

Just to prove that attractive cooperative ads are still being promoted by aggressive Round Tablers we are reproducing a full page recently engineered by Mortimer E. Berman and George F. Mahoney, respectively house manager and assistant manager of the Rialto Theatre, a Publix house in Joliet, Ill.

Now one of the striking points about this ad, in addition to the pleasing layout of ads, centre plug for theatre and the several head cuts of Chevalier, lies in the fact that the head and border were run off in bright red ink. Manager Herman thinks this may be the first time that a two color co-op of this kind was ever run in his section of the country, and until we hear differently his claim will hold at Club headquarters.

The Strand's Birthday

Mailing list and Broadway windows proved effective advertising mediums to let the public know that the Strand Theatre, veteran de luxe picture house in New York City, was featuring "Month of Hits" as a celebration of another birthday. 9,000 letter-size folders calling attention to the occasion and its attractions were sent out on the theatre's mailing list and 3,000 window stickers were distributed all around the city. Meyer Beck, assistant to Lou Goldberg, had charge of the job.

IF YOUR NAME ISN'T HERE—WHY?

HAZEL VAN ALLEN was recently promoted from the cashier's booth of the Strand Theatre, Dolgeville, N. Y., to the post of assistant manager under Evans B. Davis, and we're mighty glad to record that fact and that she is another new lady-member of this organization. Miss Davis expressed interest in theatre management last Fall and since then has been well coached in that end by Manager Davis. She has proven herself most capable in all routine work and we predict that some day she'll be operating her own house. In the meantime, with two representatives in Dolgeville, the Club should not lack for news from that point. Kindly convey out best regards to the chief, Miss Van Allen, and ask him to keep in touch with headquarters.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

JOHN C. SHERIDAN is located over in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn, described by Mr. McGinnis during the Seabury investigation as one of the "City's Garden Spots." Over on Manhattan Avenue John stands at the helm of the RKO Greenpoint, a 1,800-seat house devoted to straight pictures, and since he's located right in the heart of the theatre shopping district, we assume it's a man's size job to garner a share of the trade. Just as soon as you can spare the time, Sheridan, tell the rest of the gang what you are doing to bring them past the good old box office. We'll send the word along.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

DONALD F. ELLIOTT has the job of assisting Marcus A. Meyers with the management of the Liberty Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., and according to Meyers Donald is putting in his time to excellent results. Prior to taking his present post he held the job of chief usher at Shea's Bellevue, Niagara Falls, and there's where he first learned his way 'round a theatre. He's only 19 years old at this writing and already has a good start up the ladder. With Meyers behind him it probably will not be long before he'll become a full fledged Round Tabler, framed certificate and all. We'll be keeping an eye on you, Elliott, so keep on digging in. Pass along our best regards to your chief and ask him to drop us a line whenever he can find time.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

JAMES L. RUTLEDGE is located out in Phoenix, Ariz., where he manages the Ramona Theatre, and he's another new Round Tabler all ready to be introduced to his fellow Club members. Okay, James, meet the boys, and then don't forget that you're now a member of the go-gettingest bunch of showmen in the country and that you will be called upon to do your share toward keeping this department full of interesting items on show-selling and theatre management. What was that last stunt you used to good results at the box office? Send along an account of it so we can shoot the information along the line.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

RUSSEL BEACH has the job of helping James L. Weed manage the RKO Keith's Theatre out in Dayton, and we wish to thank Weed for giving a prompt okay to his assistant's application for membership in this organization. He and his boss operate a large house and a job of that size undoubtedly keeps both of them on the jump. However, we hope that at least one of our representatives at Keith's will take a little time off now and then to let their fellow showmen know what's going on. Let us also hope that we'll soon be sending Beach a regulation certificate.

AL BECKERICH is an old showman-friend come to life again, and this time as manager of the RKO Keith's Palace Theatre, Akron, Ohio. His experience in the show game dates back to '18, when in charge of the Olympic, Buffalo. He also opened up Loew's Theatre in the same city in '21 and held that job until the Fall of '27. Then he meandered down Brooklyn way and took the helm of the Walker Theatre, named for no less a personage than Mrs. Walker's little boy Jimmie; then upstate again to Lockport and Niagara Falls, back again to Brooklyn, and then on to Cleveland and points West. He's been in Akron for the past 18 months and we're mighty glad to have him with us in this Club. Come through, Al, and pass along a few of your pet show-tricks.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

DONALD GUTTMAN is the manager of the Radio Theatre out in St. Paul, Minn., and he's another New Club member in line for introduction to this ever-increasing army of showmen. Glad to add your name to the roster, Donald, and now let's see what you can do to help your fellow showman over the tough spots this season. If you've tried out any productive gags the past few weeks or so, jot them down and shoot them in to headquarters. We'll see that the rest of the gang are tipped off.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

CLARENCE W. VALENTINE assists Al Beckerich with the management of the RKO Palace Theatre, Akron, Ohio, and we'll have to give a vote of thanks to Al for his promptness in giving his okay to Clarence's application for membership in this organization. With two able representatives of the Round Table at the Palace to tell us what the management of that house is doing to sell shows, this department should not lack for news from Akron. Keep on putting the shoulder to the wheel, Valentine, and let us hope that your regular membership certificate will soon be on its way.

MILT W. SMITH is another new recruit in the ranks of this organization and he's the skipper of the Poplar Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. We're going to forecast right now that Milt will become a valuable member of the Round Table and that his past experience in show business will be the means of helping out many a fellow manager. He's a veteran in the game, having put in a lot of time as publicity, exploitation and advance man, and knows about all the slants there are to know in the art of selling entertainment. We extend a cordial welcome to Smith and hope that he'll soon come through with some show-dope that we can pass along the line.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

FRED M. ELKINS sends us word that after a three months' furlough he's back at the helm of the Carolina Theatre in Lexington, N. C., succeeding E. C. Qualls, who has returned to his home in Burlington, N. C. He also enclosed an application for membership in this showman's organization and a request for a Club Pin, making him, at this writing, a full fledged Round Tabler. We're glad to include Elkins' name on the roster and hope he contributes his share of business-building ideas to this department.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

PAUL H. GARNS manages the Windsor Theatre in the Bronx section of New York City and he's another Club member in line for introduction to his many fellow showmen. The managers up in his part of the big town are a hard working lot of fellows and unless we're very much mistaken Paul will soon be sending along some interesting dope for this department. Just what are you doing to bring them in during the warm weather, Paul? Let Club headquarters know and we'll pass the word along.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

ROCKWOOD D. DAILEY is the manager of the Maine Theatre, Portland, Maine, a first choice, second run Publix house. Bailey was recently promoted to this post and one of the first things he did after getting on an even keel was to send in his application for membership in this outfit. Congratulations on the new job, R. B., and here's our sincere wish for continued success. Now that you're one of us, get the Club spirit and shoot along any of your selling ideas that will help out some brother member. We'll be awaiting your next communication.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

JOHN R. ELLIOTT manages the RKO Palace Theatre out in Youngstown, Ohio, a 2,400-seat house operated on a picture and vaudeville policy. He's another RKO man in line for introduction to this ever-growing army of theatre men and we're mighty glad of the opportunity to add his name to the list. Vaude has been cut during the summer at John's house and maybe he'll get a chance to get a bit of time now and then to let the rest of the boys know what's going on in show business around his neighborhood. We'll be looking forward to his next communication.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

JAMES L. WEED hails from Dayton, Ohio, where he has charge of Keith's Theatre, and he's still another RKO man to join the ranks of this Club. Weed has a big house to look after out in his town and we know that he will have many valuable suggestions to contribute to this department. Shake a few of those good stunts loose from your sleeve, Jim, and shoot them in to headquarters for re-broadcasting. We're mighty glad to list you as a new member and hope you'll do your best to carry on the good work.

Pacific Northwest Is Now a Separate Unit of West Coast

The Pacific Northwest territory has been established as a separate and individual unit of Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., with Frank Newman as general manager and personal representative of Skouras Brothers. Headquarters are in Seattle. This move divorces the territory from the California management prevailing for the past several years.

Newman will supervise the operation of all Fox West Coast houses in Washington, Oregon and Montana, while Robert Frost retains his post as Pacific Northwest division manager. J. J. Parker will continue to head Oregon operation and Will Steege will operate the Montana district.

Hagen and Eric Hakin Form English Distributing Unit

Julius Hagen of the Twickenham studio in England and Eric Hakin, an independent producer-exhibitor, are forming a new independent distribution company to handle Mr. Hagen's product and outstanding continental features sponsored by Mr. Hakin.

Mr. Hagen has signed Ivor Novello for three pictures, the first of which, "The Lodger" was known as a successful silent. The first of the continental importations is being pre-released at a London theatre.

Named Center Color Director

Edward Trumbull, American mural painter of note, has been appointed color director for the Rockefeller Center art program. The extensive scale, character and type of ornamentation in the New York center, was pointed out as necessitating the creation of the position.

Geller Buys Into Exchange

Lou Geller, president of Peerless Pictures, independent, has purchased the interest in Irving Pictures Exchange, New York, held by Jack Weinberg. The move is seen as the nucleus of a national independent exchange system planned by Mr. Geller.

New Jewish Film by Roland

George Roland, producer, is preparing a new Jewish talking film, "A Daughter of Her People," which will play a New York circuit. "Yiskor" is playing a Brooklyn circuit, and "Joseph in the Land of Egypt" will shortly open at a Broadway house.

MGM Plans Star Comedy

MGM is preparing a comedy story in which it plans to star numerous "name" comedians from the MGM and other studios. Edgar Allen Woolf and Ralph Spence are preparing the script.

Rebuilding Damaged House

The Egyptian theatre in San Francisco, damaged recently by fire with a loss of almost $30,000, is being rebuilt and will be reopened shortly. The $10,000 organ was completely destroyed.

Wobber Heads Civic Group

Herman Wobber, of Paramount-Publix, has been nominated for reelection as director of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, with no opposition.

JENKINS' COLYUM

Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

DEAR HERALD:

There, it's just as we have always told you. Every time we come into Iowa it starts raining and never lets up until we leave. This state is soaked from head to foot, and if old Noah was here he'd be the busiest carpenter in the state. The state slogan is "Iowa Has Stepped Out of the Mud." She had to make a mighty long stride to do it, but she's dunner. She has cement and gravel roads running in every direction, and this, together with her most excellent people, makes her a wonderful state. But she ought to be, for there is nothing that separates her from Nebraska except the Missouri river.

Iowa is the home of "The Contented Cows," and you ought to see these cows. They wallow around in the alfalfa clear up to their knees and are fuller'n ticks all the time, and there isn't a cow in the state that has neuritis or gives a durn what Congress does, they are so contented that way.

John Waller of the Lyric theatre at Osceola says at this season he'd sooner be a cow than an exhibitor, but John always did like alfalfa.

Somehow Iowa has a habit of picking out some mighty swell chaps to run her theatres. That's why Nebraska is losing so many good men. For instance, there's D. N. Fuller of the Iowa theatre at Atlantic, a mighty swell boy, who is working himself into a shadow trying to bring business back to normal.

L. A. Kuhl of the American theatre at Corning says he has tried everything but a shotgun to get 'em in, and when he does get 'em in the bad pictures run 'em out before he can lock the doors. Staak & Pierce of the Rivola at Oskaloosa take turns about going to the drug store to buy aspirin for their headaches. Staak goes in the morning and Pierce in the afternoon. They both agree that if the producers were troubled with the same ailment they'd either make more decent pictures or go out of business. W. I. Neagle of the Princess theatre at Oskaloosa is one of the original Four Horsemen in this business. He has operated his theatre continuously in the same building for twenty-two years, and we think that is the record for Iowa, and that only lacks one year of being up to our record in Nebraska. Some time ago a chain store stuck up some advertising in the city square. The next morning when the city dads woke up they saw Mr. Neagle's one-sheet boards all over the lawn. This, of course, started something, but it ended advertising by the chain store on city property. We like a fighter, and Mr. Neagle suits us to a T.

J. A. Meredith of the Garden theatre at Sigourney lived for some time at Twin Falls, Idaho, and you can't live very long at Twin Falls without being a pretty swell chap. That holds good for Salmon, Idaho, too, although at Salmon there is one exception, but he could redeem himself by writing more often to the HERALD. (We are not mentioning any names.)

The Garden theatre was playing "When a Feller Needs a Friend," with Chic Sale and Jackie Cooper, and we were sorry we couldn't stop to see it, for Chic always makes us glad that the older one gets, the bigger his heart is, and, in most cases, the more sense he has.

R. E. Pratt of the State theatre at Washington is a grandfather. You wouldn't guess it to look at him, but he says he is. He introduced us to Mrs. Pratt, and we'll bet the last nickel we have on earth that there isn't a younger looking grandmother west of the Mississippi river than she.

This is Sunday, and we should have gone to church today. But last night Mr. Dixon of the Temple theatre told us he would drive around to the hotel and pick us up this morning and we'd go out and play a round of golf, and when he said that we didn't know whether there was a church within five hundred miles of here, that shows just how foolish some people are. Did he trim us? Boy, he made us look like old lady Maloney playing right-handed golf with left-handed clubs. After the game he felt so sorry for us that he took us up to his house for dinner, and if we should describe that dinner that Mrs. Dixon had prepared for us, our wife would consider it grounds for a divorce, and we couldn't blame her. You have no doubt noticed a lot of misspelled words in this letter; well, that's because we are so full of that dinner that we leave out the letter "r" every time we spell catfish, and Ernie doesn't notice it.

Advocates Wide Censorship

General censorship of motion pictures was advocated in a resolution adopted last week at the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Atlantic City.

Jackie Returns to Coast

Jackie Cooper, MGM's star juvenile, has cancelled the remainder of his booking in Loew vaudeville to return to the Coast, where he will appear in "O'Shaughnessy's Boy."

Fay Drops Acts for Summer

Fay's theatre in Providence will replace a policy of vaudeville and films with one of two films, eliminating vaudeville for the summer months.

BOOK REVIEWS

"NEWSREEL MAN", by Charles Peden. Published by Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York. With photographic illustrations.

Mr. Peden's description of the newsreel sound cameraman's labors and adventures in getting his shots for the screen comprises a romantic, frequently dramatic and always interesting account of the business of gathering news by camera.

Heightening the interest to the reader of "Newsreel Man," of course, is its background of factual reality and its appeal to the reader already acquainted with the events, localities and persons which figure in Mr. Peden's narrative. For his is not a work of fiction, but a colorful record of the news highlights of the past six years, to which the reading and theatre-attending public (no discrimination intended) is already initiated through the mediums of the news press and newsreel. Mr. Peden carries his readers behind the scenes of the occasional spectacular dramas which, for their brief lifetime, hold the interest and attention of the public.

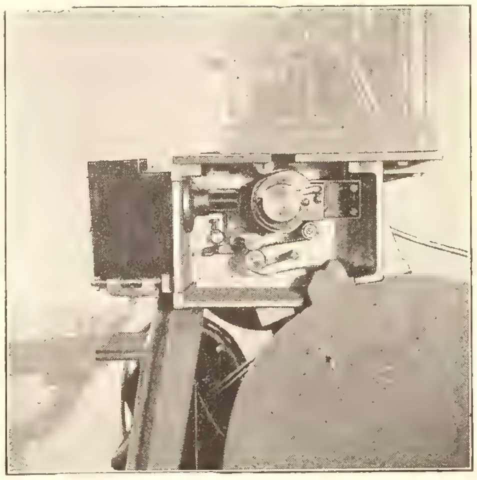
The result is that "Newsreel Man," as reading matter, surpasses in interest and entertainment value most of the pictorial clips of the same events that have gone into the making of newsreels. This is partially so due to the fact that Mr. Peden, in editing his material, has carefully avoided giving space to the doughty cameraman's adventures in filming May Day exercises at eastern girls' schools, the breaking of a bottle of ginger ale against the prow of a coastwise mail boat, polar bears being wetted down at the Bronx zoo on hot August afternoons, and such like. The author concerns himself only with the most eventful and spectacular happenings of his career as a newsreel man and does it so skillfully and completely that the casual reader might never suspect a news cameraman ever had a routine or "drudge" assignment, or gave his attention to anything but the most dangerous and imposing of world events.

But the author's selection of exclusively spectacular material does not account entirely for the superior interest of his book as compared with the newsreels as a whole. There is drama in the newsreel man's work that is not a part of his picture and, although it may, and frequently does, surpass the drama of his subject, the casual newsreel audience is seldom aware of it. As the author says: "Behind every strange or exciting newsreel clip there is a man who filmed it." He proves that that man's story is frequently better than the story told by his camera. Outwitting cautious foreign Officialdom to obtain pictures of persons and events which were intended to have been shielded from the inquisitive camera, never becomes a part of the screen story, although more often than not it is the better story.

"Newsreel Man" is a collection of selected anecdotes of the gathering of film news. It should please every newsreel fan, whether he be of the industry or the audience. Typical chapter headings covering the span of the author's camera service from his first assignment, which was to make a subject of some goats eating shirts on Staten Island, to the Lindbergh baby kidnapping, are: "Shooting the Foreign Legion," "Hunting Wales Off Kamchatka," "The Fire Walkers of Fiji," "The Land of the Living Buddhas," "The King's Armada," "The Pope Takes a Walk," and "Hopewell Two One" (the latter, the news service phone nearest in proximity to the Lindbergh estate at Hopewell, N. J.).

Mr. Peden, who is a member of the Fox Movietone newsreel staff, has generously illustrated his volume with photographs from many newsreels. They contribute much to the general interest of the volume. In addition, there is a chapter of pen portraits of internationally famous personalities as they are regarded by the news cameraman, many of which are highly diverting.

The author lists the following material, in order of preference as indicated by theatre managers' reports, as what the public wants in newsreel subjects: Spectacular accidents; catastrophes such as fires and earthquakes; personality shots; racing of all kinds (horses, especially in steeplechases, he says, are more interesting than motor cars, because the danger of spills is greater); battleships; children (babies preferred); sex—for example, bathing-beauty contests, fashion shows, night club shows, and the like; events with a morbid interest, such as murderers' confessions; football, aviation and skiing; animals, particularly polar bears and monkeys.—S. A. K.



SYNCROFILM
HAS WHAT IT TAKES TO MAKE YOU MONEY

● To make you money, Syncrofilm gives the best sound show in your neighborhood—unless your strongest competitor has Syncrofilm, too! People pay their money to hear clear speech and tuneful music. Syncrofilm gives them what they pay for. No outlaw noises are heard; no mumbling; no squeaking.

● When people get that kind of sound show as a regular thing, they come to your theatre as a regular thing. Remember, you are not on Broadway, with the house full of transients each night. You depend on bringing the same folks back time after time. You need Syncrofilm to get and hold repeat business.

● Only Syncrofilm provides the quadruple brightness that gives this perfect reproduction. This exclusive Syncrofilm feature has placed Syncrofilm third in the American market and first in many foreign markets in just four years. "It had to be good to get where it is."

● Your money will be refunded if you are not satisfied with Syncrofilm. So you take no chances. Here's your opportunity to make money without risking a dime. Try it.

"A DAGGER IN THE DARK," by Walter F. Eberhardt. Published by William Morrow & Company, Inc., New York. Fiction.

Walter F. Eberhardt, of the public relations department of Western Electric and dispensing press information for Electrical Research Products, Inc., has written a work of fiction, out June 15, which purports to show the inner workings of gangster rings in New York City.

The writer obviously had before him throughout the writing of the novel the cardinal principle of presenting action from first to last as the prerequisite of melodrama. There is scarcely a line of bald description in the 311 pages, and the development of plot takes care of delineation of characters. The result is a fast-moving story, one which calls for continuous reading.

Bernard Clague, private detective, is commissioned to trace a missing string of pearls, and runs a gauntlet of flying daggers, murders, police interference and suspicion, an affair with the redhaired decoy of the gang, and finally the breaking up of the blackmail cabal.

Mr. Eberhardt's novel, his first, presents the ingredients for a lively motion picture of the gangster-melodrama type.—E. A. R.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 132.—(A) Is it essential to best results that a condenser lens have a well polished, true, clean surface? (B) What will happen if the lens be permitted to become fogged with fine dust? (C) What will happen if the condenser lens be not perfectly true as to its curved surface? (D) How may the projectionist demonstrate the fact that each pin-point of the converging lens projects a pencil of light forward to its exact appointed location in the "spot"?

Answer to Question No. 125

Bluebook School Question No. 125 was: "(A) Describe a simple bell or buzzer circuit. (B) What kind of battery is best for use on theatre bell or buzzer circuits? (C) What kind of wires should be used on theatre bell or buzzer circuits? (D) What precautions would you take if a bell or buzzer circuit must pass through a damp or wet place? (E) How should double wires (two wires in one insulation) be attached to their support?

Mother of the Blue Eared Prophet, what a slue of answers this one brought! They were not counted. Even their reading was perforce very hasty. (Sometimes I wish I had not started this Bluebook School! Just examining the answers has developed into one rather awful job.)

The correct answers were so many that we just cannot possibly print all the names. Suffice it to say that careful examination shows every one of those who have been sending acceptable replies regularly made good, plus more than 600 others.

I will distribute "honors" by selecting the reply of different ones to the various sections of the question. First we will listen to Lester Borst, who answers Section A as follows:

"A simple bell or buzzer circuit consists of a power source (usually a battery), a single pole switch (usually of the push-button sort), and a signal device known as a buzzer or bell. The switch is in one leg of the circuit and in series with the power source and signal device. In all but the more complex closed circuit type of signal circuit, a simple bell or buzzer circuit consists of buzzer, or bell, and a switch connected in series with the power sources."

Next we will hear from Brothers S. Evans and C. Rau on Section B. They say:

"A battery of dry cells is most suitable for use on theatre bell or buzzer circuits, for the reasons that they are cheap, effective, convenient to handle and require no care or attention until exhausted, when a new battery must be installed."

As to section C, G. E. Doe says, "No. 18 cotton-covered bell wire is the correct thing for bell wiring, since the insulation is effective under ordinary conditions, for the low voltage employed; also, it is inconspicuous when it must be carried across an open space of wall; also, such wire is cheap and easy to handle when running the circuit; also, the insulation may be had in different colors, which makes for convenience when it is necessary, as it often is in such jobs, to know exactly what wire connects to some distant binding post after the job is installed. Some advocate an increase of wire size to No. 16, where the circuit is long, but I have seen a circuit 186 feet in length apparently operate perfectly with No. 18 wires."

AN ODOR OF PROFITS

A new manager of a theatre that catered overwhelmingly to a foreign element in a small western city decided to "doll up" the house after enduring for some time the assorted odors of garlic and what-not, and other general conditions that were most displeasing to the olfactory nerves. The house was completely renovated, from "street to sheet," and made very attractive. But the regular patronage somehow failed to appreciate the new manager's efforts on their behalf. Where formerly there had been almost a full house in the afternoon and evening, there were hundreds of empty seats.

The manager couldn't understand. Theatres he had operated were always spick and span, by public demand. One day he asked one of the remaining patrons. The quick reply was that the house was too ritzy. "We don't feel at home."

"Very well," the manager replied, "we strive to please." Immediately he smeared dirt on the new paint, scattered newspapers in the lobby. If you stroll in any afternoon now you will find patrons enjoying a snack and the odors of yore will greet you. And the house is filled afternoons and evenings as heretofore, indicating that the end justifies the means.

As to Section D, John Tomlinson says, "If it be necessary to run a bell or buzzer circuit through a damp or wet place, rubber-covered wires of same size as rest of circuit (usually No. 18) should be used for that section. It is likely there would be no trouble with cotton-covered wires, since the voltage is very low, but rubber-covered wires are safer and therefore better. Whatever the insulation used, it will be best to carry the wires through the wet place on porcelain insulators."

Section E is answered by Nic Granby as follows: "When two wires inclosed in a single insulation, unprotected by BX or iron tubing, is used, they should never be held by metal staples, rubber-covered or otherwise. Wooden cleats or wooden tubing or molding for such work is the correct thing. Metal staples are apt to cut through the light wire insulation and short-circuit the circuit. This may be done also by rubber-covered staples, if the workman be careless and hit some one of the staples a bit too emphatically."

A Bluebook School student writes, "Dear Mr. Richardson: I read my answer to a recent question with some surprise. I keep a carbon copy of all my answers so that I may compare them with the published answer. In this case I found that while it is true what was printed was just what I said in effect, at least, still it was not my answer. I therefore am wondering if some one else's reply was not printed as my own by mistake."

No error was made. As a matter of fact I very seldom print a reply just as written. Writing is a profession, and one at which I am, after the quarter of a century of practice, none too proficient myself. How then can the amateur hope to write acceptably for publication, regardless of how correct his statements may be as to subject matter. They may be entirely correct as to the idea expressed, but they might also look like the devil if printed as worded. Except in rather rare cases, I therefore rewrite the answers, but without intentionally altering the meaning of the original answer in any degree, though under some circumstances I may add an item that all correspondents having otherwise correct answers have omitted. If I printed some very excellent answers just as worded, I think you would all get a good laugh once in a while, but without considerable digging I doubt that you would get much else.

FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Conchita Montenegro
Brooklyn Fox

This vivacious picture star does little in her performance to warrant the great billing given her. For her first appearance, a "depot" set is used and the dancing ensemble, in song and dance, build up her entrance. Miss Montenegro enters to a polite reception and struts around the stage, singing some song about her picture work, which means little to the audience because they cannot understand her. For her second appearance, she enacts a bit from the picture, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," in which she does a simple dance. To a person not having seen the picture, the bit means nothing, and from the applause, it meant nothing to those that had.—E. D.

Duci de Karekjarto
Dallas Palace

Duci de Karekjarto, billed as a "Romantic Virtuoso of the Strings," is a most capable artist in wielding the bow, showing nimble dexterity in quite a repertoire of fiddling gymnastics, opening with a Hungarian classic and encoring with "Good Night Sweetheart." A most capable and attractive young lady—a vision in shimmering blue—accompanied him on the piano, greatly enhancing the act with her musical ability as well as her beauty. The act was well applauded and should be well received anywhere.

Gwynne & Co. (4)
New York Academy

Jack Gwynne is a magician who rates with the best. Opening by producing the w.k. rabbit and chicken from a trick table, Gwynne then produces a pretty girl from an "empty" chest. Following this, a fish bowl trick, cleverly done, drew a fine hand from the audience, after which Gwynne closed the act with a sleight-of-hand trick with a page from a magazine, which mystified an enthusiastic audience.—H. P.

Hubert Dyer
New Orleans State

Dyer is an eccentric comic who gets tangled up in everything to laughable results. Assisted by an unbilled man who works on a trapeze, Dyer piles chairs on a table, gets on the chairs to do what the audience thinks will be a trapeze act and then tumbles everything, himself included, to the floor. While his partner works on the rings, he walks back and forth across his way narrowly missing being knocked into the orchestra pit.

Jane and Katherine Lee
New York Palace

The Lee kids, child stars of the screen, have grown up and present a class A act. They offer a harmony bit of the negro spiritual "Heb'n," with guitars, and then do "Ooh that Kiss" with success. But the comedy antics of Jane sell the act. Using Katherine as her foil, Jane clowns all over the stage with plenty of laughs.—H. P.

Friar's Frolic Features the Roxy Theatre's Stage Show

The Friar's Frolic, including numerous well known vaudeville performers, occupied the stage of the Roxy theatre in New York during the week of June 10. The group were in addition to the regular Roxy chorus and the symphony orchestra directed by Hugo Riesenfeld.

Various players of star caliber have appeared for one day, while the Frolic group has played at all performances. The stars include George Jessel, Bert Lahr, Harry Richman, Willie and Eugene Howard, Bert Wheeler and others.

Introduces "Name" Acts

The Ambassador theatre in St. Louis has begun to feature "name" acts on the stage as a means of combatting expected warm weather falling off in receipts. Bing Crosby is currently appearing, to be later followed by Guy Lombardo and his band.

Stanley Books Calloway

Cab Calloway and his dance orchestra has been booked for the Warner Stanley theatre in Jersey City during the week of June 24.

MUSIC DIRECTOR PLUS VERSATILITY: CHAS. PAUL

This young man has been music director at Loew's Valencia Theatre, Jamaica, New York, for the past two years. His own special arrangements for each and every overture, his capable leadership and his own piano presentations each week are the factors responsible for his enviable popularity in this de luxe house.

Charlie, as he is known to everyone who patronizes this beautiful theatre, received a thorough musical education at the Royal Conservatory of Music, Leipzig, and at the New York College of Music, from both of which he was graduated with honors.

Mr. Paul is not only an accomplished director, but an arranger, singer and pianist of note. His versatility, together with an extremely pleasant personality, has gained him a host of friends throughout the country.

SINGERS

Delivery Boys
New York Academy

The Delivery boys, none other than Johnny Tucker and Joe Schuster of radio fame, offer an act which includes imitations of the Mills Brothers, Rudy Vallee, Little Jack Little, Benny Rubin, Singin' Sam, Helen Kane, Bing Crosby, Morton Downey and Kate Smith. The audience roared at the Benny Rubin and Kate Smith imitation by Joe Schuster, and gave the boys a great hand. For an encore this team offered a song recipe which was a howl, finishing with an imitation of Russ Columbo, singing "You Call It Madness."—H. P.

Lee Mason
New Orleans Saenger

Lee Mason is a man in his early twenties, of handsome appearance, affecting a manner which is sometimes that of a crooner, more often that of the Columbo-Crosby type. He sings "What a Life" over the amplification system, assisted by the pit orchestra, and gets a nice hand. Fine vocal choruses with orchestra but a bit monotonous when working alone.

Fumi
San Francisco Golden Gate

This daughter of the Orient, whose voice is a well rounded soprano, seems at home with the classics as well as with popular airs. Her rendition of "Harvest Moon," with Western gestures, was especially well received.

Frankie Finn
New York Capitol

Frankie Finn is a very clever mimic who knows his "Crosby, Columbo and Downey." Using a microphone, he sings a chorus of that famous trio of radio stars' theme songs, the Bo-bo-bo-bo-bo's of Crosby and Columbo and the whistle of Morton Downey. The kid's clever and finishes the act with a sure-applause getter, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling."—H. P.

Robert Chisholm
Baltimore Hippodrome

Of the matinee idol type and sings a cycle of songs effectively, including "I Love a Parade," "Song of Songs" and "That's Why Darkies Were Born." "Liebestraum," played by his accompanist, was aided effectively by the first violin in the orchestra.

Etta Reed
Yonkers Loew's

This cute little blonde proves herself a good blues singer and earns a good hand for her efforts. Opening with "Sing a New Song," Miss Reed goes into "Hummin' to Myself" and then is at her best in the rendition of "Lawd You Made the Night Too Long."—H. P.

Jack Frost
New Orleans State

A nice looking young man who does most of his singing through a megaphone. His work is clever, but he evidently suffered from a cold.

REVIEWS OF ACTS FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Ben Bernie

New York Palace

Ben Bernie, who made quite a name for himself via the radio, proves that as a showman he ranks with the best. His ad lib chatter was rewarded by hearty laughter while his band proved to be as entertaining on the stage as on the air.—H. P.

Rose Valyda

San Francisco Warfield

Rose Valyda, the buxom girl with the double voice, offers a distinct novelty with her rendition of "What'll I Do?" Despite her embonpoint, she does some gymnastic stunts and ends by giving a novelty dance with the m. c., Rube Wolf.

Billy Barnes & Co.

Yonkers Loew's

Here's a satirical comedy, themed about the eighteenth amendment. A scene taking place in front of a "Speak," between a cop and an inebriate is very funny. A brunette has a routine dance between scenes and does well. A good act but not for "Dry" territory.—H. P.

Red Donahue & Co.

Brooklyn Fox

Red Donahue, assisted by Al Wheeler and a well-trained mule, presents a comedy act that is entertaining from start to finish. Donahue, in cork, plays the part of a "darky" delivery man, with Wheeler a policeman.

Comedy chatter, together with the antics of the mule and both men, is entertainment for young and old.—E. D.

Novak and Fay

Detroit Fox

These comedy tumblers present a routine similar to the work of Walter "Dare" Wahl, formerly of Earl Carroll's Vanities, and while the act is not of the class of Wahl's stuff, it draws well.

James Evans

New York Palace

James Evans offers a routine of foot juggling which includes some clever work with three large balls, a table and a full sized bed. His finale is fast, furious and picturesque, and he drew a big hand.—H. P.

Gaudsmith Brothers (2)

Dallas Palace

A good bit of tumbling and balancing, with much of the humor built up with the aid of two half-shaggy, half-clipped French poodles, keeps everyone in good spirits. Most of the laughs are due to the sequence of funny antics of the men and dogs, though several wisecracks keep grownups as well as youngsters in high humor. A good act, any time, anywhere.

Meryl and Lane

New York Triboro

This duo of comely misses offer an act of comedy talk but the outstanding part of it is their singing. A simple dance routine is incorporated into the act and is followed by a violin solo by Miss Lane. The act closes with Miss Meryl's singing of "Paradise," as Miss Lane occompanies her on the violin. Fair reception at show caught.

Billy Gray

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Billy Gray is quite a versatile young man. As a master of ceremonies he is clever and easy to look at. He sings a bit and is nobody's fool when it comes to dancing. His forte is wisecracking and comic antics.

Toto (5)

New York Palace

This clown alone is worth the price of admission. His bag of tricks includes playing on small concertinas, driving a tiny car, flips, acrobatic dancing and a routine of antics that stopped the show.—H. P.

Barbarina & Pal

San Francisco Warfield

Barbarina is a good looking girl who can dance well and do gymnastic stunts, while Pal is a long-haired dog that seems to enjoy walking around on its hind legs and balancing itself on Barbarina as she cavorts around the stage.

Hedder and Emily

Yonkers Loew's

This team offer a good opening for a bill. Emily opens with some work on a rope ladder assisted by Hedder and then switches to a graceful bit on a suspended rope, finishing with a tailspin to the stage. Hedder then does some flips, after which Emily closes the act with a rapid-paced spin, using her teeth as a grip.—H. P.

Edwin George

Brooklyn Fox

This man is a juggler with a rare sense of humor and a comedy act that is entertaining. His forte is chatter, with the juggling secondary. The most laughable part of the act is his intentional missing and muffing up of his tricks.—E. D.

Diamond Bros. (4)

New York Palace

This quartet, in a tough spot following Ben Bernie, offered some dancing and rough-and-tumble comedy which had an enthusiastic audience in laughter all the way through.—H. P.

Pepito

Yonkers Loew's

Pepito, the clown, in a series of novelty capers, stopped the show. He is assisted by a boy and a girl, the latter a striking blonde who sings, dances and plays both the accordion and the piano, and well. A top-notch act that should go well anywhere.—H. P.

Moran and Wise

Baltimore Hippodrome

Two men, using round straw, tall crowned hats and Indian clubs, do some juggling with one member offering comedy chatter. They gained high favor with the audiences by whirling hats to people to be thrown back, catching them on heads.

Ruth Etting to Make Feature

Ruth Etting is slated for a Warner feature next season. She has been appearing in Warner shorts and will leave New York for the Coast in September. Miss Etting is leading in a radio popularity contest conducted by the New York Daily Mirror.

DANCERS

Gail Quadruplets

New York Paramount

Here is a quartet of good-to-look-at sisters, who in this particular show acted as mistresses of ceremonies. Their act included a rhythmic tap novelty and acrobatic dance which were well received, especially when the girls do a flip in unison, using canes for the apex of the somersault. This act can fill any bill to advantage.—H. P.

Kitty Doner

New York Palace

This very much imitated young lady offers a militaristic tap dance on a drum and then goes into an eccentric dance with flips. Then, in a full dress suit, she offers her original tap dance. The act was well-received and for an encore, Miss Doner offered what she called a "Spanish off-rhythm tap dance.—H. P.

Six Lucky Girls

Detroit Hollywood

A number of ensemble routines punctuated by solo bits make this a fast, pleasingly varied act. Two solos are particularly good: one, a strutting toe tap in a costume emulating male evening clothes under a tinsel topper; the other, a control dance with Indian motif. The cleverest ensemble routine is a saucy nautical number presenting five of the girls in suggestions of bluejacket garb.

Agnes Knox

Brooklyn Fox

This graceful young lady is given but one opportunity to show the audience her accomplishments. In this, she offers a difficult contortion toe routine, earning good applause. She also incorporates into this ballet dance some very graceful acrobatic work which also appealed to the audience.—E. D.

Peg Leg Bates

Detroit Fisher

This clever colored lad proves that the loss of a leg need not be a handicap to a dancer. He stomps and taps about the stage with amazing agility and not the slightest departure from a fast rhythm. His earnest efforts to please are well received.

Griffith-Weston

New Orleans State

A clever dance team, the girl being a vivacious, little miss with a winning smile and the boy an apparently gawky youth who can step. The opening is novel, with the man wearing a raincoat and apparently having a hump, which turns out to be the girl hidden in his trousers. The girl apparently suffered from an injured knee, but this did not slow up her routine any.

Dorothy Dean & "Pinkie" Barr

San Antonio Plaza

These young steppers can really put plenty of life and action into their rhythm numbers. The boy is a tap wonder and the girl excels with her graceful toe work.

Chavez Sisters (2)

San Francisco Warfield

These charming girls do a Spanish cape dance which includes some fast steps and much whirling. They are very sure of themselves and are rewarded by a splendid reception.

STAGE ATTRACTIONS

REVIEWS OF STAGE ACTS

ACROBATICS

Joe Mandis (4)
Cincinnati Albee

The three men and one girl appear in conventional street clothes, and do their stuff with great nonchalance and with the minimum effort. In fact, Mandis wears a monocle throughout the entire act, which, aside from some initial ground tumbling, consists of ascending and descending a series of projections built to a great height from tables and chairs. These are negotiated forward and backward with the performers walking on their hands, handsprings and single, double, triple and quadruple tumbling. Just enough comedy is introduced to give the act a nice balance. The comedy, however, which is of the "dumb" variety, with not a word spoken, is clean, and adds to rather than detracts from the offering.

Paul and Nino Ghezzi
Denver Denver

A gymnastic pair whose best is the roll over by one holding the other in the air with his hands. After rolling over in the usual fashion, he transfers his partner to his hands back of him, then back, and does more of the roll over. It's difficult because of the weight of the men, and effective because of the time spent and the slowness. They do the black bottom, dancing on their hands.

Frank Reckless & Co.
New York Triboro

Frank Reckless and a girl assistant offer feats of balancing and difficult stunts on a trapeze. The outstanding bit in this act is the stunt where Reckless balances on his head on the swinging trapeze.

A lot of unintentional comedy is given the audience by the affectation of the girl assistant. The act is good as an opener.

Chappelle and Carlton
Denver Orpheum

This pair offers a neat rolling and balancing number. The man, while lying on the floor, holds the girl upright by her feet, and rolls over and over, at the end of which he rolls up a flight of stairs with the girl standing on his hands all the time.

COMEDY

Doc Rockwell
New York Paramount

Doc Rockwell can be depended upon to put any audience into gales of laughter. After a few minutes of funny gags about the human anatomy and its proper care, Doc brings out his famous skeleton, the sight of which will make anyone laugh. One of his feminine assistants then offers a solo but seems to find that the train of her gown interferes with her vocal efforts, whereupon the "Quack" does "some cutting" up which is a howl. This act is a laugh tonic.—H. P.

Joe Laurie, Jr. and His Five Singing Cousins
New York Palace

Joe has a lot of well remade wisecracks and works off the family domestic secrets well. His five cousins are a great help. They sing and dance attractively. Well received.

Jimmy Savo
Detroit Fisher

No description of Savo's work can serve as a convincing explanation of the audience reaction he wins. His slapstick antics first thaw out the frozen faces and then whip them into almost painful convulsions of laughter. Tears trickle down swelled cheeks and the house is rocked with merriment. He sings little and speaks little, most of his stuff being clever pantomime. His slingshot gag, his efforts in lighting a cigar, his comedy card tricks, a game of hop scotch, his frenzied gestures and expressions when the orchestra persists in music that displeases him—are all made funny only by his inimitable lunatic personality. It is impossible to imagine that he was any more laughable in the Vanities than he is on this bill.

Brems, Fitz and Murphy Bros.
New York Loew's State

A Jew, a Scot and two Irishmen, a sure-fire hokum combination. These four men offer 20 minutes of comedy antics and songs. Most of their routine is laughable and entertaining, though the same type of comedy gets monotonous after a while. Better that they sing a few more songs, for they have good voices and this audience liked their singing. They closed with a yodeling number that the audience would have liked more of.—E. D.

Moran and Mack (2)
Cincinnati Albee

The blackface team, co-headlined, do much of their stuff that has made them familiar with theatre, radio and phonograph fans. Using a special drop in one depicting a river scene with a steamboat dock, the team, seated and lying on bales of cotton, offer much the same line of chatter, repartee and wisecracks as when seen here previously. The second half of the act consists of a burlesque boxing match, which didn't seem to register to the same extent as the first part of the offering. On the whole, however, the funsters drew a big share of long, hearty laughs.

Harry Savoy
New York Palace

Here's a comedian who gets plenty of laughs. With the help of a girl, he goes into a lovemaking scene that caused a good laugh. Then, from the ridiculous to the sublime, he imitated John Barrymore in a scene from "Richard the Third," which proved a thunderous finale.—H. P.

Ross and Bennett
Baltimore Hippodrome

Ross and Bennett, a man and girl comedy, songs and general hokum act, got them laughing and kept up the pace very well with their general gags, songs and slap-about.

De Vito & Denny
San Francisco Orpheum

This pair offer a riotous patter turn which they call "Lady Harrower's Reception," and it proves a scream. It is full of tomfoolery put over in a different way.

Paul Mall
Detroit Fox

High pressure pep, patter and comedy lines with a few fast songs make Paul Mall fair diversion for the right audience. A scant house gave him a mild reception here.

SPOTS & SHOTS ON BROADWAY

Besides being an m.c., Jack Osterman is an optimist (no offense Jack). Going up to a cigar counter Ostie chirped, "Give me a match, I'll buy the cigar tomorrow."

Will Osborne is packing them in at Playland Casino in Rye. Evidently Will's comeback attempt is bearing fruit and we don't mean to include the "Grapefruit."

Johnny Green, ex-pugilist and song promoter (ah there, you songpluggers), will open a gymnasium for the radio artists of NBC and CBS.

Paul Draper, who recently did his stuff at the Roxy, has been signed to appear in "Ballyhoo," a new Broadway show which is slated to open this fall.

Buddy Rogers will give the ladies a treat when he opens next week at the Palace.

Sam Warshawsky has completed the novelization of his play, "The Woman of Destiny," in which Miss Ethel Barrymore was to star. Now it looks like the vehicle will shortly open on the coast featuring a film name.

Kitty Carlisle, who makes her American debut at the Capitol this week, is a protege of Louis K. Sidney.

Georgie Price and Lester Allen led the Friars parade just prior to the presentation of the annual Friars' Frolic at the Roxy.

Patricia Bowman, ballerina dancer, has been signed to a new contract by the Roxy theatre management. This should set at rest those rumors about the Roxy going dark.

Upon strolling onto the "Million Dollar Legs" set late the other morning, Ben Turpin offered as excuse that he'd been having his eyes "cross-examined."—Entertainment magazine.

A soft drink advertised in subway cars reads, "Served at subway and better fountains." Oh Mr. Hedley.

Supreme Screen Service has opened a branch office at Minneapolis, with George Kapman and Charles Coren in charge. The new office covers Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

Stone Has Own Musical Unit

Charlie Stone, who recently terminated his engagement as leader of the RKO Albee theatre orchestra in Cincinnati, has organized a new musical unit and is playing Swiss Gardens, a Cincinnati dansant. Lee Irwin, erstwhile feature organist at the Albee, is playing in Stone's new setup.

STAGE ATTRACTIONS

OVERTURES

DR. HUGO RIESENFELD (New York Roxy) offered as an overture selections from "La Boheme" by Puccini, with a vocal rendition by Edwin Dale. Following this, the Doctor directed the orchestra in a medley called "Rivers of Romance," which included "Blue Danube," "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," "Volga Boatman" and "Ole Man River." During the finale of the latter song, a prop, typical of the old Mississippi River paddle boat, glides across the stage most effectively. This novel overture was heartily received.

ALEXANDER KEESE (Dallas Palace) and his Modern Rhythm Orchestra not only stole the show, but succeeded in stopping every performance with their administering of this week's musical melange. It was "Lovable" to start with as Walter Hancock interpreted with a violin solo, followed by "Wrong Number" with the drummer, George Egner, cleverly jiggling a sliding whistle to usurp the spotlight. George Egan's trombone solo of "Marcheta" was well done, while the vocal trio of Crites, Sims and Hancock were liked in "By a Rippling Stream." All of which led up to the number, "Oh, Monah," with Pem Davenport deserting his post as pianist to shout forth the vocal lead for this clever number as the orchestra indulged in the answering vocal refrain.

SOL KLEIN (New York Academy of Music) and his orchestra of accomplished musicians this week presented an overture in which "Waters of Minnetonka," and "Japanese Sandman," were featured. Opening with an ensemble chorus, the popular director took up his violin and gave a well played solo of the former number. Following this with a full band modulation and a clarinet solo of "Sandman," the entire band closed with a hot chorus of the latter song.

Klein and his boys never fail to get a good reception from the patrons of this house.

Assistant Conductor Promoted

Jack Sprigg, assistant conductor of the Cincinnati RKO Albee orchestra, has been placed in charge of the orchestra. He succeeds Charles B. Stone, who has returned to New York.

UP AND DOWN THE ALLEY

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Dick Powell, former master of ceremonies at the Pittsburgh Stanley, is filling in time between now and September 1st, with engagements as m.c. at the Philadelphia Mastbaum (one week currently) and a four week engagement at the Ambassador, St. Louis. . . . His fine work in "Blessed Event," the Warner Brothers picture featuring Lee Tracy and Mary Brian, resulted in a long term contract to appear in W. B. pictures.

Pat Flaherty, general manager of Sterling Songs, Inc., was formerly a big league pitcher and says that he may attempt a comeback next season. . . . The music business can use more optimists like Vic Selsman, ace song-plugger for DeSylva, Brown and Henderson. . . . Vic took upon himself a bride last week and is that guy radiating happiness. . . . Mozzeltuff, Victor.

Everyone is talking about the enchanting Feist waltz song, "Masquerade," which the young writers, Paul Francis Webster and John Jacob Loeb, have written. . . . Incidentally this number is particularly beautiful when played on the organ. . . .

Jack Mills, president of Mills Music, Inc., left last week on the Bremen for a six weeks business and pleasure trip with Samuel Jesse Buzzell, the firm's attorney, in London, Paris and Berlin. . . . Little Jack Little, who was featured on the Palace bill last week, and J. Fred Coots, formerly of the firm of Davis, Coots and Engel, have had their latest song effort accepted and published by DeSylva, Brown and Henderson. . . . The title of the number is "Under a Shady Tree with You." The melody is simple and the lyrics have that "human nature" sentiment which should make the song popular. . . .

Harold Kemp, head of the Warner Brothers Artists Bureau, announced that the Jersey City Stanley will inaugurate a new policy with the current bill. . . . It is to be a five-act vaudeville show, Joe Penner heading the cast for the first week, with Cab Calloway following for the second. . . . Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards, stage, screen and radio star is playing a week at the Washington Earle . . . and Bert Wheeler is to be one of the famous stage and screen stars who will be guests at the opening of Warners' new house in Ridgewood, N. J.

ORGAN SOLOS

BERNIE COWHAM (New York Flushing RKO), back at the theatre where he has enjoyed a popularity exceeded by no other organist, was given one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations this reviewer has ever witnessed. His opening song was "Voice of the RKO," with his own lyrics instead of the usual words, for the audience to sing. He followed this with his own "salute" and, orally, told them that their "singing school" was again in session. A medley of three number was followed by a special for the boys and girls to sing. Bernie never forgets the old folk, and favors them also. Tremendous applause greeted these numbers and subsided only when he introduced Sid Kriser, a local high school boy, who sang beautifully, has an exceptional voice and will undoubtedly make a name for himself later on. The applause at the end of the solo elicited from Bernie a special "thank you" song.

LEW BETTERLY (Detroit RKO Downtown) appears to be settling finally with some ease into his surroundings here. This solo, "A Lecture on Applause," is undoubtedly his best performance since his first appearance here, over a month ago. Heretofore there has been more evidence of his ability in incidental playing between screen units than in his actual solos. He has probably been making too great a conscious effort to please. The week's program includes a number of hand-appeal slides, such as, a beer stein and a symbol of prosperity. The lyric numbers are, "Dream Sweetheart." "Paradise," with whistling lines; "By the Fireside," and "Somebody Loves You." The latter proves a good choice for a strong finish. Betterly's first program on the opening day included a tongue twister composed of an alliteration of m's. In his second show he substituted a sibilant tongue twister which drew decidedly better response. Altogether a splendid reception from a sparse house.

JIMMY DAUBERT (Allentown State) has started off well here. His first effort to make the audience sing met with good success. The title of this solo was "Spring Frolic," and included a special continuity which gained the audience' attention right from the start. The singing numbers were: "By the Fireside," "Lovable," "Somebody Loves You" and "Snuggled." Daubert, being the only "live" music in town has an easy task before him.

Now they're "shooting" it on location, too

FOR some time after its announcement, Eastman Super-sensitive Panchromatic Film was used chiefly under artificial light. Now many cameramen are "shooting" it on location, too ...for these reasons: (1) Its speed substantially lengthens the photographic day...(2) It offers special advantages in photographing certain types of scenes and costumes...(3) In all scenes it yields that subtly superior quality which marks the most advanced motion picture photography...(4) It gives the cinematographer a single negative medium for all purposes...a medium which, once fully understood, affords a range of possibilities bounded only by the user's imagination and technical skill. Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

LEADERSHIP

This industry faces new problems.

Past experience will help to solve some of them.

But leadership is required to overcome them all.

That leadership is evident in the policies now being established in the New and Greater Fox Film Corporation.

Foresight and the courage to pioneer are the fundamentals of these policies.

Progress and stability will be their results — not only for Fox but for the entire industry.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 107, No. 13 June 25, 1932

THE SHOEMAKER & HIS LAST

IN the fabled days of '29 the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, then engaged in motion picture production, was invited by Mr. Martin Quigley to contribute a view of the outstanding aspect of the industry to the Motion Picture Almanac of that year. The resultant screed was a blunt suggestion that in view of the preoccupation of the barons of Broadway with the stock market there was sterling opportunity for the launching of a movement for the return of motion picture men to the motion picture industry.

It was to be observed then that a number of able gentlemen, by engaging in the production and marketing of motion pictures, had created a large industry and some considerable dollar fortunes, and having arrived at this happy estate, forgot largely about the motion pictures and engaged in playing with the dollars, in the dumb business of magnating.

Only recently have some of these gentlemen seriously considered the actual return to the picture business. Meanwhile the motion picture industry has reaped, and is still reaping, the aftermath. It is all forcibly borne in on one by the current press dispatches from Washington anent the affairs and operations of Mr. William Fox as discussed before the Senate committee investigating the stock market. It is to be recalled that so long as Mr. Fox operated the motion picture enterprises and the late John C. Eisele, treasurer, handled the financing of Fox they had a robust concern.

In view of the much that has been said about "banker influence" and "banker control" of the motion picture, it may be wholesome to consider for a moment some of the prior happenings under the hands of motion picture men who turned their back on the screen to play at finance.

This is still the motion picture industry, and its opportunities are motion picture opportunities.

MR. "OBSERVER" PROMISES

WHEN Mr. "Observer" of the Hollywood Herald read our masterly, even tempered and genteel but pointed remarks about his fuss-budgety old Tory style of defense of Hollywood against the pungent observations of Miss I. A. R. Wylie in Harpers Magazine, he went off in a red faced rage, broke two churchwarden pipes and spilled his pouch of Capstan plug cut. Continuing to evade the issue and avoiding the facts, he wrote, with a tremulous spluttering quill pen, a diatribe concerning the personal career of the editor of Motion Picture Herald. The unsullied record of this editor stands like a sheaf of lilies against the pink and mauve horizons of the motion picture world. Meanwhile Mr. "Observer," with curious self-assurance, has flatly promised that something is to be done about matters out there, immediately. We shall await performance with our usual breathless anticipation.

BEAUTY ON THE SCREEN

FOR many years beauty, sheer pictorial beauty, was an important asset of the screen.

Since the coming of sound the word has scarcely been used in the vocabulary of either the makers or critics of the motion picture.

Something considerably more significant, more sinister, than neglect and preoccupation is involved. The motion picture has become "punch crazy," in panting pursuit of speaking stage climaxes and the fussy business of wordy gags. It has been very considerably forgotten that the motion picture should still be made with the camera and that the microphone is an attachment, an accessory, both as a mechanism and as a tool of the art of expression. The word as thus far applied to the screen has vastly increased the motion picture's capacity for innuendo and salacity, but not even the stoutest defender of the current technique has ventured to say that it has been used to enhance lure and glamour.

In part, this has resulted from taking the drama of the screen indoors and playing it close to the microphone. The great open spaces which gave relief to eye and mind are in the main implied in the lines and action with about the same degree of verisimilitude afforded by the treadmill chariot scenes in the stage version of "Ben Hur."

An occasional short, as for example "Manhattan Medley" in the Magic Carpet of Movietone, takes cognizance of the existence of a value in abstract pictorial beauty, but screen expressions of the kind are so rare as to be notable exceptions. Currently there is in release an expeditionary production made in Malaysia containing a plethora of punch material and not a scene which is calculated to convey to the audience any part of the atmosphere of the great dank, green, steaming jungle, its tangles of mystery and smelly darks where danger lurks and all living things are in a tense stalking war of life. In the quest of box office value the picture has been made a series of catfights. With a feeling for romance and beauty, it might have become supreme drama.

Further, the same mad pursuit of sensational effect, which is, to be sure, self-defeating, appears in many exploitation expressions. There is an element in the school of showmanship which appears to deem it unmanly for a showman to recognize any beauty, save, perhaps, that of the feminine figure. There is a clamor for red, red, red and what is elegantly termed "stud horse" type. Merchandisers in many lines who address themselves to the big popular mass audience key their appeal to fit the mood of the offering. A few years ago a sort of sensation was caused on Broadway by a bit of motion picture literature which was marked by its elegance in materials and treatment. The whole industry talked about it, and damned it because it was not what was called "showmanship"—forgetting, the while, that it had, by the very uproar, proved its attention value.

HOLLYWOOD'S INNER RING

by MARTIN QUIGLEY

LANCES continue to be broken against the armor which has been set up to safeguard salaries and other costs of production in Hollywood.

¶ One company executive after another goes out to Hollywood, tells that ruin is just ahead if costs are not pulled down and calls upon the studios for action.

¶ But the old-time system of inflated salaries and extravagant costs goes merrily on its way.

¶ It is true that there have been curtailments. Various persons professionally associated with the production of motion pictures have been subjected to payroll decreases. Purchases for production are being argued about a little more insistently. Grounds for much conversational economy have been provided in the cutting of minor salaries. The salary rolls covering stenographers and clerks can be and are displayed in a manner of glowing pride.

¶ But major costs largely remain protected and secure behind an armor-plate system against which the attacks from New York fall ineffectually as so many broken lances.

¶ This extraordinary situation exists because the evil, as devastating and calamitous as it is, has not been attacked at its roots. Either those mainly responsible do not know where the root of the evil lies, or are unwilling or unable to do anything about it.

¶ The root of the evil lies in the exaggerated and absurd schemes of compensation enjoyed by the ringleaders in production.

¶ What this compensation amounts to in the various individual cases is quite generally understood in Hollywood by all persons, including the rank and file. It is a matter of common knowledge that one executive after another has refused either to submit to a cut in compensation or else any decrease accepted is not abandoned but only temporarily deferred. Many of the captains of production have been calling upon their troops to go where they have specifically indicated they will neither lead nor follow. The result, quite naturally, has been that the economy program in anything like its correct proportions and extent has been a failure.

¶ The inner ring in Hollywood is entrenched. It is only mildly concerned with the eventual fortunes of the industry. Its immediate concern is to hold out in its present position a while longer. It does not want production costs lowered because such a procedure would involve the lowering of its own compensation. It is not genuinely interested in economies because its objective is rather to make a name for itself than to make a profit for its company. It assumes to hold a magic charm over production of motion pictures and warns off in one way or another any non-lodge member who would presume to penetrate into the charmed circle.

¶ It is frequently remarked that "Hollywood hasn't even heard of the depression". What is actually meant is that Hollywood has not yet heard of the depression in the only language which is thoroughly understandable by various of the elements there. That language is the language of money. Persons who are still receiving salaries of several thousands of dollars a week need not and should not be expected to know there has been a depression.

¶ Hollywood is very definitely in the hands of a clique—a clique which has labored long and diligently to entrench itself politically, socially and financially. It has ready answers to all complaints. It has prepared explanations of why anything that does not suit its own particular plans will not work. Passingly strange is the fact that there is hardly a good word to be said for the production system by anyone, in or out of the industry, except by those who are enjoying its rich and luscious fruits. Perhaps they are all right and the rest of the world is all wrong—but such a presumption does not afford sufficiently firm ground to stand upon, particularly in times like these.

¶ For a long time the essential profitableness of the motion picture business allowed a margin which was ample to cover mistakes, extravagances, wastes, wages nowhere else in the world duplicated, and various other things which were considered to be part of motion picture production. But for a considerable period the motion picture business has not only not been that profitable but it has not been profitable at all. Hence the dreamworld of Hollywood has been living an existence which is not based upon realities.

¶ The only conceivable justification for salaries of from two to ten thousand dollars a week is because the enterprises concerned are sufficiently profitable to allow such salaries to be paid.

¶ What, then, is the justification for the continuance of such salaries in Hollywood under existing conditions and WHY AND HOW ARE THEY BEING CONTINUED?

ALLIED PLANS GOING INTO POLITICS FOR LAWS HELPING INDEPENDENTS

Every Allied Theatre Would Lend Screen to Aid Sponsored Candidates; "Vigilantes" Would Fight 10c Tax

"Glad Tax Bill Passed," Says Samuelson at Atlantic City Convention; Says Brookhart Bill Is Far From Dead

By SHERWIN A. KANE

Plans for putting into effect Allied's long contemplated program of seeking legislative and political aid in obtaining relief from industry conditions adversely affecting the independent exhibitor are being drafted during the current meetings of the Allied Board of Directors and Eastern independent exhibitors at the St. Charles Hotel, Atlantic City.

Not included in the subjects to be presented at the open sessions, definite recommendations will be made and instructions drawn under which every Allied theatre will lend its screen to the support of approved candidates for political office, both local and federal, during the fall campaign. By the election of Allied sponsored political candidates, the theatre association hopes to bring about local, state and federal legislation regarded as desirable for independent exhibitors. The political participation campaign will also include the formation of local vigilante committees throughout the country to ward off a lowering of admission tax exemptions to 10 cents, which Allied regards as likely at the next session of Congress, when, Allied leaders believe, it will be apparent that the present revenue bill is insufficient for balancing the budget.

Considered second in importance at the meeting is the plan of the organization to marshal independent buying power to guarantee playing time for independent productions. Such a deal not only would direct important revenue into Allied's treasury through premiums paid by the independent producers, but would also solve the problem of a shortage of product which Allied felt nationally, particularly among small double featuring theatres.

Here from Hollywood to discuss the cooperative deal with Allied executives are Leon Lee and Louis King, representing a group of independent producers. At least two others are expected to arrive from the Coast Thursday and an important independent distributor was scheduled to participate in the discussions Thursday as well.

A brief introductory session presided over by Sidney Samuelson, president of Allied of New Jersey, was given over to a statement of the convention order of business.

Among the legislative possibilities which Allied sees hope of being advanced at the lame duck session of Congress are the Brookhart bill, the copyright measure and the bill for federal investigation of the industry. Referring to the likelihood of the matter being introduced, Samuelson cited the disclosures made during the questioning of Harry Warner and concerning William Fox by a Senate committee investigating stock exchange transactions.

Those disclosures, Samuelson said, have paved the way for a federal investigation of the industry. The copyright bill, he said, is still a live subject, and the Brookhart bill far from dead, despite its author's recent defeat for renomination.

SECOND RUN ON TELEVISION!

During the running recently of the famed English Derby at Epsom Downs, the Metropole, important London house, gave a television showing of the race. According to Phil Hyams, a competitive exhibitor who had noted the crowds attending the performance approached Mr. Hyams, asking how he should go about obtaining the Derby television transmission for a second run.

In addition, Samuelson said legislative action would be sought in the New Jersey legislature next fall for the regulation of protection unless state zoning relief was allowed by distributors this summer. He claimed credit for Allied for the defeat of the New Jersey state admission tax and for independent theatre owners in maintaining a federal admission tax exemption above ten cents. In referring to the latter he said:

"We are glad the federal tax bill has been passed, even though it hits some of us."

Product shortage will also occupy much of the meeting's time, Samuelson indicated. He announced that four representatives of independent producers would arrive from Hollywood Thursday to discuss with Allied directors, who are also in session here, a cooperative plan by which Allied playing time would be guaranteed to independent producers in return for a bonus or percentage payment to Allied's treasury. Samuelson said: "These independent producers will furnish us with the answer to the artificial curtailment of product and playing time."

5-5-5 "of Odious Memory"

Samuelson listed as other subjects to come before the meeting those of double featuring, protection, feature and shorts tie-ins, the 5-5-5 contract "of odious memory," publication of theatre grosses, analyses of major companies, new product and contracts, summer theatre closings, availability to exhibitors of statistics on picture performances before he books, copyright of accessories by distributors, and closer organization for Allied units.

Cognizance of the organizational advertising of Local 306, New York, was taken by the meeting at the afternoon session Wednesday and resulted in authorization of a committee to investigate projection booth fires in order to determine what proportion has occurred in booths manned by two projectionists in comparison with those manned by one.

Samuelson charged that the New York local's campaign was a misleading one and designed only to seek passage of an ordinance requiring the employment of two men in the projection booth on the basis of public safety. He said the campaign affected every independent exhibitor because if the two men requirement became a law in New York it would remain a threat for the enactment of similar ordinances everywhere. The committee's investigation will be made throughout a widespread territory.

Discussion of a proposed plan to close New Jersey theatres three days a week during July and August, because of product shortage was regarded unfavorably by the meeting on the grounds that the move would drive small town patrons elsewhere and city patronage to circuit houses.

Exclusive Run Plan Up

MGM's exclusive run plan, as it has affected independents in situations where it has been put in work, will be aired at Thursday's meeting when Wilmington exhibitors will tell of its workings in that city so that, Samuelson said, "the rest of you can see what's coming to you when it is extended to your cities." Samuelson said that the industry's biggest problems today have all been caused by evils in distribution.

In his opening address Samuelson said, "I am interested in the answer being given by large producer-distributors to poor product they've made. I predicted a year ago that all but independents would be in bankruptcy unless it was improved. Recent statements of Merlin Aylesworth confirm that opinion. Poor pictures have made their answer but it took longer than I thought it would."

Samuelson told the meeting he had recently been advised that "certain companies are checking checkers with detectives. This doesn't apply to anyone here, but watch your step."

"Who's checking the detectives?" someone wanted to know. Continuation of the program laid down by Allied's Detroit national convention will also be undertaken here.

Cleveland Case Goes to Trial If Final Session July 11 Fails

The monopoly suit filed by a group of independent exhibitors in Cleveland against the Hays organization and national distributors will go to trial, if negotiations fail at a final meeting set for July 11 in New York.

Luther Day, attorney representing the Cleveland Film Board, and Gabriel Hess, attorney for the Hays organization, met Samuel Horwitz, lawyer for the suing exhibitor body, at the Bar Association building in New York, on Monday, it was learned, and decided to make one more effort at out-of-court settlement.

TURN TO "HOME-SPUN YARNS," SURVEY PLEA

Exhibitors Offer Constructive Criticism of Screen Material in Canvass on Stars; Week's Replies Reallocate Players

That there is to be a struggle for location among the leaders in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD survey to determine "The Ten Biggest Money Making Stars of 1931-32," was indicated by this week's additions to the returns. Those at the very top of the heap in the first tabulation, announced last week, continue strong, but a number of shifts in relative positions occur all along the line, with two of last week's first 10—the team, Wheeler & Woolsey—dropping out of that select group entirely.

In this change, however, comedy lost no ground, for it was Joe E. Brown who stepped up into their position.

The week's returns also confirmed the initial indication that exhibitors have been observing the material brought to their screens with constructive criticism. Theatre opinion, given in response to the incidental phase of the survey represented by the question, If you have a favorite story or play you would like to see made for the screen, what is it?—this opinion continues definite, and in many cases, heart-felt. Implores an exhibitor in the general vicinity of the studios themselves: "Less society and Broadway * * * and more action and home-spun yarns." (The asterisks represent a deletion most necessary to the interests of good publishing practice.)

Few of the responding exhibitors feel as does one, who asks: "Is there a good story? You name one." Indeed, many are observing current material in a picture-minded attitude. One contemporary Broadway stage show, "Of Thee I Sing," is cited by four exhibitors in no way associated and located as far apart as Massachusetts, Virginia and Long Island, New York. This musical satire is augmented by another from the current stage—"Hot Cha." Music, in fact, is a lingering strain running through the entire medley of suggestions.

Variety? Not only do a few respondents "give the bird" (American "razzberry") to the cycle method of production, but the material named shows a wide range of taste. One's choice is "a good strong undersea tale" with a "damned good cast." Yet another would have some producer put John Barrymore on the screen in "Hamlet." And elsewhere out of the batch of replies one finds this invitation to a congressional investigation: "A satirical sketch dealing with Congress and present-day economic conditions."

These replies—in an ultimate sense, a nation-wide reply to the producer query, "What do they want?"—will doubtless realize their full value as constructive testimony with the complete analysis to be given them. Classifications will be made according to type of material represented in the suggestions, and the whole mass of opinion be laid before the industry in a final publication of the results of the survey.

The 10 players leading in the count at time of going to press are listed elsewhere. The changes made this week affect Will Rogers and Charles Farrell, who, tying, supplant Greta Garbo in fifth place; Clark Gable and Norma Shearer, who changed places, and Joe E. Brown, as previously noted.

American Film Still Dominates England

American feature films still dominate the British market, but the native product has increased in popularity since the advent of sound, a survey by the United States department of commerce of the 1931 film situation in the United Kingdom indicates.

During 1931 657 films were trade-shown in the United Kingdom, of which 72.6 per cent were American and 21.5 per cent British, the report shows. The ratio of both American and domestic films to the total shown increased as compared with 1930. French and German films accounted for only four per cent during the year. Feature films produced in British studios during 1931 numbered 141, of which all but 10 were sound. Including short subjects, total British footage produced was 907,000, or 17 per cent of the total from all sources, as compared with 77.45 per cent for American films.

There were approximately 100 theatres opened in the United Kingdom during 1931, making a total of 4,952, of which 4,002 are wired. About 30 per cent of the British cinemas are included in circuits which operate from three to 40 theatres each. The survey shows that production costs ranged from 40,000 pounds sterling for the most expensive to 8,000 pounds sterling for the less elaborate films. For the most successful British pictures the estimated costs varied from 25,000 to 35,000 pounds sterling.

Canada Queries Exhibitors On Film Quota for Dominion

A questionnaire on the subject of a British film quota for Canada has been sent out to a number of exhibitors in Canada under the sponsorship of the Dominion government. The tabulated result will be presented for the information of Empire delegates at the Imperial Economic Conference opening July 21 at Ottawa.

The early reaction to the questionnaire is that exhibitors are willing to accept good British films but are opposed to any plan whereby they would be compelled to book mediocre pictures of any country. From the viewpoint of the exhibitors the question apparently hinges on this point.

Wisconsin MPTO Re-Elects Meyer

The MPTO of Wisconsin, meeting in annual convention last week in Milwaukee, reelected Fred S. Meyer president and business manager. Other officers named were: A. C. Gutenberg, Milwaukee, vice-president; Ernest Langemack, Milwaukee, treasurer; W. L. Ainsworth, Fond du Lac, secretary. Directors include, in addition to the officers, Earl Fischer, H. J. Fitzgerald, George Fischer, Paul Langheinrich, S. J. Hankin, all of Milwaukee, and Frank Koppelberger, La Crosse; Jack Grauman, Menasha; H. S. Gallup, Marquette, Mich.; L. F. Thurwachter, Waukesha; H. C. Buchanan, Superior; George Huebner, Oconomowoc; Max Krofta, Racine; A. C. Berkholz, West Bend; Martin Thomas, Iron Mountain, Mich.

M. A. Lightman, president of the MPTOA, national organization, was the principal speaker. The organization voted to change its name to the MPTO of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, and voted to join the MPTOA. The double feature policy was condemned, and the convention recommended adoption of "a uniform contract" for exhibitors who prefer this kind of contract.

Academy Names Awards Group; Selznick Chairman

President M. C. Levee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences on the Coast last week announced the appointment of the committee on annual awards for 1932 for distinguished achievements, with David O. Selznick, production head at RKO Radio as chairman. The committee comprises three members from each of the five Academy branches.

Desberg Suffers Heart Attack

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., has been forced to take a complete rest for several months, as a result of a sudden heart attack sustained at his home in Cleveland last week.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FAIL TO ACT ON PLEAS FOR TRADE PROTECTION

Speakers Answer Busybodies, Concerted Move Is Shelved; Mooring Cites Need for Parallel of Hays Organization

By WM. H. MOORING, London

The exhibitors' International Conference held in London last week was less productive of concrete proposal than less pretentious gatherings arranged by the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association in previous years.

Only four papers were submitted in the entire week, and the two of most pressing importance to the film industry were dismissed cursorily in order that the few delegates present might adjourn to the Trade Exhibition hall where the Duke and Duchess of York were visiting about that time.

When the conference reassembled the "ginger" had gone out of the two papers, which seemed to bear distinct relation one to the other.

Answers Busybodies

Mr. James Welsh, Scottish exhibitor and former member of Parliament, dealt with the question of film censorship with special regard to recent public agitation against the exhibition of "A" certificates films to juveniles under 16. He defended the industry against the attacks of busybodies, and played for national press publicity, which was to some limited extent forthcoming. But the exhibitors who applauded his constructive advice made no proposals whereby to adopt it: talk will not solve the present problems arising out of public agitation against existing codes of film censorship, nor will it of itself do anything to counteract the wave of anti-cinema sentiment which is being inspired and encouraged by organized sabbatarian and so-called welfare bodies.

Mr. Welsh in his address admitted it is largely due to the increasing number of special investigations and other similar propaganda efforts that public interest in the undesirable aspects of film entertainment has been aroused, but neither he nor Mr. S. K. Lewis, his Birmingham exhibitor colleague, who followed him with an address on trade propaganda, hit upon any definite suggestion as to ways and means of combating the evil.

Great play has been made from time to time of the fact that the present British film censorship, while upheld by the industry, is in no way influenced by trade interests or associations. Yet when it comes to a question of organizing a Trade Protection and Propaganda Bureau—the burning need of these days—the British industry has no conception of anything more impressive and expressive of trade opinion than a subcommittee of the CEA, the utterances of which are from the very first challenged as of clearly biased origin.

Hays Office Parallel Urged

It is clear that nothing short of an organization built on the principle of the Hays office in America will meet the case in Britain. Such an organization, if set up, could assume some authority in unifying trade policy in story selection and studio treatment, and thereafter could stand before the public as a responsible body, ready and able to answer the challenges of those attacking the cinema either on grounds of censorship or in any other way. Such a plan seems to be beyond the scope of the CEA alone, but the CEA might invite and secure the collaboration of the KRS and the FBI, representing the distributors and producers operating in Britain. Why not?

Bryson Returns in Educational Field

James V. Bryson, for years the able British lieutenant for Universal, comes into the news again with two plans—one for the presentation of stage shows at the Prince Edward theatre, London, the other for the production of educational talkers, notable for the special purpose of teaching foreign languages, a possibility which has not yet received any serious attention in this, one of the worst served and most nearly unilingual countries in the world. Plans are immature at the moment, but he is tying up with a small studio and will announce definite production details within a week or two. He is welcomed back, for in spite of occasional misunderstandings he is and has always been highly popular as a showman on this side of the Atlantic.

Rental Policy Again Opened by CEA

Following a resolution passed at last week's International Conference, the British CEA is to approach the Kinematograph Renters' Society with a proposal that rental concessions should be made at once. Discussions have been going on for the past year, with indifferent results, and exhibitors say that the need for lower minima in rentals is now so urgent that the distributors, if unwilling to operate jointly through their society, must be approached by the CEA in their individual capacities. The present suggestion is that the minimum percentage of 25 per cent sharing terms should be replaced by a flexible minimum decided by the earning capacity of each film. That way the minimum would no longer exist at all, and the KRS is likely to offer resistance.

Exhibitor opinion as expressed at the conference seems by no means unanimous regarding the efficacy and equity of the percentage system. Many exhibitors favor a return generally to flat rental terms, but others maintain that under the sharing system they have been able to obtain more stable profits and, by taking the distributor virtually into partnership during the run of each film, have been able to share not only in the advantages of such good films as they have booked, but in the disadvantages of the inevitable "flops."

Many exhibitors at the Conference expressed their disapproval of recent headquarters policy on the question.

Price Replaces Shapiro at Fox

Sidney R. Kent, Fox president, appointed Al Price head of the studio advertising and publicity department, in place of Victor Shapiro, prior to his departure for New York on Tuesday. Mr. Kent went to the Coast in connection with the return of Winfield Sheehan and Sol Wurtzel as production executives.

Mr. Price will take over his new duties on July 1, when Mr. Shapiro will transfer to the home office in New York. His post there is as yet indefinite, but will probably be decided with the arrival of Mr. Kent Saturday.

New York Circuit Heads Meet To Eliminate Double Features

Independent and affiliated circuit heads, representing first and second-run houses exclusively in New York, were to attend a meeting at the Hotel Astor on Thursday, designed to eliminate the double feature policy in the area. Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the local Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, who called the meeting, has termed the elimination of the double bill an encouragement to production.

Mr. O'Reilly expressed the opinion that the only way to compensate for mediocre films is to play one feature on a program sustained with a group of diversified short subjects. "If double featuring is to continue we will find practically every theatre in New York, except the de luxe houses, with admission prices of 10 and 15 cents," the exhibitor leader said.

Warner Denies Allegations In Answer to Koplar Suit

Warner Brothers this week filed an answer at Wilmington, Del., to the suit asking a receivership and accounting brought recently by Harry Koplar. The company denied allegations of mismanagement and any necessity for the appointment of receivers.

The answer admits the payment of large salaries to stars formerly with other studios, but contends that the corporation derived great profit from the pictures in which these stars appeared. Insolvency was denied.

Seider Adds Six Houses

Joe Seider has added six Long Island theatres to his Prudential circuit, with the possibility of others being taken over later. The new houses are in Little Neck, Laurelton, Hollis, Huntington and Northport.

Laemmle Recovers Rapidly

Carl Laemmle, recovering from a recent operation, and now at the Hotel Pierre, is making rapid progress. The Universal president is expected back at his home office desk within a few days.

WILLIAM FOX SUED FOR 5 MILLION BY CIRCUIT

Fox Theatres Corpn. Charges Former President "Utilized Corporation for His Own Enrichment" in Stock Dealings

Fox Theatres Corporation, in a suit filed on Tuesday in Mineola, Long Island, seeks to recover in excess of $5,000,000 from William Fox in an accounting of profits alleged to have been made by Mr. Fox in connection with organization and operation of the corporation and in alleged stock manipulations, from 1925 to April, 1930. The suit follows disclosures made last week before a Senate committee investigating stock trading practices, disclosures which it was charged, indicated that the former president of the Fox companies participated extensively in and profited by pool operations involving Fox stock.

The papers were filed in the office of the county clerk of Nassau County and also name Jack G. Leo, Eva Fox, Carolyn Leah Tauszig, a daughter of Mr. Fox; Jacob Rubenstein, Bessie Livingstone and John Zanft.

"For His Own Enrichment"

The complainants, represented by Henry A. Uterhart, of New York City, charge that at the time of the organization of Fox Theatres, in 1925, Mr. Fox conceived and adopted a plan "to utilize the corporation for his own enrichment, chiefly through the means of dealing in and with, and the manipulation of, stock of the corporation, not only through the acquisition by him of legitimate profits through the purchase and sale of stock, but also through the realization by him of unjust and unlawful means and devices, of large gains of fraudulent and secret origin and nature to be secured by him at the expense of the corporation and members of the public."

Besides having adopted a plan which is claimed to have given him possession of the entire voting power of the corporation, the complainant charges Fox with causing the board of directors and its staff of officers to be composed of himself and employees, friends and relatives and that he exercised complete control and domination over them. Cases of manipulation of Fox Theatres stock through which Mr. Fox is said to have profited personally are cited in the papers. Deals made with the corporation by Mr. Fox are also said to have netted him considerable.

The plaintiffs demand judgment against Mr. Fox and the others named, and asks that they be compelled to account for all and any brokers' commissions which they are said to have received in the issuance of Fox stock. Also they want Mr. Fox to account for all of his various transactions in connection with his activities of the corporation's stock. A judgment for $1,150,000 is asked against the former Fox president, with interest from April, 1929. This is said to be an outgrowth of his action in giving the corporation a note for that amount, representing the balance of the purchasing price of 100,000 shares of corporation stock at $25 a share, he having paid $1,250,000 down and after that he is said to have induced the corporation to enter into a "pretended agreement" with him whereby the corporation was to relieve him from his obligation under the note.

Additional Appropriation Voted

The plaintiffs also ask that Mr. Fox be compelled to account for any and all profits and gains realized by him by reason of any and all monies or other property belonging now to the plaintiff and said to have been appropriated by Mr. Fox and for any and all losses suffered by him by reason of any and other acts of malfeasance or mismanagement committed by him.

Simultaneous with the filing on Tuesday of the action against Mr. Fox, Senator Norbeck (Rep. S. D.), chairman of the Senate's stock committee, appeared before the upper house to urge an additional appropriation for the committee. The resolution was passed without a dissenting vote after Senator Norbeck declared:

"There were 25,000,000 people caught in the stock market debacle, with a loss to the public of $15,000,000,000. Against that, Teapot Dome looks like a small affair.

"The trouble is, so many officials have betrayed their own stockholders that it is difficult to cover all the ground needed.

"Take the Fox film company case. The evidence shows that William Fox speculated on his own account with the firm's stock. When the market shrunk he had his losses deducted. Yet these losses were charged to him on his income tax return. A half million in taxes probably could be recovered from Fox. I understand he is still worth $15,000,000 to $20,000,000."

William Fox Must Testify in Senate Stock Trading Quiz

William Fox, formerly president of the Fox corporations, on Monday failed to convince the Senate committee which is investigating stock trading practices that he is physically unable to appear before it and testify concerning stock manipulations which it was charged he engaged in during 1928, while in control of Fox. Mr. Fox sought release from a Senate subpena.

The Fox stock case has been practically completed by the committee. Two witnesses at recent hearings were Bradford Ellsworth, an independent stock operator, and P. J. Higgins, a partner of M. J. Meehan & Company. Mr. Ellsworth testified with respect to a pool which he managed between August 29 and October 7, 1928. The pool was in Fox Theatre stock and was obtained on an option for 125,000 shares from Mr. Fox. It was said the participants were Mr. Fox, to the extent of 26%; J. H. Higgins, 18½%, and Earl Rodney, 18½%. Profits were listed at $433,308. The stock was alleged to be owned by Fox Film, but is said to have been treated by Mr. Fox as his own.

Mr. Ellsworth told the committee that the payment of $24,915 which was made to him was used for publicity purposes designed to put the stock properly before the public. William Gray, counsel and special investigator for the committee developed that on Jan. 17, 1929, the pool was short 466,310 shares. Mr. Ellsworth said this stock was sold against the six months option of 500,000 shares which Mr. Fox had obtained.

Walter Best, an employee of M. J. Meehan, testified with respect to an alleged syndicate account to which J. G. Leo loaned 125,000 shares of Fox Theatre stock. For this stock $4,300,000 was received by Mr. Leo.

Counsel Gray sought to develop that this stock loaned by Mr. Leo, a brother-in-law of Mr. Fox, was actually owned by Fox Film and that the $4,300,000 was on the account of Fox Film Corporation, as a cash payment from the sale of the stock.

Counsel Gray also charged that pool operations in Fox profited by $1,937,000. He told the committee that John J. Raskob, Walter P. Chrysler, Mrs. Elizabeth Meehan, Joseph E. Higgins and Mr. Ellsworth participated. Fox's operations are also said to have extended to Loew's, Inc.

It was charged by Mr. Gray that Mr. Fox had listed personal losses in his New York state income tax returns, which losses he is alleged to have had the Fox companies take up. As attorney for the Senate's Banking and Currency Committee, Mr. Gray charges Mr. Fox with mismanagement of Fox Film and making false returns on his 1929 income tax statement by a reputed loss of $3,300,000.

Mr. Gray also told the committee that Mr. Fox's daughter, Mrs. Caroline Leah Taussig, received $441,000 as a share of the brokerage commission in the issuance of Fox stock in 1925, although her name was not signed to a contract providing, it was alleged, for division of the commissions He charged further that Mr. Fox's trading accounts had been traced through 22 brokerage offices, being found in his own name and the names of various relatives, associates and brokers. He said Mr. Fox admitted that he bought and sold stocks under the name of Nathaniel King through the brokerage firm of Eisel & King.

KAO and General Theatres Stock Off N. Y. Exchange

Stock certificates of Keith-Albee-Orpheum and General Theatres Equipment Corporation have been stricken from the New York Stock Exchange List during the past week.

Acquisition of most of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum stock by RKO in 1928 took most of the stock of the former from the open market. No transaction in the stock has taken place in nearly two years. Removal of the transfer agent of General Theatres Equipment Corp. from New York to Chicago resulted in the voting trust certificates of the corporation being stricken from the listing, as the Exchange's rules require maintenance of a New York transfer office.

The Exchange announced this week that RKO's permanent certificates for common stock of no par value had been admitted to the list and the temporary certificates, in consequence, would be stricken off June 27.

THE CAMERA REPORTS

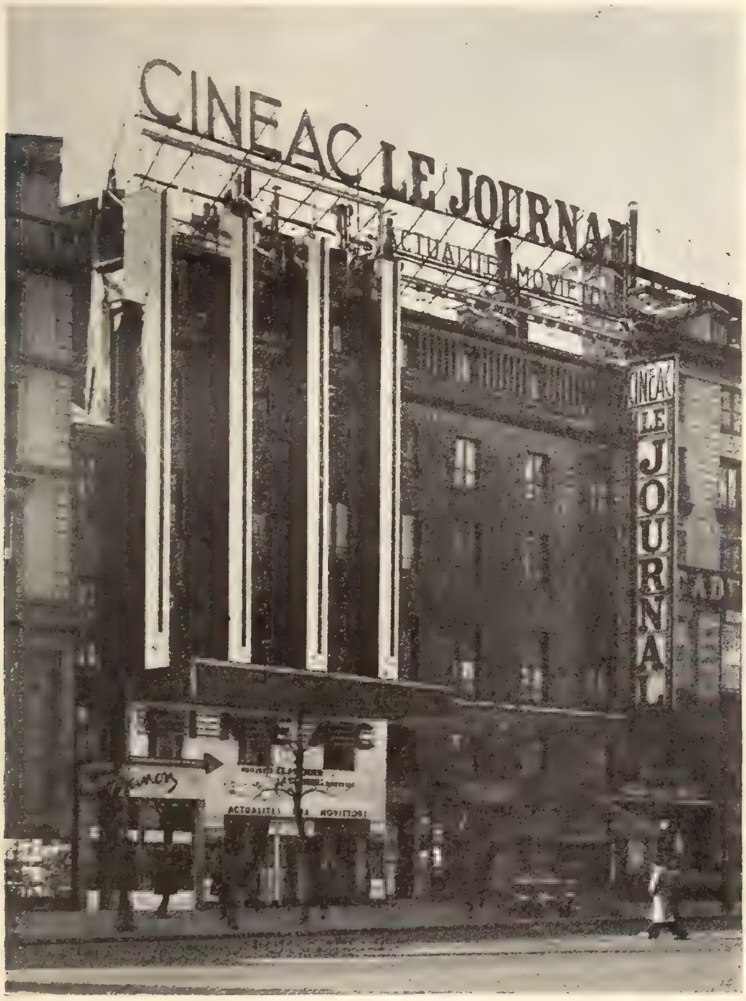
MIXING BUSINESS WITH PLEASURE. Members and guests of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, at the banquet held in connection with the annual convention of the association in Milwaukee. The convention re-elected Fred S. Meyer of Milwaukee, president. Other officers are A. C. Gutenberg, Ernest Langemack and W. L. Ainsworth. (Story on Page 10.)



FIRST PARISIAN NEWSREEL THEATRE. The Boulevard les Italians in the French capital, showing the new theatre devoted exclusively to sound newsreels, operated by Actualities Fox Movietone in conjunction with Le Journal.

A SMASH HIT. An achievement of the high-speed camera, catching a screen star without time to pose. Richard Barthelmess, First National star, is shown on (momentarily off) the tennis court at his home.

TURNING THE TABLES. Humans having investigated simians, this monk does a little probing for himself, with Douglas Fairbanks as the subject, in the presence of Edward Sutherland, Fairbanks' director; "Baby" Peggy (remember?), and her father and mother, Marion and Jack Montgomery.

ASSIGNED. (Below) Marion Shockley, Educational commedienne, who has been signed for a principal part in the Torchy series.

DOUBLING UP. (Left) Lowell Sherman, who will appear in the cast of, as well as direct, World Wide's "False Faces," by Jubec Glasmon.

BACK AT HER OWN POOL. Dolores Del Rio, who has been spending some time in the more exotically aquatic South Seas, as star of RKO Radio's "The Bird of Paradise," ready for a swim in her own backyard.

ON LOCATION. Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, with Lewis Milestone, who is directing the U. A. production, "Rain," on the wharf at Catalina Island Isthmus, where the production company was on location.

IN SHOCKER. (Below) Lilian Bond, titian-haired beauty, who has an important part in Universal's weird drama, "The Old Dark House," just completed.

RETAINED (Right) Rochelle Hudson, ingenue in RKO Radio productions, whose contract was continued when the company took up its option on her services.

DRAMATIZING BRIDGE. Ely Culbertson, one who did much to dramatize it, signing an RKO Radio contract while Lee Marcus and Ned E. Depinet, vice-presidents of RKO Radio, represent the producer.

LULL BEFORE THE STORM. All quiet while the cameraman tunes up his apparatus for the next shot of Universal's "Back Street." Waiting are John M. Stahl, the director, and Irene Dunne, who has the feminine lead.

Auten, Wild Form Company

Harold Auten and John Wild have formed Auten & Wild, Inc., to specialize in the marketing of American product abroad. Wild, vice-president, will leave shortly to open a London office, while Auten, president of the company, will remain in New York. Frank Gunn is secretary of the organization.

Prosperity to Market Eight

Eight pictures, to be sold as the "Prosperity 8," will be marketed by the newly established Prosperity Pictures Corporation. M. Kandel is president; J. H. Hoffberg, vice-president and export manager; H. Landres, secretary; Jack Lustberg, treasurer and general sales manager. The firm will produce in Hollywood.

Cities Being Chosen By U. A. to Start "Lichtman Plan"

Cities are now being selected by United Artists for the official inauguration of the company's recently outlined "class theatre" plan of distribution, known as the Lichtman plan after Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution. Exclusive deals are now being made with first-run theatres in various sections of the country in order to demonstrate, according to the company, that the plan is feasible.

Under the plan, as described at length in the HERALD some weeks ago, and widely commented on by the industry in the pages of this publication, the theatres will be divided into Class A and Class B houses. The former will receive only the "best" pictures at advanced prices, while the latter will be allowed to play all the other available pictures at lower admissions.

Lichtman states that tryouts will be made wherever conditions warrant it, but in each instance, he adds, "things will move slowly so that the tryouts will be thorough ones."

Agreement by Attorneys Will Keep Roxy Open Temporarily

Harry G. Kosch, equity receiver for the Roxy theatre in New York, issued a statement on Wednesday which indicated that the Roxy would remain open, at least temporarily. The statement followed conferences earlier in the day and a hearing before Judge Francis G. Caffey, in United States district court. Mr. Kosch and R. A. Newman, attorney representing the Continental Bank & Trust Company, trustee of the first mortgage bond of the theatre, reached an agreement after the hearing.

The conference took place after the court had refused to appoint a foreclosure receiver unless the application was made by the bank. Mr. Newman refused to do so and the court announced it would close the house and throw it into bankruptcy unless an agreement was reached. The arrangement, which followed, was to have been submitted to the court for approval on Thursday. Mr. Kosch, in his statement, said the theatre had booked a film and stage attraction for the program opening on Friday.

Movietonews Board Re-elects Harley Clarke; Drops Fox Name

Harley L. Clarke was re-elected president of Movietonews, Inc., at a meeting of the board of directors held last week. Other officers, all re-elected, are: W. C. Michel, executive vice-president; Truman H. Talley, vice-president and general manager; C. E. Richardson, treasurer; H. G. Fahlbusch, secretary.

The board revised the corporation name to read Movietonews, Inc., instead of Fox Movietonews, Inc., as it had been previously.

Q.R.S. DeVry Company Bankrupt

The Q. R. S. DeVry Corporation has filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy in Chicago federal court. Creditors include the Central Pattern & Foundry Company.

Circuits Passing Tax On to Public

The 10 per cent tax on theatre admissions in excess of 40 cents went into effect on Tuesday of this week throughout the United States, and will remain effective until June 30, 1934.

In general the major circuits, including Warner, Loew, Publix, RKO and Skouras, have instituted arrangements whereby the tax will be passed on to the public in the form of higher admission to the amount of the tax plus the regular admission. This policy was decided on the basis of the contention that the tax was designed to be absorbed by the public originally and the fact that the industry is in no condition to stand the burden of the levy. In a comparatively few cases over the country, admissions were cut to an extent necessary to avoid payment of the tax. Loew has cut prices at the Midland in Kansas City with top admission set at 40 cents.

Estimates indicate that approximately 400 houses, or five per cent of the total theatres generally considered in operation today, carry admission scales which fall within the tax range. Approximately $7,000,000 is expected to be returned in revenue in the course of the next year.

Following is a tabulation indicating how admissions will be affected by the tax:

| ADMISSION | TAX | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|
| .40 (or under) | None | — |
| .45 | .05 | .50 |
| .50 | .05 | .55 |
| .55 | .06 | .61 |
| .60 | .06 | .66 |
| .65 | .07 | .72 |
| .70 | .07 | .77 |
| .75 | .08 | .83 |
| .80 | .08 | .88 |
| .85 | .09 | .94 |
| .90 | .09 | .99 |
| .95 | .10 | 1.05 |
| 1.00 | .10 | 1.10 |

According to the instructions of the Internal Revenue Department every admission ticket, even though it is sold for less than 41 cents, must have printed upon it the admission price and the name of the vendor. This requirement applies to every admission ticket or card sold, without regard to the price for which it is sold, i.e., more or less than 41 cents. If the ticket is taxable (price above 41 cents), it must have printed upon it, in addition to the price, the amount of the tax and the total paid admission (ticket cost plus tax). It must also bear the name of the theatre for which it was sold. Also, admission prices, whether above or below the taxable brackets must be plainly posted at the box office, and when they include tax the ticket price and the tax amount and the total of both must be posted separately.

Before exhibitors start paying their admission taxes, they are instructed to go to the office of their collector of internal revenue and there obtain Certificate 752; which requires exhibitors to give their name, names and addresses of theatres, etc. After filing this, they will be given a Certificate of Registry, which certificate must be posted conspicuously in the theatre. This provision is for theatres paying taxes only. Exhibitors have until the last day of the following month in which to file their reports and pay the tax for the preceding month.

The air mail, used rather extensively by film companies in the shipping of prints and negatives, has been subjected to an increase. Effective July 6, the rates will increase from five cents to eight cents on the first ounce, and to 13 cents for each additional ounce after the first.

Additional Reports

As reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week, less than 250 houses in 34 key cities are affected by the admission tax which became effective this week. That the tax will be passed on to the public was decided by executives of five leading circuits in New York. A complete digest of the situation throughout the nation was presented in last week's issue of the HERALD, which is followed this week by additional reports from California, Washington, Texas and Pennsylvania.

Californians Await Instructions

Managers in Los Angeles and Hollywood appear to be awaiting instructions from home offices regarding changes in prices. There are over 170 houses in Los Angeles. One (The Chinese) will pay tax all day. Seven houses will pay the evening tax, all seats. Three will have a few choice seats taxable.

A survey of the 343 houses in northern and central California served by San Francisco exchanges shows much less than 10 per cent are materially affected by the new tax. A revision discloses that only seven in San Francisco are subject to the tax, two in Oakland, Berkeley seven and Alameda three.

Two Affected in Dallas

DALLAS—Two theatres in Dallas, the Publix Palace and RKO Majestic, are affected by the tax.

Philadelphia Patrons Exempted

PHILADELPHIA—Patrons in Philadelphia will be virtually exempted from the tax, by a revision of admission prices. At the larger central city theatres the present 75-cent admission will be maintained, with the managements absorbing the tax. Reducing prices are at the Earle, Stanley, Stanton, Fox, State, Uptown, Orpheum. The Mastbaum Theatre will be closed for the summer.

Out of approximately 40 picture houses in the Seattle field, only four are affected, the Fox and Fox Fifth Avenue, RKO's Orpheum and John Hamrick's independent Music Box.

THE STAGE—FROM CAMERA EYE

The Best and the Not-So-Good of Broadway's Footlights Are Discussed in Critic's Tenth Article

By BENJAMIN DeCASSERES

CHRISTOPHER COMES ACROSS

Hawthorne Hurst, who wrote this farce-comedy concerning Christopher Columbus, the ancestor of the Volstead law, the income-tax blank and Theodore Dreiser, has put into the three acts very little brains, a great deal of horseplay, some amusing situations and enough necking, lounge-loafing and horizontal tom-catting to saturate about seven reels of film. With Alfred Lunt doing Christopher, Lynne Fontanne doing Queen Isabella, and Roland Young doing King Ferdinand, it would skim kite-high.

There is, indeed, a romping, roaring, delightfully loud and lewd picture here, something of which we need more and more to bust the Moralic Hindenburg Line and keep us laughing. Yes, keep us laughing!—sex-laughing.

Columbus, in this play, comes to bum it out at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. His little racket is that the Earth is round and that by sailing due west he can muscle in on Indies' riches for Ferd and Issy. While trying to sell this idea with some high-power salesmanship he fills up his spare moments by chasing the women of the palace—or, rather, they chase him, right into his bedroom.

There is Isabella herself, who makes the boldest love to Chris ever seen on our spavined stage. And it was done beautifully by the blond and lovely Patricia Calvert. Finally all libido-lit, she rips off her jewels to send him to the Indies. Other women trying to vamp this "great explorer" (sic) are Beatriz (Fania Marinoff) and Dolores de Arana (Betty Laurence). Chris is really in love with the little Moorish girl Zita (played charmingly and exquisitely by Gilda Oakleaf). Now, the King (Walter Kingsford) is in love with her also. Chris knows this, and threatens to expose him to the Queen. So the King, using Isabella's jewels, sends Columbus west. Zita is in one of the bags that Chris takes with him on his trip to the Indies, which really ended, as you know, at the City Hall of San Salvador, where he was received by Big Chief Tinbox.

Tullio Carminati did not size up as Columbus. Ernest Lawford played the Mellon of Ferdinand's Cabinet. It is up-to-date spoofing on the worst joke ever played on Europe — the discovery of America. Brock Pemberton produced. This is fairly yelping for Lunt-Fontanne and Roland Young!

BRIDAL WISE

This is a real horse opera, and it ought to whinny and snort and hoof its way through about five thousand feet of film. As a stage play it has its open-eyed moments when chuckles and chortles are evicted from you. Unfortunately, we do not see the horses on the stage, probably because they are not stage-broken. The pictures are pure even when it comes to horses. You can always re-take in case a lady horse forgets.

It's all about the Burrough family down in Mencken's, Maryland. The framework of the drama is somewhat mouldy and bug-eaten. It concerns those ancient domestic difficulties that have been played ad nauseam in every key and combination.

What, however, makes the play click, and what is going to make it an hilarious picture, are the antics of little Pete Burroughs (played superbly by Jackie Kelkie) and his half-savage negro pal Sam (Raymond Bishop). Pete will not fit into this horsey society game. He busts up everything with fire gongs and little Sam's yells. He's a nasty kid, but the playwrights, Messrs. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, seem to be satirizing through these ten-year-old hellions the doings of the horsey set and their attendant rosettes.

Pete also succeeds in bringing his parents together again, which, for picture purposes, will suit the good little pussies who meow for a final kissing-it-out scene.

Madge Kennedy, James Rennie and Blyth Daly were all good in the grown-up parts. But Pete and Sam were the show. The picture should be built for Pete and Sam. And don't forget the horses, horses, horses!

BLUE MONDAY

Is the Provincetown Playhouse about to have the jinx on it broken?

After "Merry-Go-Round," that rousing melodrama of big-town political racketeering, which immediately moved uptown, and which was also immediately bought by Universal, Barnett Warren and Louis Bromberg broke another Easter egg in this house of historic successes and failures. Out walked what looks to me, from a picture standpoint, another "Street Scene."

As a play, "Blue Monday," by Benson Inge, is far better than "Street Scene," which as a stage production was all spray and no fountain, all front and no guts, all episode and no character. But "Blue Monday" has insides. These workers in this factory live, breathe and act directly on one another. They are not dummies. It is a simple story marching to an overwhelming climax of a double murder.

The one set, realistically conceived by Mr. Bromberg, is the single workroom of a lampshade factory. Frank, a heavy, brutal type (an Alfred Lunt or Paul Muni lead), is engaged to be married to Lucy (tough platinum), who works in the office. It's an affair of long-standing, Frank having taken the girl during her first souse with him. Working in this room, painting lamps, is Paul, the mild-mannered artist type who is married and tangled up with divorce proceedings and the future custody of his child.

Lucy has never loved Frank. She is gradually drifting to Paul, who has aroused her more refined side. A celebration is staged in the factory on the eve of the wedding, which leads to a fine second act climax, where both Frank and Lucy while quarreling to the point of murder are compelled, for appearances' sake, to clinch in a love-hug before the factory hands, who are getting soused.

In the third act Lucy, who has refused to marry Frank, tells the latter in a terrific scene that Paul has had her (this is not so). Frank, who has just come into the factory on this particularly blue Monday drunk and also disappointed because Lucy had refused to marry him, kills them both and makes his get-away through the window. It's a vital, crashing wind-up.

There are high comic reliefs in the other workers in the factory. The cast of fourteen was perfect.

As a picture, to my way of thinking, with a heavy lead and working in the vital off-stage incidents in the careers of Paul, Lucy and Frank, it will make a far finer product than either "Street Scene" or "An American Tragedy"—because it is a more sensitive and a more dramatic play than either. It's the raw guts of Life.

HIRED HUSBAND

I warn any picture concern that picks up "Hired Husband," by August L. Stern, for the great Hollywood play-cremation plant that the director will have to know more about Gramercy Park than the author of this rich and rare piece of cat's tripe, which, moreover, may make a hit because it is more absurd than anything Keystone ever did in its most staggering days. Who knows anything about Broadway? Not even Georgie Cohan.

The central character is a "Gramercy Park bench bum." As an inmate of the Gramercy Park district for many years, I'd like to know how a bum can get into Gramercy Park. There are no bench bums in this playground of the New York Vere de Veres. A bum may sit on the curb outside the park. But you can't go about picking up bums on benches in our district. Mr. Stern probably meant Union Square.

Anyhow, there's a girl who's going to get a baby. She's got to have a father. Her uncle, a famous lawyer, looks out of his Gramercy Park window, spies this "bench bum," puts him into a Browning-King, hires him to be the girl's husband for a few months till the crisis is over, and then bounces him. The girl marries her first alcoholic suitor, who is, maybe, the father of the bond salesman she has brought into the world, and the bum, who is a college guy, takes again to the Open Road or what have you around the Players' Club.

"Hired Husband" is for Walt Disney—it's a mousy idea.

Hays General of Hoover Campaign Declares Writer

Clinton W. Gilbert, staff correspondent of the New York Evening Post, finds Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., to be the general of the Hoover campaign, and The Post, in its Monday issue, presented a copyrighted dispatch from Mr. Gilbert in Washington, in the course of which he said:

Will H. Hays has staged a comeback in Republican politics and will be the power behind the throne in this year's campaign. That is what is back of the selection of Everett Sanders as chairman of the Republican National Committee. Sanders is a Hays man, brought out in Indiana politics by Hays and made a Congressman by him.

President Hoover, looking about for a successor of Senator Fess as chairman, naturally considered two ex-chairmen who had conducted sucsesful national campaigns—Will H. Hays and ex-Senator William M. Butler. Mr. Hays ran the Harding campaign and Butler the Coolidge campaign. . . .

At a conference in the White House on Sunday before the Chicago convention it was directed to make Hays's man Sanders chairman. . . .

Mr. Hays has always been a close friend of Mr. Hoover's. He was in the background of the pre-convention campaign for Mr. Hoover's nomination in 1928. He has been more or less inactive in politics since Jim Watson took the control of the Indiana organization away from him soon after he resigned the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee, June 7, 1921. Hays was then Postmaster General under Harding, a place from which he retired a few months later to become censor of morals in the movies.

This year Hays reappeared in Indiana Republican politics. He played a prominent part in the Indiana Republican State convention and was made one of the big four from Indiana at Chicago. The story back of his restoration to favor is this:

Senator Jim Watson is a candidate for re-election to the Senate this year. He has a hard fight on his hands. He cannot afford to indulge in any enmities. So he made his peace with Will Hays. This involved also peace between Watson and Sanders.

Hays has had the most brilliant reputation of any Republican national chairman since Mark Hanna. He is reputed to be a great organizer. So it was natural that the Administration should desire his services in this campaign. He will be a sort of unofficial chief of staff with Sanders as the official head of the campaign.

Williams Resigns as B.I.P. Far Eastern Representative

C. St. E. Williams, Far East representative for British International Pictures, London, has resigned. His headquarters were at Singapore. Mr. Williams' tentative plans call for operation in China, Japan and Manila, possibly handling the product of an American producer.

A TRIUMPH OF SIMPLICITY

A 30 foot python and a bengal tiger in the fiercest fight ever filmed! . . . See "Bring 'Em Back Alive" at RKO Mayfair, tomorrow.

This advertisement by RKO, running in the New York dailies in the amusement directory pages, brought for "Bring 'Em Back Alive," the RKO-Van Beuren-Frank Buck expeditionary adventure production a remarkable degree of preliminary attention. It is outstanding among the season's endeavors for its daring and capable violation of the cultbound typographical traditions which are so often called "showmanship." This is advertising which realizes to the full, at minimum cost, on the vast value of extreme, sudden, vivid contrast. Observe that this advertisement says all that is to be said plainly, and then immediately stops saying. It uses one adjective. That adjective is supported by the picture. The principle is excellent.—TERRY RAMSAYE.

THREAT TO SHUT OFF FILMS IS NOT ENOUGH

Judge, in Ruling Against Nick Paper, Holds That Exhibitor Cannot Be Harmed by Mere Threat to Refuse Product

An exhibitor cannot be hurt by the mere threat of distributors to cease providing films under contract, Federal Judge T. C. Munger ruled at Lincoln, Neb., in directing a verdict for the defendant distributors in the million dollar antitrust suit of the Sun Amusement Company of Lincoln.

In nearly two weeks of testimony before a federal court jury, attorneys for the Sun company tried to prove that it was forced out of business in the early summer of 1929 through the operation of the now-invalid arbitration system.

The evidence showed that Nick Paper, president and principal stockholder of the corporation, on June 8, 1929, received notices that, because of his failure to abide by an arbitration award, he would have to put up deposits aggregating nearly $14,000 as security, or service would be suspended on his contracts. Being disinclined to pay the deposits and feeling sure that he would be cut off of films, he immediately gave up his theatre to a rival local company. Under the court's ruling he was not legally entitled to believe the threat and could not claim that he was forced out of business.

Another point cited in the Sun case was that Mr. Paper signed most of the contracts in his own name, instead of with the name of the corporation. The arbitration award was also directed against him personally. Judge Munger declared that Mr. Paper had not proved that the distributors considered him and the company as the same thing. Therefore, if anyone was injured by the proceedings, it was Mr. Paper and not the company.

The directed verdict came immediately after the end of the plaintiff's testimony. Had the distributors been forced to continue the trial, they were prepared to show that months before June 8, 1929, Mr. Paper already had made contracts for the pooling of his Sun and Capitol theatres with two others owned by the Lincoln Theatre corporation, a Publix affiliate. The distributors claim that the Sun Amusement Company was preparing to go out of business regardless of the arbitration proceedings.

Mr. Paper is planning to appeal the case or ask a new trial. He has a similar suit pending, involving the same set of facts, for the Capitol Operating Company, which owned the Capitol Theatre.

Among the interesting matters brought out in the trial was that the Sun, a 500-seat second-run silent house, netted more than $20,000 a year from 1922 to 1929.

COHEN HEADS STUDIOS AS SCHULBERG RETIRES

Emanuel Cohen New Paramount Director of Production and Takes Title of Vice-President Formerly Held by Lasky

Close on the heels of the recent arrangement which brought about the temporary retirement of Jesse Lasky, former vice president of Paramount in charge of production, B. P. Schulberg, long managing director of Coast production, last week concluded an agreement with the company whereby he retires from that post and as a director of the corporation, effective immediately.

Emanuel Cohen, who has been exercising supervision over the studio since the recent sales convention in Los Angeles, apparently has officially assumed the duties of Mr. Schulberg and the title of Mr. Lasky, since after much speculation, his name accompanied by the title of vice president in charge of production, appeared late in the week on Paramount publicity matter. Paramount, however, has officially named no successor to Mr. Schulberg.

Mr. Lasky has been staying at Santa Monica, Calif., since his retirement on April 25. His leave of absence is scheduled to end on July 25, when he is supposed to report back at the studio for duty. What capacity he will assume in the event he does return has not been disclosed. Reports that his contract, which expires December 31, 1934, has been settled, have been denied by Mr. Lasky. He stated: "No settlement has been discussed or arranged and I am still under contract."

Mr. Schulberg, who conveyed the accuracy of the statement of his retirement with the words, "I am a free soul," has a contract with Paramount for seven years which was to have expired on January 1, 1933. In New York, just prior to his departure for the Coast on Saturday, Mr. Schulberg said "the company was very fair," in answer to questions concerning the settlement of his contract. It is understood accumulations totaling $400,000 was due him to cover the unexpired portion of his contract and a $1,500 salary cut which he took some while ago with the proviso that he would be reimbursed either when his old contract ran out or a new one was made.

Mr. Schulberg said that his retirement had been discussed with Sam Katz, who has assumed recently a consistently more active part in production affairs, in addition to his post as head of the theatre department, before Mr. Schulberg left the Coast for New York two weeks ago. He said, however, that they had not agreed upon the retirement at that time. "When I left the Coast, I left for the purpose of thinking it all over," Mr. Schulberg said.

En route to the Coast, Mr. Schulberg on Monday of this week was questioned at Kansas City concerning reports that he, Mr. Lasky and William Fox were planning to form a new producing company. Noncommittal, Mr. Schulberg smilingly replied, "I don't know anything about it." He declared his immediate plans for the future are uncertain, and characterized Mr. Katz and Mr. Cohen as "excellent men. I have nothing but kind words for them. I think their entrance into production is a good thing." He expects to return to New York about September 1. "I have no plans, but if something develops next week I will jump back into harness," he said.

Mass production and the subservience of the production department to the theatre department, were noted by Mr. Schulberg in Kansas City as two of the chief causes of the production ills of the moment. He declared unit production is not the answer, "as that is still mass production." He also indicated that he looks for no radical changes in the present production system.

"This is not the healthiest of conditions," Mr. Schulberg said in further amplifying his idea on the subservience of production to theatres. "Theatre executives base production on past grosses. They have an idea that if a certain picture clicks, a similar picture will succeed. This is a mistake. Successful production depends on novelty, not past performance. Production must look forward, not backward. Theatre men see production from their own viewpoint, and if properly balanced, that will prove beneficial. It should not dominate, however."

Mr. Schulberg's name has also been currently linked with that of Joseph P. Kennedy, but the former Paramount executive has denied any such discussion.

Sheehan Appoints Johnson Story Head at Fox Studio

Winfield R. Sheehan, returned to the Fox Coast studio in charge of production has appointed Julian Johnson head of the story department, effective immediately. Robert M. Yost will continue in charge of operation of the department.

Mr. Johnson was connected with the Paramount studio in a production capacity for 12 years, was the first editor of Photoplay Magazine and at one time was associate editor-in-chief of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Spearman Takes Over P. D. C. Of Pathe International Firm

H. E. J. Spearman has taken over the P. D. C. Company of Paris from Pathe International. Mr. Spearman will complete the business of the company in Europe, and plans the expansion of the organization with outside product.

Will Hays on Coast

Will Hays last week left the Republican Convention in Chicago, which he attended as a delegate from Indiana, for the Coast on his regular summer visit. He presided over the semi-annual meeting of the Motion Picture Producers Association on Wednesday.

Princess Accuses Producers of Fear To Try New Ideas

Declaring that motion picture producers have too much fear of attempting the new in production, Princess Alexandra Kropotkin, Russian magazine writer and lecturer, told the weekly forum of the New York Motion Picture Club Tuesday that methods of minimizing the financial risk of undertaking such ventures have already been discovered and that additional methods should not be difficult to devise.

Princess Kropotkin detailed a plan employed by the Moscow Art theatre, by which novel productions are first given on the stage of an experimental theatre in an inexpensive manner, in order to determine their worth as production material. She suggested that the Russian theatre plan, or a variation of it, might be utilized to good advantage by American producers.

"Innovations in the development of screen material are very much needed," she said. "The creative part of the motion picture industry can use greater courage and originality in the selection and production of new screen material. At present, they show too much fear of attempting things that have not been done before."

"I realize," she continued, "that financial considerations frequently make experimentation of this kind very difficult, but there are ways in which producers can determine the acceptability to the public of new themes and treatment before original scripts are accepted for production. The Moscow Art Theatre has for long engaged in experimental production work of this kind."

Princess Kropotkin urged that American studios foster a similar experimental theatre. She remarked that, in her opinion, no art has progressed so rapidly as that of the motion picture and that, because its tools are now so near to being perfected, motion picture production has arrived at its "most interesting moment."

Frank Hawks, American aviator and holder of all three trans-continental flight records, was the second guest speaker. He described various flying experiences and the comparative practical value of land and air speed trials.

With this week's forum, the Motion Picture Club discontinues its weekly luncheon meetings until September. Evening meetings, however, will be scheduled throughout July and August, and will be featured by the presence of well-known guest speakers and entertainers, Lee Ochs, president, announced.

Horsley, Pioneer in Industry, Is a Candidate for Congress

David Horsley, a pioneer in the motion picture industry, is a candidate for Congress from the fifteenth Congressional district of California, which includes Hollywood.

Invincible to Offer 36

Arthur Greenblatt and Dave Rosengarten last week formed Invincible Pictures, and will operate independently in the New York metropolitan area with 36 features.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

UNDER the caption, "What Do They Want?" Hal Hall, writing currently in the Western cameramen's magazine, exposes a pet folly of the Hollywood colony. Mr. Hall said:

> "One of the things that is most difficult to understand in this queer picture racket is the matter of new talent. Every one in Hollywood knows that there are literally thousands of individuals out here who have good looks, personality, ability—but who are just extras with perhaps an average of two days' work per week throughout the year. Starvation wages at best. Producers, film executives—all send out the cry for all film hopefuls to stay away from Hollywood. Right.
> "But—in the same breath these same people broadcast the news that they are sending men to the far places of the earth in a search for new talent, new faces, etc. Figure it out for yourself, if you can. It has this writer stumped. "Anyway—take a tip from us—don't head towards Hollywood these days expecting to crash the studio gates in any line. If you have any kind of a job back in the home town, hang on to it."

On the very next day we picked up a copy of HOLLYWOOD HERALD and discovered this:

> WANT NEW FACES—Returning from a hunt for talent in New York, Casting Director Rufus Le Maire of Warner-First National declared that never has there been a time in motion picture history when new faces have been in such great demand as at present. . . .

Ed McNamee, of National Screen Service, wrote President Hoover at Washington last week offering a solution to "the prolonged depression and suffering derived from it." It was a lengthy missive and we regret that space limitations prevent its publication, but basically it dealt with "modification" and had something to do with "real beer" and "brewers," etc., which should give you a general idea as to its contents. We have an uncontrollable suspicion that Pat Garyn, sales chief of National Screen, had a hand in it also.

And while we are on this general subject, an account of Ed Hurley's recent limited association with the League for the Modification of the Volstead Act might be in order.

It appears that Ed, press agent de luxe, was elected national public relations counsel of the League—on one condition. However, soon after the appointment, George Peck, "states organizer" for the League, issued the following statement:

> "Please be advised that effective as of today's date, Mr. Ed F. Hurley has resigned as Public Relations Counsel of this organization and is no longer connected with this League in any capacity whatsoever."

NEGRO SUPERSTITION AND PREACHERS HIT B.O.

To the deep-voiced incantations of the preachers of the colored flocks of Baltimore is attributed the failure on the part of local theatres to show box office gains as a result of the recent liberal Sunday ordinance, permitting film houses to open on the Sabbath. This despite the fact that there is no definite effort on foot to cut Sunday attendance. Theatres catering to colored folk have apparently suffered most severely. One manager noted his Sunday expense at $100, his intake of a recent Sunday at $16. Supporting the preacher idea, are indications that the clerics are playing upon the natural and ready superstition of the Negro, to the decided detriment of theatre patronage.

CECIL BLOUNT DE MILLE'S newly occupied office at the Paramount studio in Hollywood overlooks the roof of the old Lasky Barn, from which he shipped his first picture almost 20 years ago. He is said to have gotten a lot of inspiration looking at that old barn. And in this connection, Arch Reeve, of the studio forces, believes that "the reunion of Paramount and DeMille is a good omen. De Mille days with Paramount," he said, "were the days of his greatest achievement, and there's no doubt that one of Paramount's most glorious chapters was written in those days."

De Mille wishes it to be thoroughly understood that "The Sign of the Cross" is not essentially a religious picture. He describes it as "a modern love story with a background of imperial Rome."

In connection with the forthcoming celebration of Independence Day on July 4, managers of all Publix theatres have been warned by the home office that "under no conditions" are they permitted to "be directly or indirectly connected with the use or display of fireworks" in the operation of their theatre or for publicity purposes.

THE NATURE of the preferences of fans changes rapidly in the National Movie Poll, a current activity of the MPPDA. This week, "civilized man, like his savage brother, thrills at the call of the jungle—except that modern man prefers his wild life, adventure and exploration of the screen." A publicity yarn anent the progress of the poll says so. Last week the question was: "To weep or not to weep."

Furthermore, we are told that the current preponderance of votes for film stories of the wild and woolly is because "the vicarious thrill of visiting strange places and facing unknown dangers in every part of the world holds an enchantment for every type of movie fan, it would seem." However, women continue to cast their ballots for fireside dramas of love and marriage, it is said.

Only one vote, of the thousands cast in the poll, is registered specifically against exploration films. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, an explorer of no mean repute and admittedly a "traveling man," admits that he much prefers the real thing in exploration to its pictorial representation.

Hollywood is "all right" to Walton Hall Smith, novelist and M-G-M writer, who recently returned to Kansas City to take unto himself a bride. In the course of an interview on his work at the studios he said this:

"The producers know what they want. It's just like any other business—selling motor cars or perfumes. The executives can't afford to manufacture something the public will not buy. There's a lot of common sense in Hollywood, hard work and a great deal of figuring. The main topic of conversation is money. Any one who goes out there with a totally artistic point of view, a kind of Keats or Shelley complex, can't grasp Hollywood.

"I found that my work is not writing in the creative sense—it is simply the carpentry of words."

EDUCATIONAL PLEDGED TO COMPLETE PROGRAM

Will Deliver Entire Feature and Short Subject Schedule, Brandt Tells First of Three Sectional Sales Meetings

The official selling season of Educational-Tiffany-World Wide was launched this week when the company opened the first of a series of three territorial sales conferences, at the St. Moritz hotel in New York, presided over by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, and Joe Brandt, newly elected president of World Wide. The session was concluded Tuesday afternoon and executives then departed for Chicago where the Midwest forces gathered for two days starting Thursday. A conference in Los Angeles for the West Coast division will follow.

At the initial sessions in New York on Monday, home office executives and salesmen were told by Mr. Hammons that Educational, producing short subjects exclusively, and World Wide, concentrating on features, will continue as separate entities, although both will continue to distribute through a single exchange system.

Producers Paul Terry, Frank Moser, Bill Saal and Larry Kent addressed the New York gathering, also Mr. Brandt, Joe Goldberg, general sales manager of World Wide; Reinald Werrenrath, who will star in a series of shorts; Al Mannon, who makes Educational's football subjects; A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager of Educational; Gordon White, in charge of advertising and publicity, and J. H. Skirball, Educational's sales manager.

Brandt guaranteed "absolutely" that the company would deliver the entire feature and short subject schedule already announced. He told the delegates that "no picture was ever made, or will ever be made that hasn't some redeeming feature on which a real showman can't capitalize." He said that the current situation in Hollywood, whereby the colony has in its midst countless free lance players with "big names," assures the company of more important name value in its product next season. Players will be signed on a picture-to-picture basis.

"In view of present conditions," he said, "the story is more than ever the thing."

Mr. Brandt was followed by Mr. Hammons who discussed the short subject product at length.

"While other companies are concerning themselves with the business of cutting down, Educational and World Wide are concentrating their efforts on building up," said Mr. Hammons. "This applies not only to the manpower we have added to our organization, but to the names we have lined up in our player, writer and producer rosters."

Inauguration of a new system of exploitation backing on each picture was announced by Gordon White.

Production details and titles of the 29 features and 166 short subjects to be distributed next season by Educational-Tiffany-World Wide were recorded in full in Motion Picture Herald last week. World Wide Pictures, Inc., will distribute 21 features and eight westerns. Educational promises 64 two-reelers and 102 singles. Two new series of shorts were added to the list this week, including six "Camera Adventures" to be produced by Pat Dowling and Hobart Brownell, and 13 Bray "Naturagraphs." With the arrival of E. H. Allen, studio chief, in Hollywood from a vacation abroad, work on the company's new production schedule has already begun.

Aylesworth Sees Theatre Revival

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of RKO and the National Broadcasting Company, speaking in San Francisco this week, expressed the belief that radio entertainment, despite its apparent conflict with the theatre, ultimately will revive the theatre business.

The remarks were noted as in contrast to the rather pessimistic tone conveyed by Mr. Aylesworth on June 13 in an address before the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. In the speech this week, the executive cited a growing spirit of mutual cooperation between radio broadcasting companies, the theatres and studios as the basis for his conclusion that theatre patronage is due to increase considerably. A reduction in the number of theatres and better quality pictures will also be instrumental in the increase, Mr. Aylesworth said.

"Theatre attendance today is just 60 per cent of what it was in 1928," Mr. Aylesworth said. "Managers must realize that the quality of entertainment will have to be improved. Local management must be given more responsibility regarding the kind of entertainment to be given the local public. We must have good shows. We must have cooperation. If managers are not alive to changed conditions and do not adapt themselves to the present day demands, someone else will do it for them from the outside."

Mr. Aylesworth returned to New York on Tuesday.

22 U.S. Negroes Sail to Moscow To Make Soviet "Type" Film

A group of 22 American Negroes sailed last week for Moscow, where, during the next five months, they will be employed in the production of a motion picture intended to interpret the historical development of the Negro in the United States from the time of the Civil War. The picture will be produced by the Meschrahpom Film Corporation, producer of the "The Diary of a Revolutionist," a current Soviet release in America.

According to the group's contract, they will pay their own way to Moscow and, while working, will receive 400 to 600 rubles a month and their passage home.

MICKEY MOUSES INTO EVERYTHING

That unmitigated and mischief making little scoundrel Mickey Mouse, like the rest of Hollywood's stars, pays no heed at all to the solemn resolution of the board of directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., to debar "artists" from permitting the use of the pictures and names for merchandise advertising.

Many a star, from the day when Mary Pickford became the girl on the Pompeian massage cream calendar down to the effulgent today, has sold, rented and loaned his name to advertisers. But it has been another of Mickey's triumphs to do it in the biggest way of all.

As we trip merrily to press today, Mickey Mouse is a brand name and decoration of:

Children's toys and novelties.
Mickey Mouse Candy.
Novelty Jewelry.
Mickey Mouse sticker tots (paper cut-outs).
Children's stationery.
Pencil boxes.
Mickey Mouse pennants, banners, caps, etc.
Birthday and greeting cards, favors, bridge sets, etc.
Children's and misses' purses and pocketbooks.
Baby silverware, caps, pushers, feeding plates, etc.
Cartoon strip.
Bath, sets, hot water bottles, tooth brushes, celluloid and rubber novelties, bathroom accessories and baby gifts.
Mickey Mouse illustrated story books.
Flicker books.
Boys' ties and neckwear.
Knitted underwear and nightwear.
Infants' and children's bags of the snuggle rug or bunting types, and crib covers.
Mickey Mouse paint books.
Chinaware, pottery and earthenware items.
Boys' belts.
Door stops.
Boys, blouses, pajamas, children's play dresses, etc.
Art needlework and novelties.
Mickey Mouse handkerchiefs.
Mickey Mouse masquerade costumes, masks, etc.

To be sure, there's an "out" for Mickey. The Producers' clause reads that "Whereas, in many instances the nature of such advertising is undignified . . ."

To which may be added—Whereas, Mickey never did have much dignity, anyway.

Loew Closes Five Cleveland Theatres Throughout Summer

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., through its divisional manager, H. M. Addison, announces that five of its 10 Cleveland houses will close this week for the summer. They are the State, Circle, Alhambra, Doan and Liberty. The Allen and Stillman, both first-run downtown houses, the Park and Granada, first-run neighborhood houses, and the Mall, a downtown subsequent-run house, will remain open.

It is understood a shortage of first-run features for the first-run Loew houses was a leading factor in determining upon the closing.

SUNNY SKIES PROVIDE ADDED ZEST TO "FILM DAILY'S" GOLF TOURNEY

Awards Are Presented at Dinner Following Day of Fun at Twentieth Tournament; List of the Winners of Trophies

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The twentieth Film Daily golf tournament, held on Wednesday, June 22, was voted a success by the representatives of the film industry in the East who joined in the sport and funfest, culminating in the dinner at which the winners were announced and trophies awarded.

For one thing, the weatherman decided that he had tampered long enough with the series of tournaments.

The Fenimore Club, at White Plains, N. Y., was again the center of activities. It was the eighth year of the event.

On the committee were Al Lichtman, again master of ceremonies; Lee A. Ochs, Bruce Gallup, Jack Alicoate, Ed Finney, "Red" Kann and Don Mersereau.

Following is the list of winners, and the trophies and prizes awarded them at the dinner which followed the close of play:

Low net—Stebbins, Leterman & Gates trophy—and also a leg on Film Daily Cup (which must be won three times to be retained permanently):
Arthur Pelterson.
Low net runner up—Monogram Pictures trophy:
Edward L. Hyman. Runner-up, Chester Sawyer.
Low gross—Quigley Publications trophy:
Mitchell H. May, Jr.
Low gross runner up—Tiffany Productions trophy:
Ted Curtiss. Runner-up, Tom Gerety.
Low net morning round—Amkino Vase:
George Hirlaman.
Low gross morning round—Amkino Tea Set:
John M. Derwin.
Low gross exhibitor score—ERPI trophy:
Low net exhibitor score—RCA Photophone trophy:
Lee A. Ochs.
Birdies prize—Eastman Kodak trophy:
Arthur S. Dickinson.
Winning of putting contest—Consolidated Film Industries trophy:

LOFTED OUT OF THE ROUGH

John Wilde Alicoate, sponsor of the Tournament, agreed to take $10 in cash for each entry—or a $30 check.

Harry Warner, Ed Curtis and Al Lichtman were seen talking over that marvelous shot made by Curtiss on the putting green.

Harry Thomas didn't play, attending solely to the business of giving exhibitors an insight into First Division's new "thrillers," "supers," etc.

Pat Garyn missed the morning run. It happened this way: One of the exhibitors participating collared Pat at the entrance to the clubhouse and launched a discussion of trailers and rental. Pat caught up with the tournament about 3.17 p. m.

Paul Greenhalgh is a George Washington golfer. He broke down after a barrage of questions and admitted that he made a beautiful 98 on the morning run—of 9 holes. He played alone—there's a reason.

Ray Morrissey walked 3,500 yards away and 3,700 yards backward to replace the divot. There really should be a prize for divots. Fred Rothenberg sunk his divot on the 4th hole. He missed the ball.

Sam Sax was seen swinging two clubs simultaneously. Even that didn't help!

Ed Hyman of the Century circuit, asked for an afternoon foursome for blind men and cripples. Jim Milligan miffed being first—again.

Jim Cron and Walter Eberhardt, who live practically around the corner, were seen at the clubhouse as early at 7.12 a. m., waiting for Committee Members Jack Hammond, Winfield Andrus and Charlie and Jack Alicoate to let them into the clubhouse.

George Morris was on hand to see that members of the Motion Picture Club took up their share of the green. George was not disappointed.

Country clubbers included George Borthwick, Arthur Dickinson, Major Fred Herron and Dave Palfreyman. Palfreyman was seen later with Al Selig hidden away in the woods, practicing swings preparatory to the driving contest. They lost.

Jimmy Cunningham borrowed a member's bathing suit with a life-saver's emblem on it (and he doesn't even dive!).

Radio City had to labor during the day without the aid of S. L. Rothafel.

Bert Sanford, one of Erpi's executives, swapped stories of the old days at Pathe with Sam Ost, who is now a connoisseur of insurance. Bert sold Pathe film, and Ost sold insurance to Pathe.

Pat Powers waited an hour for his man Friday to bring the clubs which he had forgotten. Finally P. A. went out without them. Powers' first drive would have been longer had he used his own ball (sez he).

Academy Group Accepts Producer Pact for One Year

At a lengthy meeting Monday between the Academy Committee on the Producers-Players contract and Irving G. Thalberg and Edwin Loeb, representing the producers, an agreement was reached under which the Academy Committee recommended to the Academy board on Wednesday night that the Academy accept the Producers Agreement as an emergency measure for a period of one year.

Mr. Thalberg is reported to have laid great stress upon the emergency character of the agreement.

Certain concessions were proposed by the producers which, Academy representatives said, made the agreement much more satisfactory to the employee group. It is understood that under the concessions players may be given the right of representation in any arbitration proceedings involving them, though Mr. Loeb probably will continue as arbitrator in matters strictly involving the producers.

It was expected that the Academy board would either endorse the Committee settlement or submit the matter to a vote of the entire membership.

The socalled Producers Agreement, signed by all members of the Motion Picture Producers Association except Columbia, is aimed principally to prevent "talent raiding," premature negotiations for talent, and secret negotiations between companies.

Objections of the Academy branches, through their committees, are said to be directed primarily against a socalled "hang-over clause" providing for notification of the former employer during a period of six months after the expiration of the contract.

RKO and Skouras Conclude Pooling Deal in New York

RKO and the Skouras Brothers have concluded a deal whereby the Manhattan theatres of the two companies will be pooled, with operation of the agreement commencing September 1.

RKO will purchase all product for Skouras theatres involved, according to the terms of the arrangement, thus eliminating Skouras as a buyer of film in competition with RKO. The two circuits will split profits of the Jefferson and Coliseum, RKO houses, and the Academy of Music and Audubon, operated by Skouras. The Skouras Park Plaza, Valentine and Crotona are expected to benefit by the deal, although no profit arrangement has been made concerning them.

Last year RKO signed a five-year Paramount franchise to split the New York product with Loew's. As a result of the pooling, all Skouras houses in Manhattan will get some Paramount product, in addition to other films RKO may purchase for local theatres.

Prosecutor Asks Flinn-Lally Pathe Fire Case Be Reopened

Judge Max Levine, of General Sessions court, New York, reserved decision this week after hearing arguments on the motion of the district attorney to resubmit to the grand jury the Pathe studio fire case, involving John C. Flinn and Henry F. Lally, in which 11 persons died in 1929.

The effort of the district attorney to resubmit the case was termed by Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., defense attorney connected with the office of Nathan Burkan, as "an indecent persecution." One grand jury refused to indict Mr. Flinn, and Mr. Lally, vice president and general manager, respectively, of Pathe at that time, and a second grand jury indictment on charges of manslaughter in the second degree was dismissed by the appellate division of the state supreme court. Mr. Burkan claims that the prosecutor has no new evidence.

Big 4 to Produce 12 Melos, 6 Thrillers And Six Westerns

Big 4 Film Corporation this week announced a program of 24 features for 1932-1933, composed of 12 melodramas, six "Wilderness Thrillers" and six westerns to be produced by Freuler Film Associates. John R. Freuler is president of Big 4 Film and National Players, Ltd.

The titles of the 12 melodramas are: "Dangerous Talent," a Raffles story; "The Fighting Gentleman," a story of the squared-circle; "Easy Millions," a confidence man story; "The Unpardonable Crime"; "Bull Dog Edition," a newspaper story; "The Black Cat," a mystery drama; "Sisters of the Follies" said to be "a frank revelation of Broadway." "My Wandering Boy," a tale of mother love; "The Penal Code"; "The Gambling Sex"; "Human Cargo," a waterfront tale; and "The Silent Army," story of the country doctors.

The "Wilderness Thrillers" are: "East of Sudan," "White Ivory," "Zanzibar," "Roar of the Jungle," "Kiss of Araby" and "Green Paradise."

The westerns will feature a "wellknown star," to be announced shortly, who will appear in "Red Man's Country," "The Forty-Niners," "War of the Range," "When a Man Rides Alone," "Remember the Alamo!" and "Deadwood Pass."

The program will shortly go into production on the West Coast. Mr. Freuler will at that time announce the complete lineup of state rights distributors for 1932-1933.

Rudulph Addresses Advertisers

Gerald K. Rudulph, of the Photophone division of the RCA Victor Company, delivered a talk and demonstrated his company's new 16 mm. projector at the Tuesday session of the motion picture departmental session of the Advertising Federation of America in New York. He pointed out the value of converting silent films into modern talking pictures, and reduction from 35 mm. to 16 mm. sound-on-film prints.

Putnam, Gordon and Holman Get Paramount Posts

Appointments to executive posts in the Paramount production department, involving Max Gordon, New York theatrical producer; George Palmer Putnam, publisher, and Russell Holman, author, are announced by Emanuel Cohen, vice president of Paramount in charge of production. All three appointees will function from the company's executive offices in New York.

Mr. Gordon assumes charge of direct contacts with playwrights and stage players, and of negotiations for acquisition of motion picture rights to stage material. He has been a prominent figure in show business for the last 20 years, during which he was associated with the theatrical firm of Lewis and Gordon for 16 years, and, more recently, has been a producer of such musical comedies as "Three's A Crowd," "The Band Wagon" and "The Cat and the Fiddle."

Mr. Putnam became chairman of the Paramount editorial board on his return from Europe this week with his wife, Amelia Earhart Putnam, the aviatrix. He has headed the publishing firm of G. P. Putnam Sons for many years, and has been largely responsible for the personal exploitation of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Commander Richard E. Byrd, Amelia Earhart, Bernt Balchen, Frank Hawks, Bob Bartlett and David Putnam.

Mr. Holman, writer and former advertising manager of Paramount, becomes assistant to Mr. Cohen on production contacts in New York. He has been associated with Paramount for the last 12 years, having begun as a publicity writer for Paramount pictures, and eventually becoming advertising manager of the corporation. A year ago he was transferred to the production department by Mr. Cohen.

'Cimarron' Awarded Photoplay's Medal

"Cimarron," RKO Radio's film of western pioneer life, starring Richard Dix, has been awarded the Photoplay Magazine gold medal as the finest film produced during the calendar year January 1 to December 31, 1931.

The award is made on the basis of returns from a reader poll conducted annually by the fan publication, and to which thousands of readers responded. The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of "Cimarron" as first choice, the magazine announces. This was the twelfth annual award of the medal, previous films to achieve the distinction having been "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Disraeli," "Four Sons," "Abraham Lincoln," and others.

Citing the award, Photoplay said the film "is free from mawkish sentimentality—yet it is rich in real sentiment; it is as clean as Western air—without the cheap taint of sex vulgarity; and, what's more important, it is a motion picture done with motion picture technique with its dialogue subservient."

Bird of Paradise

(RKO-Radio)

Romantic Drama .

It should be one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Richard Walton Tully's story of daring and exotic romance is passionate and dramatic, yet full of humanness, and lavishly produced. In it are depicted the South Seas' weird savage superstitions and a story of a love that two races tabu.

A tiny yacht struggles to cleave a way through raging seas, over a jagged coral reef, to the safety of a lagoon. Then the action leaves the civilization of the West and plunges into the love romance of a white man for a native girl who has saved his life. The boy (Joel McCrea), who goes for this alluring native girl (Dolores Del Rio) in a big way, finds his yen for a sexy adventure transformed into an enduring affection. He steals the girl from her people and takes her to a beautiful island sanctuary, where invasion is forbidden by barbaric superstition, where they live gloriously happy. Tragedy enters when Pele, the Volcano God, erupts, and here are scenes packed with sensational spectacle.

Sequences in action, dialogue, drama, danger and thrill follow as the boy rushes to save his woman, as the natives determine to sacrifice both of them in the volcano. The boy's returning friends rescue them, but the girl goes up the mountain-side to give herself to appease the wrath of Pele.

You've got plenty to sell—heart-touching drama, brilliant romance, a Dolores Del Rio, passionate yet retaining the simplicity and sweetness of a girl to whom the kiss of civilization was an exotic thrill.

The picture is made to order for audiences who look for something of more than ordinary interest. It's for the grownups almost exclusively and is not recommended for showing to children.

Get dignity, beauty and the punch of realism in every line of your campaign, plus the idea that you are presenting an amazing new Dolores Del Rio in a picture that nobody can afford to miss.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by RKO Radio. Based on the play by Richard Walton Tully. Screen play by Wells Root. Added dialogue by Leonard Praskins and Wanda Tuchock. Photographed by Clyde DeVinna. Directed by King Vidor. Running time, 80 minutes. Released August 26, 1932.

Red Headed Woman

(MGM)

Comedy-Drama

The original platinum blonde goes red-headed, portrays a character that is the ultimate in drawing a picture of what some segments of mankind like to think is a conception of the red-headed gals and their amorous inclinations, and what happens thereafter produces many laughs, a whole series of blushes and a score of gasps.

THE concept of this department is that the exhibitor is concerned not with any critic's idea of "how good?" or "how poor?" but rather with the question of precisely what the product is and what is to be done with it when and as it is played. The exhibitor, in general, is concerned with the special aspects of strength and of weakness in the product, its appeals and shortcomings, that he may adequately deal with it when he becomes its sponsor to his public. These "review pages aim to aid the exhibitor as the retailer of the merchandise concerned.—THE EDITOR.

Sexy, racy, bristling with snappy dialogue, funny, it's loaded with dynamite that can be dynamic entertainment, or an explosion of objections unless you handle it properly and with all the finesse and ability that your showmanship experience commands.

Here's a brief idea of the story. Jean Harlow is a gum-chewing stenog with a trainload of sex appeal, and she knows plenty. Giving Chester Morris the works in his home one night in scenes that you don't see but can't fail to imagine, she brings the unwilling Chester under her spell. She makes his wife, Leila Hyams, divorce him and makes Chester marry her. Chester's high-toned friends won't recognize this hot bunch of "IT," so she goes on the make for one of her husband's big associates. Then she's shipped to New York until the furore dies down.

In New York she puts the big coal and coke man through the paces. Chester's detectives come up with some none-too-frigid photographs of Jean and her new sweetie's French chauffeur. Finally we see her as the darling of a bewhiskered Parisian boulevardier.

Getting the fun of the picture over to your audiences without revealing too much of its sexy raciness is going to need everything that you have. Undoubtedly the censor boards will tone down some of the more torrid scenes, but even so, there will be plenty left to stir up the long-haired moral guardians of your community. The picture is expressly for adult consumption. Lure the broadminded adults with lines like: the red-headed rascal with a brand new line; the platinum blonde in a red-hot laugh riot; just a laughing, loving Cleopatra. Never forgetting for a minute that "Red-Headed Woman" is daring and torrid.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. Directed by Jack Conway, from the original story by Katherine Brush. Screen play by Anita Loos. Photographed by Harold Rosson. Film editor, Blanche Sewell. Release date, June 25, 1932. Running time, 75 minutes.

The Man From Yesterday

(Paramount)

Drama

Putting this picture over to any kind of respectable results at the box office is going to require plenty of ingenuity and effort. Because it is a story with a background of one of the most tragic developments of the war, a subject which most people are trying to forget, it must be tackled from an angle that will ignore the impression of grimness.

You might approach your selling campaign from the idea of a woman who could not forget the man she had loved and married only to have him torn from her by the command of the God of War, to learn that he had been killed, to continue in a beautiful faith that it was all a horrible mistake. This might be a heart-tugging appeal for the women. That angle could be further developed with the idea of the man who came back realized that, wrecked in body and mind, he could bring no happiness to the woman he loved, so sacrificed himself that she might find happiness with another man.

Nevertheless you cannot overlook the powerful angle of Clive Brook's box office draw. Nor can you afford not to take full advantage of all that Claudette Colbert's name may mean in your community. Thus it would appear that a well-thought-out campaign, built around the glamour of those two names; supplemented by Allen Mowbray and Andy Devine, would be productive of the best results.

Build on the idea of faith—beautiful, everlasting. Be careful how you construct your surrounding program. You'll need short subjects that will offer a lightening contrast, yet you don't want rip-snorters that are going to be entirely foreign to your feature attraction. Build up to it with dignified shorts, scenics, travelogues, etc., and you will have a well balanced program.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Berthold Viertel. Based on the play by Nell Blackwell and Roland Edwards. Screen play by O. H. P. Garrett. Photography by Karl Struss. Release date, July 1, 1932. Running time, 70 minutes.

Wheeler and Woolsey at their nuttiest. Funnier, more foolish, more nonsensically insane than ever. Roaring with belly laughs, rippling with smiles from start to finish. With a raft of names—Edna May Oliver, Rosco Ates, Edgar Kennedy, Warren Hymer, et al—that means something at the box office.

It is built around football, but football which by no stretch of the most mirth-maddened imagination could come within the meaning of any term describing the great gridiron sport—laid in the most impossible of places, in jail. It's a picture burlesquing, satirizing with zestful zip and howling farcical comedy all the publicity madness, the "school" spirit, the proselyting, the hero worship, the football craziness of the most athletically hopped-up colleges.

The story is of a couple of super high-pressure novelty salesmen, parading as "All Americans," who talk themselves into jail, turn the rules and regulations of prison discipline upside down and inside out. They get mixed up in a football game between two "big time" rival "pens." And there's new comedy.

Edgar Kennedy, of short subject fame, is the warden whose patience is exhausted by the turmoil those two nuts create in his iron disciplined "big house." The cast also includes Edna May Oliver; stuttering Rosco Ates, as the star quarter-back and signal caller; Paul Hurst, the coach—on the grease always because he cannot produce a winning eleven; Betty Grable, a pleasing eyeful for love interest; Warren Hymer, the convict who is always trying to escape but always lands in solitary.

And there's the football season that will be here before we know it. It can be exploited to the skies. Carnival it, with flags and pennants, advertise it with the funniest, most foolish lines that you can concoct.

You can sell it to everyone. The kids will eat it up and the grownups will go out raving about it.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Stoker

(Allied Pictures)

Comedy Drama

A darned good example of what the independent producer can do with a good story and a good cast, there's plenty of every entertainment element in "The Stoker," with drama, romance, adventure, comedy, unusual scenes in unusual places, with wifely duplicity and a touch of the American Marines thrown in for good measure. Here are plenty of the different elements to stir the emotions in a clean and wholesome picture, prepared and directed in such a manner that it can be effectively sold from any diverse number of angles.

Two things are outstanding. First, it marks the return to the screen of Monte Blue, a pretty good crowd pleaser in the older days, and second, it's a Peter B. Kyne story. These two names should pep up any box office. You can easily work up an interest stimulating campaign around the return of Blue, using the idea that when new faces are needed most you have the background of a star that already has proved his ability at the box office. Peter B. Kyne has millions of readers. Both his books and magazine short stories have won him a tremendous following and his readers constitute a potential audience that smart showmanship put across through prominent mention of Kyne's name in advertising as well as publicity stories, in addition to tieups with book stores and magazine stands.

Still those two are not the only names. Even though brother Wally is hogging the spotlight right now, Noah Beery has an enthusiastic following and Dorothy Burgess, Natalie Moorhead and Richard Tucker have plenty of admirers.

Get across the romance angle with the idea of love charm—of a man who was through with women for life, who sought strange adventure in strange places, but could not escape the capricious charm of a fascinating little senorita.

Boost the drama and thrill angle with—A man who put the world behind him, sought refuge in a fiery stoke hold, battled wild bandit hordes to forget women but couldn't forget because a woman wouldn't let him.

There's plenty of realism and action in "The Stoker" to give it wide appeal and insure satisfaction. And it's loaded with enough ready-made showmanship that can be exploited in many different ways—plenty of legitimate opportunities for tieups with travel bureaus, women's shops, beauty parlors, department stores.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Mystery Ranch

(Fox)

Western

Careful on this one. Don't try to oversell it. Don't try to label it anything stronger than pleasing Western entertainment. Don't exaggerate with the idea of luring a few additional dollars into the box office. If you do, expect complaints from your patrons.

"Mystery Ranch" undoubtedly was made for neighborhood and small city and town theatres. In those houses where Westerns, particularly George O'Brien pictures, have an appeal it can be built up to an average or better box office picture. It's a natural with the youngsters; the kids should shout themselves hoarse at its high theatrics. Likewise that class of your patrons that are not so sophisticated in their picture demands constitute a sales field. Therefore, go after the kids as strongly as you can, and bring in the other class by an appeal that suggests thrills, action, danger, daring heroism and a typical Western hero romance.

If the showing of beautiful scenery in your theatre means anything, you can use that angle as a supporting plug. You can't do much with the title or any of the characters in the way of exploitation without resorting to a lot of stereotyped stuff the merits of which as a ticket selling proposition are open to question.

Best results, it seems, will be attained by sticking to the truth, just plugging the picture as one of those thrilling George O'Brien Westerns, depending upon the kids and the O'Brien fans to snap up the business. The story was written by Stewart Edward White, which might mean something, depending upon where your theatre is located. As far as names are concerned, Cecelia Parker played with O'Brien in "Rainbow Trail" and "Riders of the Purple Sage." Charles Middleton, who has appeared in many big pictures, may be an asset, and Forrester Harvey, the dummy comedian with the Cockney dialect, may help you if you care to use his name in connection with some of the previous pictures in which he has appeared, "Man in Possession," for instance.—Mc Carthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Directed by David Howard. From the novel "The Killer" by Stewart Edward Whit. Screen play by Al Cohn. Sound, Albert Protzman. Photographed by Joseph August. Art director, Joseph Wright. Release date, June 12, 1932. Running time, 65 minutes.

Huddle

(MGM)

Drama

Regardless of when this one becomes available for your house it can always be considered timely. If the breaks bring it somewhere about the football season, swell. If not, it's still OK because the intense interest of the story and the characters in it make it excellent screen fare for all times.

It is unusually long, running 104 minutes, but after seeing the picture we could well appreciate how difficult it would be to cut anything else out without taking away just that much from its grand entertainment values. Every foot of it is unadulterated pleasure.

The title is none too strong for the b. o. Built up on the football theme, it would naturally be good box office material, but to sell it as "just a football" picture would be a serious mistake, because it is far more a "human" story than a "football" story. Taking that title and backing it up with Ramon Navarro, Madge Evans, Ralph Graves and several others you will note in the cast below—then adding the various selling touches such as the football slant, the uphill battle of a mill-hand to acquire a Yale education, the college background itself, and numerous other pointers, these should provide any smart showman with enough ammunition to blast plenty of business away from the bridge tables.

Its audience strength is by far its longest suit and will create such word-of-mouth advertising as few pictures have done this season. All of this fine cast handle their parts to perfection and, strange as it may sound, the direction makes it a human document if there ever was one. Expect raves if your town boasts of a newspaper critic, expect them anyway, even if you must depend on popular opinion around the community.

It is one of those pictures that can be played anywhere. Young and old will find entertainment galore and will hope for many more like it. Nothing objectionable, but then we don't live in your town, so you will be better able to judge that for yourself. By all means see it. To see it is to inspire yourself to put it over as it deserves, and your efforts will certainly not be in vain if you understand your patronage. Promise them, in no small way, one swell picture, and we'll wager they will agree that you have made good your promises.

Left to shift for itself it is going to complete its run before the town gets a chance to know how good a picture it is. Don't play such a lowdown trick on your box office. Here is one of the season's outstanding productions, outstanding in story, in acting and direction. Treat it as such and it will amply repay you for your enthusiasm and efforts.—Lewis.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. Directed by Sam Wood. Story by Francis Wallace. Dialogue and continuity by Walton Hall Smith and C. Gardner Sullivan. Adapted by Robert Lee Johnson and Arthur S. Hyman. Photographed by Harold Wenstrom. Film editor, Hugh Wynn. Release date, May 14, 1932. Running time, 104 minutes.

Thunder Below

(Paramount)

Drama

The title and the thoughts back of this story promised much in the way of a good picture, but, unfortunately, very little materialized. It may be considered as another of those "hot climate" pictures where the wife is in love with the husband's best friend. And that just about constitutes all there is to tell about.

Tallulah Bankhead, so far as we are concerned, is still to get a break in pictures. Not that she falls down; on the contrary, she tries her darndest to make the story interesting by giving an excellent performance, but it takes more than her efforts and the hard work of Charles Bickford and Paul Lukas to accomplish such a feat.

The title possesses many good selling slants. On that title and the better marquee names in the cast you must depend almost entirely for whatever measure of business you show at the box office. References to the "hot climate" angle may not be advisable since there has been so much of that type before and especially since this is nothing above the usual run of such stories.

Audience value is weak and will have to be helped along by surrounding the feature with some mighty strong shorts. This can materially help the show as a whole. Perhaps several names, besides the ones we've mentioned, are good draws in your town; if so, use them as much as good showmanship will permit.

Not suitable for kids or Sunday showings in the smaller towns. Otherwise, spot it where it will get by with the least possible resistance or the necessity for trying to sell something that you know yourself to be far from satisfactory entertainment. Build up one of those shows whereby you can sell something else along with the feature.

For Tallulah's sake we are hoping that her next will afford her an opportunity of building up a real b. o. following. She deserves it.—LEWIS.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Richard Wallace. From the novel by Thomas Rourke. Screen play by Josephine Lovett and Sidney Buchman. Photographed by Charles Lang. Release date, June 17, 1932. Running time, 69 minutes.

Winner Take All

(Warner)

Drama

The box office selling recipe for this film should read about three-quarters James Cagney and one-quarter title, cast and theme. The title is the sort of line with which much can be done. Tie it to the squared circle, with Cagney fighting, in a winner take all battle, with gloved opponents and with romance. He takes it "on the chin" from a society girl, who plays upon his weakness for women, but he comes back strongly, shows the woman what he thinks of her and her actions, then takes the real count from the girl he loves. He has his weak points, but he has a punch in either hand.

Build the campaign along those lines, and always keep Cagney on top. He has demonstrated his money-making film faculty often enough to warrant playing him high. As usual, he handles his role in that breezy, pugilistic and pugnacious manner which, unique with him, gives his screen work a snap and sparkle and carries the audience with him in a rush from the very start. Tone the advertising copy in keeping with the star, giving it punch, making it short and snappy. It is the sort of role which is ready-made for Cagney, the kind in which he revels.

There are few good cast names beside Cagney, but few are needed. Marion Nixon is always appealing and does her work well as the girl whom Cagney meets out West at a health resort, but forgets in the big town when the society girl pursues him. Guy Kibbee as Cagney's manager, little Dickie Moore, an amazingly attractive youngster always, as Miss Nixon's son, are perhaps the only other names that will mean anything, though the support is uniformly good.

The audience will unquestionably be entertained, and entertained well. The story has action, punch, vigor, and is rounded out with a serious turn on the one hand, and several spots of really good comedy on the other. The comedy lies for the most part in the dialogue, and the manner in which Cagney "hurls" it. There is a sequence or two which borders a bit on the risque side, but it is not prominent and is carried off well by Cagney. There is no necessity of stressing it, particularly where it might do more harm than good. Stay on the action side all the way.

Another profitable angle is in the original story, authored by Gerald Beaumont, extremely well known in the magazine short story field for his yarns of sport. The local sporting goods stores should be worthwhile. The Strand in New York displayed out front a collection of gloves and other boxing paraphernalia, and therewith attracted a good bit of pedestrian attention.—AARONSON.

Produced and distributed by Warner. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Author, Gerald Beaumont. Adaptation by Wilson Mizner and Robert Lord. Film editor, Thomas Pratt. Cameraman, Robert Kurrle. Release date, July 16, 1932. Running time, 67 minutes.

A Nous La Liberte

(Harold Auten)

Comedy Drama

Here is an unusual piece of motion picture work. Rene Clair, author, adaptor, editor, and apparently producing the picture almost in its entirety, has taken most unusual liberties with the camera, settings and the technique of the motion picture in general. The result is unique, interesting, and ofttimes almost brilliant in execution.

The film is entirely in French, although that does not present nearly as stern an obstacle to appreciation in this country as may be supposed, since the dialogue is sparse, and the action of the story in nowise unintelligible.

This effort, which may safely be called an experiment or an adventure in the motion picture, is hardly adaptable to the regular run theatre. Rather, its possibilities are to be confined strictly to that type of house, in a major key situation, which can count on an audience with sufficient interest in the unusual in dramatic presentation. That is the only real selling angle in the film, the unusual. Perhaps the most efficacious manner of exploitation would be a direct mail campaign addressed to patrons of some long standing, or to certain of the more important names, socially and in business, in the community. The theatre which concerns itself with the European productions of better quality might make much of this film. The Europa, intimate cinema of that type in New York, is currently concluding a presumably profitable run of six weeks.

The film is replete with bizarre settings in most severely modernistic mode, while a symphonic score, running throughout creates a most unusual impression in keeping and accentuating the movement of the piece, the maneuvering of masses of men, at their tasks in prison, at their jobs in a large and intensely mechanized factory. There is a certain amusing, almost satirical atmosphere about the story of the prisoner who escapes and later heads a great industrial organization where the labor of the workers is similar to the routine of prison life. Touches of detail, appearing again and again, are unique in character, surprisingly effective. Only for certain types of houses and patrons, this film, unusual in every respect, might well be offered profitably.—AARONSON.

Produced, directed, edited, adapted and photographed by Rene Clair. Distributed by Harold Auten. Running time, 93 minutes.

SHORTS

Pie, Pie Blackbird

(Vitaphone)

Fair

Fairly entertaining, moderately enjoyable if the patron likes the negro band, with its own peculiar type of melody, and the singing negress, Nina McKinney, with her crooning but quite melodious voice. The idea of the band headed by Eubie Blake, placed within the confines of the opened crust of a pie, offers a novel setting for the music. Several popular numbers are rendered.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Catnipped

(Universal)

Fair

There is a bit of amusement, a fair portion of novelty in this animated number. Oswald, the rabbit, is rather sadly beset by a group of clever mice, who electrically shock him, and he pursues them with the aid of a large cat. The short is not in any way unusual among cartoon numbers.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Napoleon's Bust

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

There is a fair portion of amusement in this comedy subject. Nat Coleman, devotee of Napoleon, rendered unconscious after being struck with a bust of the great general, dreams of himself as Napoleon, his wife as Josephine. His great Waterloo campaign, with soldiers, warfare and palace trimmings strictly modern, forms an amusing idea.—Running time, 10 minutes.

You Try Somebody Else

(Paramount)

Entertaining

Fairly entertaining, this short combines the rendition of a popular song by Ethel Merman, melodious-voiced stage singer, and the animated cartoon comedy, as a subject in the Screen Songs series. The cartoon work is amusing enough, Miss Merman's voice sufficiently pleasant to rate this an entertaining number.—Running time, 10 minutes.

What an Idea

(Vitaphone)

Melodious

Fairly entertaining, satisfactorily musical, this comedy short has a novel idea, that of the small ornamental figures on the desk of the harassed musical show writer becoming animated, turning into a chorus, and various musical comedy bits result. Presumably the action takes place atop the writer's desk. It is an entertaining subject throughout.—Running time, 18 minutes.

South American Journeys

(Vitaphone)

Of Interest

This subject in the E. M. Newman Travel Talk series pictures the result of the widely roving camera in South America. Seen are the beautiful harbor of Rio de Janiero, particularly impressive in a night shot; the parks of the city; the quaint and dilapidated appearing capitol of Paraguay. Perhaps the most striking scenic effects are achieved in the paroramic and closeup views of the famed waterfall of the continent. An interesting subject with wide appeal.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THE NEWEST PICTURES

The Laughs and Eyes Have It In Latest Product; Meehan Points to Three Comedies

By LEO MEEHAN, Hollywood

The laughs have it in the new pictures previewed in Cinemaland the last week. "Blessed Event," from Warners, "Million Dollar Legs" from Paramount, and "Bachelor's Affairs" from Fox, are among those designed for chuckling purposes, and a generous number of belly-laughs is mixed in for good measure.

"Blessed Event," in addition to having high speed, drama and color like a Roman candle, is distinguished by some of the best screen acting of the year. Nothing better has been done than the scene between Lee Tracy, who plays the lead, and Allen Jenkins, something of a newcomer out this way, in which they discuss the effect Sing Sing's electric chair has on a man's feelings. Wow! What acting. The film tells another story of a Broadway columnist with a keyhole mind, wise guy who bores into what people regard as their private affairs. He's threatened with death in almost every form, dodges gangster bullets and irate wives. The pace set by Howard Green's script and Roy Del Ruth's direction is terrific. It is being talked about by all who saw it. "Blessed Event" also may be classed as a motion picture event. It's a pacemaker for the Columnist cycle which is upon us.

To a picture goer who begins to get fed up on the routine doses of murder, arson love triangles, drawing room small talk and speakeasy smart cracks, an out-and-out farce comedy comes like a breeze from Catalina. Paramount has built one in "Million Dollar Legs" which is so wildly outlandish in story and so thoroughly nutty in dialogue and action that you just lie back in your seat and giggle, chuckle or roar. There's not a grain of sense to it. Ain't that grand? It is just made to laugh at, and with. Comedy masters like Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields, Andy Clyde, Ben Turpin, George Barbier, Hank Mann, Vernon Dent and half a dozen more, guided by the old maestro of slapstick days, Edward Cline, do their antics without regard for plot, expense or restraint. Bill Fields (of whom we'd like to see more and often) plays the president of a mythical little nation in Europe which, like Finland, specializes in growing record-breaking athletes. How Bill brings the gang to Los Angeles and cleans up on the 1932 Olympic games provides the routine. And the routine chews up scenery, sinks boats, derails trains, breaks heads. If someone had just thrown a pie we would have believed film comedy had returned to earth and abandoned the drawing room. Imagine Andy Clyde as a Pavvo Nurmi—that's a rough idea of the uproarious absurdity of this one. Good old-fashioned lowdown farce of the Sennett-Christie-Chaplin school.

Radio's contribution for the week is the latest Richard Dix picture, with Wesley Ruggles as impresario. "Roar of the Dragon" tells about bandits, and Communists, and Oriental intrigue and "furriners" in Manchuria. The Japs ought to be fined for suspending hostilities over there before this one got to market. Dix is a river boat captain, stranded with a bunch of Americans, including Gwili Andre (Radio's new Garbo-Dietrich model), Arlene Judge, Zasu Pitts, Edward Everett Horton, C. Henry Gordon and others. Beleaguered in a hotel for days, facing starvation, or death at the hands of knife-eating brigands, they use more machine gun ammunition than was expended on Vimy Ridge. Eddie Cronjager's photography materially heightens the melodramatic effects. It is easily among the best jobs of the year from the Bell & Howell angle. We can't say about this Andre girl; sometimes she looks good, sometimes not so good, and, subconsciously, one keeps thinking of how Garbo or Dietrich might have done it, which doesn't quite give the new kid a fair break. Anyhow, she's worth trying some more.

Fox's "Bachelor's Affairs" sets out to show what can befall a bachelor in the forties who succumbs to the round-eyed stares of a dizzy little blonde to whom he should have been content to play "uncle." Adolphe Menjou plays the bachelor, so you know he's gay, and suave—but he becomes extremely harassed and all but collapses when he marries the baby, Joan Marsh. You know, after all, a man should remember his age and act accordingly. Minna Gombell, Arthur Pierson, Allan Dinehart, Irene Purcell, Don Alvarado, Herbert Mundin and Rita LaRoy contribute effectively to the complications. It's loaded with wise cracking.

"The Man From Yesterday" is mostly a sound track. It is a very slow moving story of a wartime romance which ends disastrously. Nurse marries an officer. Both return to their units. He is reported dead. She becomes interested in a young doctor in her outfit. She also becomes a mother. About the time she is ready to give up the husband as lost, and marry the doctor, husband reappears, but very much shot to pieces. Of course she's going to do the big thing, give up her romance with the doctor and stick to what's left of her husband. He ses what has happened and gets out of the way. He was almost there, anyhow. Claudette Colbert and Clive Brooks deserve better vehicles than this. They do their best, but even an actor can get tired of talking.

Audience reaction to the first of a series of westerns featuring John Wayne, produced for Warners by Leon Schlessinger, was very favorable. "Ride Him, Cowboy" seems to have all the best ingredients of entertainment fanned by the breezes of the wide open spaces. Wayne looks well, acts with conviction, and he is ably supported by such competent folks as Frank Hagney, Henry Walthall, Otis Harlan, Charles Sellon, Ruth Hall, Harry Gribbon. It gives the series an auspicious start.

Grants Charter to IATSE Unit

The secretary of state of Ohio has granted a charter to the state unit of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada. The unit was formed during the convention recently at Columbus. It is expected 1,400 will be enrolled.

Cooperation, Not Competition, Must Rule, Says DeBrie

Cooperation must take the place of competition in international motion picture relations before producing and technical phases can make uniform progress, it was declared in Hollywood last week by Andre DeBrie, head of the Paris camera works which bears his name.

Mr. DeBrie, visiting Hollywood on a survey of the American market, told a representative of the Quigley Publications that while American pictures had in the past greatly influenced motion picture progress abroad, the time has come when no one country's product can command the world market. With Germany, France, England, and even Russia producing excellent pictures, Mr. DeBrie said, it is now rather a case of individual picture merit than of the influence of any particular company abroad.

The famous French manufacturer declared that it was not alone in the production field that international cooperation was necessary. In this regard, he declared much could be accomplished toward broadening the scope of international distribution. But, he pointed out, the principal need is for intensive cooperation in the technical branches of the industry, in order that ideas and scientific progress in all the laboratories of the world may keep abreast for the common good of the industry as a whole.

Much of this cooperation, Mr. DeBrie pointed out, can be attained through the broadening of relationships between such organizations as Hollywood's Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and similar organizations abroad, as for instance the French Syndicale which performs the same function for the French industry as the Academy does for the American.

Equity Receivers For Fox Theatres

Judge Martin C. Manton, in federal court for the southern district of New York, on Wednesday granted a receivership in equity for Fox Theatres Corporation, upon application of the Chicago Title & Trust Company. The petitioner claimed the corporation owed it $410,190.

William E. Atkinson, president of Fox Theatres Corporation, and John S. Sherman were appointed receivers by the court and ordered to furnish a joint bond of $100,000. The action was described as a friendly move.

MGM Holding Four Regional Sales Sessions; Now Underway

MGM will hold four regional sales meetings this year. The first got underway on Thursday in Philadelphia. Other cities on the schedule are Memphis, Kansas City and Los Angeles. Felix F. Feist, general sales manager, will attend all four sessions. It is understood the company will release 52 features next season.

---TOM MIX and TONY in two knockouts that defy the heat of summer.

Pos-i-tive-ly guaranteed to give your beloved competitor a stiff pain in the neck.

BACK STREET is coming! It's a road show.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

Theatre receipts for the calendar week ended June 18, 1932 reached a total of $1,840,404 which, compared to the aggregate for the previous calendar week, ended June 11, when the total gross was $1,928,776, indicates a decrease of $88,372. The drop may be in part accounted for by the fact that the total for the earlier week included 175 theatres in 31 key cities, while 172 houses in 31 cities reported during the following period. Sixteen new low individual house figures were recorded during the later week, and one new high figure, at the Loew's State in Boston, on a split week. This compares with 21 new "lows" and no new "highs" during the preceding seven-day period.

NEW YORK GOES DOTTY OVER THE # DOOMED BATTALION

You can over-advertise some pictures, but you can't over-boost this one. Paramount-Publix gave "The Doomed Battalion" a marvelous campaign for the Rivoli theatre, the critics shower it with praise and the fans love it. Listen:

IRENE THIRER IN THE SUNDAY NEWS:—"Breath-taking; awe inspiring; gripping; the scenic spectacle of grandeur."

MORDAUNT HALL IN THE TIMES:—"Magnificent; highly dramatic; admirable; genuine artistry; rugged and wholesome."

THE NEW YORK AMERICAN:—"Straightforwardly told; thrilling moments, piercing trench scenes, stunning effects."

A PICTURE THAT WILL SWEEP THE MILLIONS BACK INTO THE THEATRES!

STEP OUT WITH UNIVERSAL

HOFFMAN REPLIES ON "INDECENT"

EXHIBITORS WANTED TITLE: HOFFMAN

The debate on the subject of the title "Madame Bovary" vs. "Indecent," a production now in preparation by M. H. Hoffman of Allied Pictures Corporation in Hollywood, goes on merrily, gaining a bit of fervor as it goes. This week we present a letter which Mr. Hoffman has addressed to Herman G. Weinberg of the Europa theatre in Baltimore. Motion Picture Herald, it will be recalled, presented a letter from Mr. Weinberg a fortnight ago, and several other vigorous communications from exhibitors. The subject is still open. Mr. Hoffman has written to Mr. Weinberg, saying:

June 16, 1932.

Mr. Herman G. Weinberg,
Europa Theatre,
Baltimore, Md.

My Dear Sir:

I is quite evident you misunderstood MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S request to express an opinion as to the advisability of the use of the title "INDECENT" for a motion picture, suggested by Gustave Flaubert's "MADAME BOVARY." It was not a request to express an opinion of the producer or producers in general, which you so kindly volunteered.

Your forceful expression against the title, if supported by others, leaves no doubt in our minds. You also impressed us with your knowledge as to the identity of the novelist and his works, which you possibly gleaned from having read some of them, or from reference to Encyclopedia Britannica.

Although a "customer" is never supposed to be wrong, it is quite possible that in this case you are not a customer since it is quite obvious that you do not approve of "MADAME BOVARY," whether she be decent or indecent. Furthermore, even a customer may prove an exception to the rule.

As it happens, although the producer was born a year or so too late to converse with the novelist, he did make up for it by reading his works in the original language, and that also applies to Dostoievski, whom you mentioned.

If apologies were to be exchanged, I do owe you one for having referred to Flaubert as a playwright, or to "MADAME BOVARY" as a play, but this series of pictures happened to include some famous novels, such as "MADAME BOVARY," "ANNA KARENINA" and "FILE 113," and some famous plays, such as "THE IRON MASTER," "A PARISIAN ROMANCE" and "VANITY FAIR" (Becky Sharp), and they were therefore grouped under the classification of Stage Classics, which, we will admit, might be considered wrong if everybody chose to be technical. We knew that Flaubert was a novelist and "MADAME BOVARY" is a novel, and you are now enlightened on the fact that Hoffman read and knows "MADAME BOVARY" and that his knowledge was not based on what he had heard.

You seem to object to our "touching up" or modifying the story, whereas the very subject matter of the controversy would indicate the necessity of it. It is a well-known fact that whereas certain novels and plays are quite suitable for the adult reader and for the theatre audience, because they are generally adults, the same novel or play needs considerable modification to make it suitable as a motion picture, because in the motion picture theatre the minor is to be considered. It is because we do not seek sensationalism that we do make the changes. We adopt what is suitable and discard what may be objectionable, which requires considerably more knowledge than you credit the producer with having.

May I enlighten you on the fact that this producer did not propose to use the title "INDECENT." Here's how the discussion was brought about:

Since the original "MADAME BOVARY" would be a costume picture; since it would be too sensational, and for other reasons would not have been good box-office in its original form, and since the producer modernized it, brought it up to date, eliminated the objectionable phases and situations, as well as dialogue, he felt that to call the picture "MADAME BOVARY" would mislead, and therefore found it necessary to give it a different title and simply refer to the picture as having been suggested by Gustav Flaubert's "MADAME BOVARY." Somebody suggested "INDECENT" as a "working title." No sooner did that happen than we began to receive many letters from exhibitors to retain it. We did not like the title; we do not like it now, and we hope that the consensus of opinion will enable us to change it.

Your very objections to the novel as being a subject on adultery, is the very reason why we adapted it in a different form and modified it so that it is now most acceptable entertainment for young and old. It is a colorful romance and a great sugar-coated moral lesson. The romantic structure of Flaubert's great masterpiece was retained. We tried to do what Flaubert would most likely have done were he alive today, if he were adapting his own work for a motion picture.

You seem to be of the impression that the adapting of a great play or a great novel for a motion picture is something new and unheard of. Please check up a year's product and convince yourself that you are wrong.

We appreciate your suggestion that the original title, "MADAME BOVARY," be used, but this has two objections; in the first place, we do not propose to misrepresent when our picture is a modern romance only suggested by the original "MADAME BOVARY." Furthermore, we feel that well-read men, like yourself, especially in foreign literature, are in the minority, and that whereas the title of this year's or last year's "best seller" should be retained—"MADAME BOVARY" can be much improved upon for a box-office title.

We also appreciate your advice regarding censorship, but we assure you that regardless of censorship we endeavor to put nothing into our pictures that would be objectionable. We generally succeed. The writer has never had a picture rejected during his twenty-two years as a motion picture producer. This is because we are our own censors in avoiding anything indecent or improper.

Most respectfully yours,
M. H. HOFFMAN.

P. S.—As to how an adulterous subject is made suitable for any audience by proper adapting, we refer you to our "VANITY FAIR."

WARNS "INDECENT" DRAWS CRITICISM

To THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I think such titles as "Indecent," "Merrily We Go to Hell" and others similar do more to cause criticism, sometimes unjustly, against the industry than anything else.

If we are ever to get clear of the censor trouble, we must guard against suggestive titles.—GUY B. AMIS, Manager, Princess Theatre, Lexington, Tenn.

COURTROOM TRIAL CYCLE

WE ARE ABOUT TO HAVE A COURTroom trial cycle. It is cheering to note now that children's pictures are now getting into the crook and trial and courtroom atmosphere. Mothers will appreciate bringing their children.

Here is a scenario that will meet the modern Hollywood idea. One can imagine a Hollywood executive, determined to make something for the bulk of the people, would select "Pollyanna." In the first scene Pollyanna will have to take off all of her clothes worth mentioning. In the second scene the comedian will make a bunch of dirty wisecracks. In the third scene will be shown a drinking bout in a speakeasy. Then comes the big punch without which no picture is complete today—a flock of cops, the interior of a cell house, showing blonde prostitutes and sneak thieves. Next the courtroom scene and then the grand finale in which the father is shot, the mother dies of cancer, the sweetheart is killed in an airplane and Pollyanna is electrocuted, ending with the closeup of a small graveyard equipped with the tombs of the entire cast.

The above is exactly what Hollywood seems to want today; in their language, "it has everything."—HERMAN J. BROWN, Manager, Inland Amusement Company, Nampa, Idaho.

CALLS SURVEY ILLUMINATING

To THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

This is a mighty interesting and exceedingly illuminating survey you are conducting in an effort to determine the box-office values of those whose names adorn the theatre marquees of the country.

In my opinion, considering the reliability of the sources from which your information is coming, such a poll should be of great value to the producing corporations, in that it will reveal the type of pictures that draw best at the box-office.

It must have given that noble veteran, Marie Dressler, a great kick to find herself at the top of the heap.—GERALD K. RUDULPH, RCA Photophone, New York City.

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 133.—(A) What effect has increase in curvature in a mirror such as is used in connection with reflector type lamps? (B) Is there much loss through absorption when light passes through clear, colorless glass of good grade? (C) Why is it impossible to focus a condenser beam to a point? (D) What is a plano-meniscus lens, and what would be its effect upon light passed through it? (Be careful on this one!)

Answer to Question No. 126

Bluebook School Question No. 126 was: (A) What is the practical effect of a short circuit in a bell or buzzer circuit? (B) What is the difference between a bell and a buzzer circuit? (C) Should bell or buzzer circuit wires be soldered and insulated? (D) Describe a series, parallel, and series-parallel battery connection. What is the effect of each such connection?

FIG. A

You may see that I have started using initials instead of full names. The list grows steadily and must be condensed as much as possible. Hereafter initials only will be used.

Again I have decided to distribute publication honors. First we will read what Rau and Evans have to say in answering Section A:

"A short circuit in a bell or buzzer circuit may cause the bell or buzzer either to operate continuously or not at all, depending upon where the short is located. If it be between the bell (or buzzer) and switch (push button), the effect will be to short the switch and thus cause the bell or buzzer to operate continuously until the battery is exhausted or the short removed. This would not hold good if what is known as a single stroke bell is used, but they are very seldom found in theatres.

"If the short be located between the battery and bell (or buzzer), then the bell will not ring when the switch is closed (button pressed), and the battery will itself be shorted and discharged continuously, until it has run down, or the trouble is remedied. The rate of discharge will be in proportion to the resistance of the 'short'."

As to Section B, Lester Borst says, "No difference exists as between the bell and buzzer circuit. Both are identical. A buzzer is merely a bell with the hammer and gong missing. The vibrating elements are, however, the same in both. The buzzer is employed to produce a damped signal in cases where a loud, sharp one would be objectionable."

Section C is answered by Ronald Hurlbut, thus: "In this type of circuit all splices should be made in accordance with one of the standard methods approved by the electrical code. After a mechanically perfect joint has been made, it should in all cases be soldered and taped just as a regular electric circuit (light or power) splice would be taped, except that since the voltage is low, the taping need not be so heavy, and no rubber need be used. This not only makes a finished appearance, but also provides the required insulation, without which troubles of various sorts might follow. An incomplete job seldom pays in anything, and wire splices is where careless, poor workmanship can, and usually does cause trouble. The circuit wires, as a whole, must be adequately insulated for low voltage."

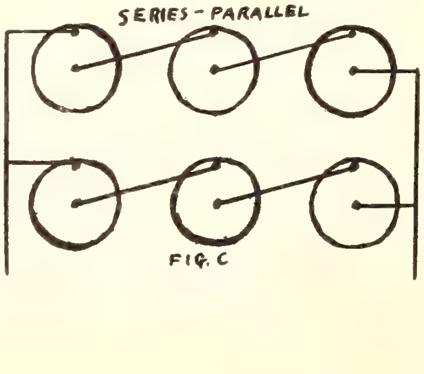

FIG. C

As to Section D, I think we will let Brother Williams tell the story. (Incidentally, Williams' answer was very good on all sections. Trust we may have him with us regularly.) He says:

"A series connection of battery cells consists of a number of cells having the positive of one connected to the negative of the next, as per Figure A. This connection has the effect of increasing the voltage; i. e., a series of battery cells each having 1.5 volts would produce a voltage equal to 1.5 multiplied by the number of cells so connected.

"A parallel (multiple) connection of battery cells is made by connecting the positive of each cell to the positive of the next, and the negative poles similarly, as per Figure B. The effect of such a connection is to increase the amperage by, if desired, the amperage capacity of each cell, the voltage of the combination remaining the same as that of a single cell.

"A series-parallel connection increases both voltage and amperage. The voltage of the combination by the number of cells in each individual series connection, with notation that such number must be equal in all sets of series in any such combination. The connection is illustrated in Figure C. The amperage is increased by such a combination. It will be equal to the amperage of a single cell times the number of cells used in the entire combination.

"Caution: In such a set it is essential that the voltage of each series be equal. If it be not, then there will be loss through the unbalancing effect causing the stronger series to discharge more rapidly, until it is reduced to that of the other series. In effect, the set having the higher voltage will build up the voltage of the weaker series cells, which effect is bad for both or all series of the set."

Make Me a Star

(Paramount)

Drama of Comedy

Put this down on your booking sheets in big black letters. It should wow 'em. It's a picture of a picture-crazed country hick who with a correspondence school diploma goes to Hollywood to blaze his way to screen fame. It's a drama of comedy, of the most patron-pleasing type. Full of that nonsense of humanity that will make them laugh with tears in their eyes.

It's the story of a boy and his hallowed dreams, which those about him, in his home town, in Hollywood, laugh at—which your patrons will laugh at, and the kind of a picture that will make them yell for more.

There's no satire other than the satire of realism with which almost every boy and girl who comes to the magic city meets, graphically picturing what so many writers have tried to say in print—the drama of money gone, thrown out of his room, waiting in the casting office eternally for a break, getting it and flopping in sequences that are tragically comic—sleeping on sets, eating "prop" food leftovers—staying inside the gates because he knows that if he ever goes outside he'll never get back—of a girl who befriends him, sympathizes with him, tries to get him to go back home, yet forces her director friend to give him a chance—of a picture that was going to make him famous as a dramatic artist—of a howling farce that made him a "genius."

Even though this picture is based on the famous story, "Merton of the Movies," that has been read by millions, and the sensationally successful play of the same name produced some years ago and a picture made about eight years ago under the same name, avoid the temptation to go too strongly on that old title, "Merton of the Movies." From your own experience you know the fate that, more often than not, befalls anything that savors of a reissue. There's too much solid gold in "Make Me a Star," too much timeliness, too much of everything that goes to make up a great picture, whose box office possibilities are limited only by the amount of ingenuity and effort you put into your campaign, to resort to such a bromide.

Although the title seems to lack that smack that definitely links the picture with Hollywood, don't let that worry you. You have personalities to shout about, a story wherein smiles banish tears, where uproarious laughter stifles a sob—tragedy that is tragedy to the boy who is living it, but a source of perpetual laughter to those who surround him, to those who will see him.

Because there are millions who dream as Merton Gill dreamed, you have an audience that is already waiting to be pulled in. You can do it with the right kind of selling copy, copy that emphasizes the humanness of "Make Me a Star," catchlines for ads and foundations for publicity stories built on the Hollywood of fascination and failure, of dough and despair, of hopes and helplessness, of ambitions and ambiguities, of glory and of oblivion.

Tell your patrons that they'll laugh with him and at him, that they will cry with him and at him, that they'll fight his battles for him, that they will hope as he hopes, and that when he finally gets across, when fame is his and a career of a star lies before him, they will be just as tearfully glad as he was.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

JENKINS' COLYUM

Galesburg, Ill.

DEAR HERALD:

If an excellent prospect for crops will have any bearing on this depression, Illinois ought soon to snap out of it. All Western Illinois, wherever we have gone, has wonderful prospects for an unusual crop of wheat, oats, rye, corn and clover, and the state has been thoroughly soaked by recent rains.

Here in Galesburg, a town of 28,000, there are three theatres, one Publix and two independent houses belonging to Mr. McSpadden, one being closed temporarily.

Mr. McSpadden was in Arkansas on his vacation when we called but his assistant manager took upon himself the responsibility for our conduct while we were in town. Galesburg is a railroad town, but the shops have been moved away and the payroll reduced to practically nothing; this has been partially responsible for the slump in business at the theatres.

At Knoxville, six miles from Galesburg, Mr. Williams has adopted the plan of two adult admissions for 36 cents and two children's admissions for 11 cents, and he says he has noted a marked difference in his receipts, that he even draws considerable people from Galesburg. This would indicate that the price had something to do with it. Wherever we have gone we have found that the lowering of admission prices has pretty generally resulted in stimulating business. In the case of Mr. Williams it may be due to the fact that he has a very nice theatre and most excellent sound.

Our old friend Stanley, who operated the Beardstown theatre, at Beardstown, Ill., when we were there last, is now managing the house at Bushnell, and Joe Green, who managed the Bushnell house, is at the Beardstown. These two houses belong to the Pertle circuit and seem to be well managed. Both of these managers report business as being dreadfully slow, notwithstanding they are playing the best of the service in well equipped houses.

Mr. Hainline, manager of the theatre at Macomb, was confined to his home by sickness and we were disappointed not to meet him, as we've always found a warm welcome there. His assistant manager showed us every courtesy.

The Illinois theatre at Jacksonville, a Publix house, was recently damaged by fire, but there was a large crew of men at work repairing the house when we called and it was said the place would be ready to open about August 1. Publix is operating its second-run house, which is the only theatre open in a town of 17,000.

Roadhouse is a town of about 2,000 and has one theatre owned and managed by Mr. Denny, who told us that some promoters are going to build a $30,000 theatre with the idea of renting it. When one considers that just three miles south of Roadhouse, and on a good cement road, is the town of White Hall with a fine theatre managed by Joe Lyman, a very popular manager, one wonders just what they will do with a $30,000 theatre in Roadhouse in addition to the already well managed house there. People who make these colossal blunders are those whose knowledge of theatrical business is limited. The promoters of this theatre are said to be real estate promoters and not theatre men.

Mrs. Frank Paul, who manages the Marvel theatre at Carlinville, impressed us as being just what a manager should be. She had a pleasant "good evening" and "thank you" for all her patrons, whether in overalls or broadcloth and that's what counts at the box office. She even waved and smiled at her acquaintances as they drove by the theatre while we were visiting with her before the show. If the Marvel theatre isn't a success it will not be her fault. She could teach some managers we have met some very important lessons.

At Staunton, Mr. E. H. Weick manages the Labor Temple there for the Miners' Union. This is a very fine house built by the union at a time when the mines were operating at capacity. Just now the mines are shut down. The only towns we know of that are deader than a mining community when the mines are closed are oil towns when development work stops and the oil is pumped into the pipe lines. If the Temple theatre survives it will be because of Mr. Weick's excellent management.

Joe Crivello, who manages the Capitol at Litchfield, is the same old Joe, right on the job all the time. He says there is no use to worry about poor business because Worry never brought home any bacon. We told Joe that somebody better get to work and open those mines before winter set in, because Nebraska is a larger user of Illinois coal, and it gets cold in Nebraska like it does in Los Angeles. Joe said he'd look into this matter.

We had a delightful visit with Mr. C. T. Metcalf, who operates a bank in Greenfield as well as the theatre. It's a pleasure to meet such men as he. There aren't enough of them.

V. H. Coffman of the Lyric at Moweaqua operates a grist mill as well as the theatre. He says that one good picture a month can't tail up a dozen poor ones without having to call on the grist mill for help. He says he operates the machines in the booth and his wife collects the money for the producers in the box office and he grinds out chickenfeed in the mill to pay the express on the films. We told him that that looked to us like it made it easy all around.

Decatur, Ill.

Decatur doesn't look to us today like it did two years ago. The Publix houses and the Avalon are running double features at 25 cents admission at the Avalon and the Empress and 50 cents at the Lincoln Square. We will bet some stage money that they are both losing their shirts. This double feature stuff is forcing Mr. Duncan of the Alhambra to do the same thing.

Mr. Morrow, who operates the Morrow theatre, comes from our home county in Indiana. We never knew it before, but we always knew there was something the matter with him, and that's it. You can't stick these Hoosiers; they're too web-footed. Decatur knows where she can see a good show at 5 and 10 cents. We know, too, and that's at the Morrow. Then there's another thing we know, and that's where there's a good bed.

Air Exploitation for RKO Pictures Set Through NBC

The exploitation of RKO Radio pictures through the broadcasting facilities of RCA's National Broadcasting Company, promised when Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC also became president of RKO, has begun to function with the release of the first film of the 1932-33 schedule, "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

The Frank Buck feature opened at the New York Mayfair on June 17, and at the Albee, Brooklyn, June 18. Coincidentally, Mr. Buck was interviewed by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society, in a broadcast on June 16. Supported by a musical program, the interview was transmitted over a national network, originating at WEAF, New York, dominant station.

Trans-Lux Change to $1 Par Stock Will Come Up June 30

Stockholders of Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation will be asked to authorize a change in the capital stock of the company from 1,000,000 shares of no par to 1,000,000 shares of $1 par value, at a special meeting to be held June 30.

Authorization will also be sought to reduce the stated value of the capital stock outstanding to $1 a share from $7.50 a share. Stockholders in addition will consider cancellation of outstanding stock options and issuance of new options under the same terms and conditions at a lesser price for an extended term for service performed.

Saenger Defeated in Defense of Mississippi Rental Suit

A decision favoring the plaintiff has been rendered in the federal court at Meridian, Miss., in the suit of Marks-Rosenberg against the Saenger Theatres, Inc., and the Plaza Amusement Company of New Orleans, involving $63,191.20.

The litigation involved back rentals claimed due to Marks-Rosenberg on the Grand Opera House and Star theatre properties and grew out of a 25-year contract said to have been made in 1923 for use of the theatre buildings, which are not now being operated. The decree has not yet been made final.

WABASH AVENUE

CHICAGO

More than 400 exhibitors and friends of Dave Dubin and Henri Ellman were on hand to help the popular firm open their new independent film exchange, Capitol Film Corporation at 908 South Wabash. The opening was a gala affair, thoroughly enjoyed by every one as evidenced by the hole in the mountain of sandwiches and the obvious relish with which the refreshments disappeared. There were flowers and telegrams. It was an auspicious opening in every way and a splendid tribute to Ellman and Dubin.

Capitol Film Corporation has ambitious plans in the making. Already fortified with a Principal Pictures lineup that embraces 20 featurets of an interesting nature, 26 two-reel comedies, 60 single-reel subjects and 12 feature productions, the program is to be augmented with further outstanding material from important independent producers. Jack Spitzer, former president of the old Reelcraft Company, is associated with Ellman and Dubin in their new enterprise.

The folks along the Row are giving Earl Silverman, Warner exchange manager, the glad hand on his recent return to his desk after a protracted absence. Silverman has been regaining his health and vigor up in the north woods and has done a very complete job of it, having put on weight and acquired a fine coat of tan. He says he is in tiptop shape again and glad to be back in harness.

Irving Mack dropped in on the Wisconsin theatre owners' convention last week and says his arm is still lame from greeting old friends and customers.

Paramount executives and salesmen and Balaban and Katz officials held a meeting at the Drake hotel last week, during the G. O. P. convention. While the usual welcome signs to the politicians were missing around the lobby, the Paramount folks rated a big welcome sign.

If you want to know who has one of the finest campaign books along the Row ask Earl Silverman, Tom Gilliam or Percy Barr of Warners. They'll not only tell you, but demonstrate to you that S. Charles Einfeld of the home office has produced a portfolio on the new product that is the "mccoy."

Andy Sherrick, Universal publicist, is setting a pace as the Row's biggest traveler. Try and catch him between out of town jumps at the office.

Beverly Miller, who figured in a spectacular automobile accident over Decoration Day, is back on the job. All his ribs and other fractures are responding nicely to treatment, but a broken front tooth refuses to grow back to normal size.

STAGNATION!

POSSIBLY, IN ANY OTHER LINE, business activity can take a back seat and remain dormant until things begin to "look up" again. In showbusiness, it would be suicide. This has been demonstrated time and again. Circuits and small independents who crawled into their shells when they should have been out digging up business soon found themselves getting deeper and deeper into the red. Houses or groups so handled will find it mighty difficult to win back lost patronage.

Not so very long ago we spoke to the head of a large independent group who told us that business had fallen off about 25 per cent. But he had cut his overhead proportionately, so he was not particularly worried.

We happen to know that his circuit had also cut and eliminated all forms of business promotion. Exploitation is a thing of the past. Individual effort on the part of the various house managers is nil. Here is a circuit permitting no tie-ups; no business stimulating ideas or any other form of activity generally used by the more successful groups.

However, this circuit is not the only group to discard all exploitation or other forms of merchandising, and whatever comment we have to make can be applied to quite a few other situations where similar curtailment of almost every form of show-selling has ceased or eased off until it is well nigh a forgotten relic of the once prosperous past. At the same time we are fondly hoping that these remarks will have a stimulating effect on all those who are slowly sinking into the mire of inactivity.

Regardless of surrounding conditions, of competition or lack of competition, we feel that cutting out all merchandising efforts is not building for the future or keeping the patronage you now enjoy. It takes a lot of persuasion for the public to spend money these days and when the sum total of your persuasive methods consist of the name of the picture on your marquee and in your programs, then you are not fighting for business or encouraging folk in your community to spend an extra evening at your theatre.

Sooner or later your house, or group of houses, will fall into a rut and literally become stagnant. This stagnation takes on various forms of serious ailments such as loss of "guts," breakdown of aggressiveness, suffocation of ambition, shrinkage of creative ability, and, general laziness. Any one of these ailments can become fatal if allowed to continue. The combination is sure death after a brief period.

We can recall when a certain group of houses teemed with activity. Managers tried to outdo each other in arranging local tieups; the organization spirit was marvelous; the desire to prove their ability prompted and encouraged them to spend endless hours doping out new ideas to build up business. In short, it was one of the livest outfits east of the Mississippi and their profits were reflected accordingly.

Why, then, did they ever cease this activity? What reason can one attach to their reversing what was conceded to be a successful method of operation? Certainly not box office results. If they were to use that as a guide they would be doing more promoting and exploitation than ever before.

Perhaps it was "super-efficiency." Perhaps this once successful and highly profitable group was bitten by that strange insect called "organization." Or maybe, on the other hand, bad judgment in the selection of its executives had something to do with it all. Can one really lay a finger directly on the reason? But most any one can point to the main factor—"Stagnation." They have stopped the circulation of blood within the veins of the entire outfit and the further extremities are beginning to rot. Gangrene poisoning has set in, and unless they arrest the affliction at once, the poison is going to spread. Unless they restore blood circulation the rotting process will continue until it eats the very heart out of what was once so full of life and animation.

Beware of inactivity. It breeds discontent, stifles aggressive and creative ideas and is responsible for loss of sleep for all concerned. Better to padlock the doors of your theatres before you allow them to become worm-eaten through lack of use. Better to sell out while there still remains something to sell than to watch a life's work go to smash on the rocks of poor administrative judgment.

Every man interested in theatre operation must be a fighter. Business has stopped drifting to your doors; it now rushes by. You must build dams to direct the flow to your box office and you must keep those dams in good repair through the intelligent use of business promotion activity.

ELABORATE SHOW AT ROXY WAS PUT OVER ACE-HIGH BY ENNIS

Not since last January when the Roxy Theatre, New York City, showed "Delicious," has the big 6,200 seat motion picture house turned in a gross to compare with that on the recent double-barreled show consisting of the Friar's Frolic and a feature picture, "Society Girl."

Bert Ennis, newly appointed advertising and publicity director, elected to call the offering "The Million Dollar Stage and Screen Show" and this line was pounded home in lights, advance trailer, lobby, programs, newspaper ads and street car card copy. For the first time in many a moon the stage attraction was billed 'way over top of anything else, although the film was billed as Dunne's Greatest in order to break down any thought on part of the public that the screen offering was not up to standard.

Another innovation, as far as the Roxy and other Broadway de luxers are concerned, was a real old fashioned circus bally in the form of a street parade. As illustrated here, the Friars marched from their club house on 48th street to the Roxy entrance. The marchers included all principals, preceded by a band and Roxyettes in open motor cars. This stunt was started at 6 P. M. in order to catch the crowds leaving office buildings at that time. Traffic was tied up and much applause from all sides greeted the marchers.

HARRY HARRIS STILL ON THE JOB OVER IN LINCOLNSHIRE HOUSE

It's been some time since we've had an opportunity to mention the activities of Harry Harris, Club representative in Lincoln, England, and manager of the Exchange Kinema in that city, but the following will be evidence that he is still on the job of selling shows and building good will for his theatre.

A newspaper photo shows a group of confectioners making merry at the Annual Whist Drive and Fancy Costume Ball, an event that Harris tied up with by offering an award of Half-a-Guinea for the best impersonation of Jackie Cooper or Mitzi Green in "Skippy." A teaser one-sheet, paid for and distributed by the Confectioners' Association, stated that the judging would take place at the theatre and also gave mention to the forthcoming attraction in a large box. The local newspaper published a four-column photo of the group and ran a story in the news section. All other advertising and publicity obtained by the Association mentioned the tie-up with the Kinema.

We're glad to get a line on work done by our overseas Club member and will look forward to hearing further from him.

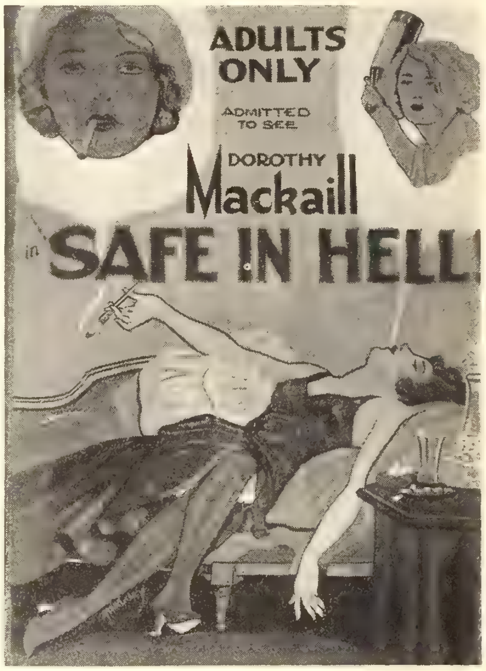
NO CHILDREN ANGLE STRESSED BY MAXEY IN RECENT CAMPAIGN

Special window displays of the type illustrated here and the "no children angle" were used by Frank Maxey, manager of the Cairo Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico, to boost business 'way above average on "Safe in Hell."

The art reproduced here, as well as possible considering lack of sharpness in print, must have been quite a striking piece of work. Note the curl of smoke from both cigarette and lips of woman ballooning into two character shots. Between the two the "Adults Only" line is stressed. We don't know whether Frank or his art man turned out the work, so will have to let credit go until next time.



We note that Maxey not only talked the city fathers out of a lot of fire fighting apparatus to exploit "Fireman," a short time ago, but succeeded in getting them to loan him the Firemen's Band for that occasion. All trucks were bannered and the fire laddies turned out in full uniform to help the good work along.

Perhaps Maxey will shoot along some other examples of the poster and other display work being turned out at the Cairo. If he'll send us some good, sharp prints, we'll see that they are included in the series of poster work run from time to time in this department.

WORLD PREMIERE IN KENTUCKY CITY MADE BIG HIT WITH FANS

Lexington, Ky., had its first world premiere a short time ago when "Lena Rivers" played the Strand Theatre. The campaign was handled by Miss Anna Bell Ward, well known showwoman in that city, and a half page ad in a local newspaper, featuring a display of a long stack of books, announced the fact and quoted favorable criticisms from prominent clubwomen. The picture was booked for a four-day run and was held over for a full week, which, according to R. M. Savini, of the New York Tiffany office, was the first time this had happened in over a year.

CAMPAIGN MADE BY BEN COHEN ON "MIRACLE MAN"

One of the most elaborate campaigns ever put on in Hazelton, Pa., was waged a short time ago on "Miracle Man" by Ben Cohen, manager of the Grand Theatre. Highlights consisted of several effective tie-ups with local firms, full and half-page cooperative ads, a massive front display, cooperation from the clergy and city schools and a vast amount of free space in a number of newspapers.

The first shot was fired from the screen two weeks in advance in the form of a trailer announcing the picture. Ten days in advance, 200 teaser quarter-sheets were posted. Five days in advance, 200 window cards and 100 one-sheets were posted in the most desirable locations in city and surrounding towns within a radius of 20 miles. Free stories and display advertisements were placed in five weekly newspapers one week in advance. The daily newspaper campaign, consisting of teaser ads, scene mats and prepared stories, were started five days prior to opening.

One of the free ads resulting from the several tie-ups is illustrated on this page. In addition to this half-page, the theatre also received advertising for three days at no cost to management. Like other ads promoted, this one gave the theatre the better break. Another deal made with a large music store brought the theatre a half-page and other ads in exchange for a lobby display. This same store carried a window display on picture. A full page ad, based on title, was promoted among a number of merchants and ran in both daily papers for one day. Permission granted a bakery for give-away of an auto on theatre stage also netted 30 inches of free display in both papers.

As the result of a visit made the Supt. of Schools, Cohen was granted permission to display window cards in 18 school buildings in the city. The Supt. of Schools in 26 other townships was also contacted and permission secured for similar displays. Guest tickets were sent to every clergyman in the city.

Soul-wrenching drama! Heart-healing romance! The bitter and the sweet of life unfolded before you as a miraculous melody of the actor's art — warming the very fibres of your life with the benediction of its power, its glory and its majesty. The Miracle Man — the miracle film!

BOYS and GIRLS, HERE'S THE BIG NEWS! TOMORROW IS

"SNYDER DAY"

A Bottle of Snyder's Chocolate Milk for Every Boy and Girl Who Attends the Regular Kiddie Club Saturday Morning Matinee at Ten O clock

AT THE GRAND THEATRE

The front represented the biggest thing of its kind ever attempted in Hazleton, covering the entire front and two sides of the marquee and measuring 9 feet in height. To properly illuminate the display, four 1,000 Watt flood lights were placed across the street and on adjoining properties and trained on the theatre. Special, full length panel frames for underneath marquee, for displaying 8 x 10 stills and cutouts from three-sheets, were also used. A banner with cutout head of Hobart Bosworth, Miracle Man in cutout letters and names of cast, extended the full width of the theatre.

Despite an extremely hot week the picture played to exceptional business, due to Cohen's untiring efforts, and we'll certainly have to hand it to this Club member for his knack of promoting ads, free space and other publicity stunts at no cost to his house. Even that free space wizard, Harry Stearn, will have to look to his laurels, for after a glance through a bundle of tear sheets it would appear that Cohen is right on his heels.

Dannenberg's Tab

Sid Dannenberg and his assistant, Mort Goodman, a publicity and advertising team which is setting a fast pace out in Cleveland, Ohio, for the Warner Theatres in that zone, recently made a deal with a local print shop for the printing of a four-page tab for the Lake, Variety and Uptown theatres, at a cost of $4.50 per thousand. The front page was done in typical tab newspaper style, the second and third pages carried a variety of readers on "The Mouthpiece" and the fourth page was sold to two local advertisers.

POPHAM GAVE SHORT FEATURE HEAVY PLUG AT WINNIPEG HOUSE

Either a goodly portion of the population of Winnipeg, Canada, is of Russian extraction or else a herald issued by William A. Popham was a gag used in connection with his three day campaign on a short feature, "Soviet Russia," a film released by the Soviet Government, for one side was printed entirely in Russ and the other in English. However, the most important angle appears to lie in the fact that Popham devoted fully 75 per cent of space to the short, subordinating the two features on the program.

It's too bad we didn't have this one to include in the Club's short subject section we published a short time ago, but it's never too late to mention an instance of this sort. Popham's heavy campaign on this short feature was exceptional.

Pictures To Politics

Spencer Sladdin, who has been associated with various theatre circuits in the New York and New Jersey zone, in exploitation activities, has forsaken pictures for the time being and joined the Roosevelt Business and Professional League to assist in the presidential nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Sladdin was a legislative correspondent in Albany, N. Y., when Governor Roosevelt was a State Senator.

STEIN MADE A DEAL WITH RADIO STATION FOR 5,000 CIRCULARS

When exploiting "Trial of Vivienne Ware," I. J. Stein, manager of the Broadway Theatre, Astoria, N. Y., made a tie-up with radio station WWRL whereby 5,000 attractive heralds were distributed free of cost to theatre. Copy read, "Listen to the thrilling broadcast of the Radio Drama That Electrified The Air, etc., etc.—Then See This Thrilling Drama at the Broadway."

The radio station was broadcasting a portion of the drama every afternoon at approximately the same time the picture played Stein's house, an opportunity which was immediately taken advantage of by this Club member. An item of 5,000 free heralds printed on coated stock is not one to laugh off these days.

JACK WRIGHT DOES NOT NEGLECT SALE OF SHORT SUBJECTS

Evidence that short features are not neglected in newspaper ads made up by J. E. Wright, manager of the Liberty Theatre, La Grande, Ore., came to our attention some time ago but not in time to be included in the Club's last short subject section. However, it's not too late to record that Wright is giving the little fellows a generous break. In addition, he keeps on hand all available stock one sheets on shorts and uses them in the lobby.

We regret that some of the above could not be reproduced in the section mentioned and hope that this misfortune will not discourage Wright in the sending in of other material from time to time. He and others on the Mercy circuit are live showmen and have many ideas which we know will benefit their fellow Club members.

HART MADE A TIE-UP WITH NEWSPAPER FOR GAG TO NAME SCENES

Identification of scene stills from three of Richard Barthelmess' recent pictures and a tie-up with a local newspaper for the publicizing of the stunt, was an effective interest-getter used by Ed Hart when he was in charge of the Troy Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

The stunt ran for three days, and the idea was to get readers to clip the four-column photos from the paper and send them to the editor in charge. As a reminder for readers, Hart gave the paper a list of several Barthelmess pictures, which included those involved. Cash awards totaling $25 and guest tickets to the theatre were offered for the most correct answers, neatness in layout, etc.

We'll tell you more about Ed Hart, long a consistent and constructive contributor to this department, just as soon as we hear from him again. We hear rumors that he will again locate in Utica, N. Y., and if this be true we know that he will have a lot more show-selling stunts to pass along to his fellow Round Tablers.

Warner-Frisco's Tab

A four page tabloid gotten up by the management of the Warner Theatre, San Francisco, Calif., proved an excellent means of attracting patronage to "Man Who Played God." It was printed on green stock and headed, "The Daily Gazette," with a streamer head across news columns reading, "Suicide Try Is Balked." A running story in newspaper style reported the highlights of the Arliss film. The balance of the publication was given over to news of Arliss and other members of the cast. Ten thousand copies were handed out by urchins yelling "Extra" along the main roughfare.

Boucher's Anniversary

On the occasion of his eighth wedding anniversary, Frank Boucher, chief of the Capitol Theatre, Winchester, Va., and well known member of the Round Table Club, signalized the event by staging an informal house warming at the "Boucher's New Chateau," Washington, D. C.

DAVIDSON MADE A REALISTIC FRONT!

Realism and depth were obtained in a front made for "Night World" by Sid Davidson, manager of the Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. It may not be discernible in the above photo but the enlargements at either side of entrance were used as a background for the cutouts, which were placed in front of them with space between, similar to the arrangement of wing pieces on a stage. And how do you like the attractively cut title letters, and the two pairs of crossed legs?

TIE-UP LYKES MADE WITH PHOTOGRAPHER IS BOOSTING TRADE

Not so long ago we described a tie-up with a photographer by J. E. Lykes, manager of the Park Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, whereby patrons became entitled to one large portrait free of charge through attendance at the theatre for four consecutive weeks. Since then he has revised the card that was used to advertise the stunt and we must agree with him that it has been improved.

He's still using his mimeograph to excellent advantage and there's a neat piece of art work in a circle in the upper left hand corner. Space is reserved at the bottom for four small boxes labeled first, second, third and fourth weeks. He extended the time limit on the deal three weeks. The photographer is very much interested in the tie-up and has made a 22x28 enlargement of the card for use in window display and lobby. He is also cooperating in every possible way.

McLEOD HELD FREE SHOW FOR NEWSBOYS AND MADE FRONT PAGE

Front page mention in a leading newspaper of a recent attraction was secured by Ray McLeod, manager of the Beacon Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., as the result of a tie-up made with the publishers.

In return for the courtesy of issuing invitations to all carriers to be guests of the theatre at a special matinee of "It's Tough To Be Famous," the newspaper came through with a special box and cut of Fairbanks in the lower right hand corner of the front page. Copy read, "It's Tough To Be Famous But—it's a great break for Vancouver Sun carriers who, through the courtesy of Manager McLeod of the Beacon Theatre, will see," etc., etc.

This ad drifted into Club headquarters with a request for reproduction. Somehow or other we gathered that whoever sent it didn't think much of it and expected us to pass an opinion. But we're gonna fool them. You draw your own conclusions and give it whatever rating you deem fit.

For your further information this was a three column by six and one quarter inch ad. An awful lot of space as space is charged in these "cut the budget" days.

ROUND TABLE BIOGRAPHIES

Al Zimbalist

At the age of fourteen and one-half years Al Zimbalist happened to be hanging around one of the doors of the Old Biograph studios in New York City and Johnny Hines came along and shoved him inside, thus starting another publicity man on a career which so far has carried him to the post of assistant advertising and publicity director for the Warner-Stanley-Fabian circuit in New Jersey.

Al was born in New York City, March 3, 1908, and received his education in the Stuyvesant High School and the College of the City of New York. During his early years he came under the guiding hand of A. P. Waxman, of Warner Bros., when he started as an office boy with that organization. Later on, while with Warner, he did a little side act for the "N. Y. Daily Mirror," and also contributed to a Hollywood trade paper. His flair for journalism led him into the press book and advertising field, and finally to the job he holds today.

After working hours Al edits "Howdy," a snappy, weekly organ, designed to aid the managers on his circuit, and he's ever ready to help out any of them with exploitation ideas. While he never actually managed a theatre, he's been hanging around them for many years, checking, etc., and there can be no question that he knows his way around.

One of these days you may see his name linked to the authorship of a hit show, for we understand he has a couple of them on the market, one being considered for production next Fall. He's still a single man, girls, but tells us he has a fine dog. He thinks Harry Kalmine, his boss, is the cats as far as theatre circuit operators go and a few other points; in fact, he thinks that Harry is just about the best around this neck of the woods, and does not mind if we put it in quotes.

POLICE GAVE JOHN ELLIOTT SPLENDID HELP ON NEW FILM

The local police department gave whole-hearted cooperation to John R. Elliott, manager of the RKO Palace Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, when he exploited "Radio Patrol."

The Police Chief loaned the theatre a regular siren for placement atop the marquee and gave permission to blast it at intervals. As an advance bally two days prior to opening of picture, one of the department's radio patrol cars was detailed around the city. A banner on the car read, "Don't fail to see Radio Patrol and get the inside on Police Operation," etc.

Another stunt that attracted a lot of attention was the holding of regular morning roll call of police in front of the Palace Theatre, the first time in the history of the department that a move of this kind has been made. All men not on assignment, or who could be relieved from duty, saw the picture's first showing as guests of the theatre. Following the civic parade on Memorial Day the police marchers reassembled and paraded to the theatre for the special showing.

Stunts on the above picture are just beginning to reach Club headquarters and unless we're very much mistaken many of our members will avail themselves the opportunities to make tie-ups with their local police departments. We're glad to note that Elliott made out so well and trust we will hear likewise from other Round Tablers.

Schneider Promoted

Z. W. Schneider, formerly assistant manager of the Liberty Theatre, Pasco, Wash., was recently promoted to the post of manager of the Liberty Theatre, Sunnyside, Wash., another Mercy house. He started in two years ago as doorman in a Pasco house, put in six months in the booth, and, thanks to Manager Milt Wight's coaching, we now find him at the helm. We know he'll make good.

FRANK HILL'S ADS SHOW WHAT CAN BE DONE WITHOUT ART

Although we've often had occasion to make mention of the attractive newspaper display ads turned out by Frank Hill, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Walla Walla, Wash., several examples at hand again warrant an expression of admiration for his work and the local conditions which permit such lavish use of type, scene mats, borders, etc.

Further, Hill's ads are also an excellent means of showing what can be accomplished without the aid of a house art department. Note the one reproduced on this page. Some of the illustrations are regular exchange mats and one or two have been taken from the newspaper's own mat service. Regarding the latter, many of these ads show evidence that the newspaper has generously cooperated with Hill in the matter of digging up appropriate borders, effective type styles and various other little gadgets which go toward setting off ads. One thing appears necessary, however, to achieve these effects, and that is a rate which allows such liberal use of space. The Walla Walla papers appear generous in this respect.

A Correction!

In the issue of June 4th the Club pages carried a picture of the Steel Pier in Atlantic City and a caption in which we credited Ed. Corcoran as publicity director for the manifold attractions on the Pier.

It appears that the party responsible for sending us the photo and the information regarding same was in error, as Harry Volk and not Corcoran handles the publicity there.

We therefore take this means of noting the correction for the benefit of those who may have drawn the wrong conclusion, and to let you all know that Ed. Corcoran's connection with the Pier was in the capacity of Director for the Hollywood Motion Picture Exhibit, which has been a yearly feature of the Pier for the past four years.

Here's hoping that everyone is now satisfied and happy. O. K., Volk? O. K., Corcoran?

PLUGGING SUMMER SHOWS IN THE LOBBY

The attractive display pictured above was made up for J. J. Dempsey, manager of the Strand Theatre, Lowell, Mass., by house artist John McAuliffe. Apparently the center portion for current attraction and side panels for enlarged stills are constructed to allow for the necessary changes. Note the line on bottom portion reading "Right Thru the Summer—Every Show a Hit!"

HILLYER STEPS OUT WITH A LEAP YEAR GAG THAT CLICKS!

Our good friend, M. N. Hillyer, manager of the Tarkio Theatre, in Tarkio, Missouri, surely doesn't let any grass grow under his feet, as witness the little gag throwaway he used on "LOVERS COURAGEOUS" when it played his house.

When folded, the front of this throwaway measured about 4x6 inches and imprinted on the front was the following "FOR WOMEN ONLY! (Any man reading this does so at his own risk)."

We are reprinting the inside of it so that you may have the entire copy for your own use.

GIRLS

IT'S LEAP YEAR!
What Are You Going to Do About It?

Here's Just What You've Been Looking For!
10 Easy Rules For Leap Year Proposals
Guaranteed to get you a husband in less than 3 trials, or your money back! (oh, yeah?)

Here they are!—

1 For best results, select a prospective victim dumb enough to not have the slightest idea what you're driving at.
(We've Warned You!)

2 Work up confidence and "that nonchalant manner" by practicing before a mirror—or perhaps by necking a parlor pillow.
(Maybe a Murad Would Help)

3 While not essential, it is a swell idea to establish the "old-fashioned" atmosphere by cooking up a batch of home made taffy. Your victim will be too polite to refuse, and by the time you've gotten around to the proposal, he'll be too sick to say "no."
(Enthusiastic users of our method say this one never fails.)

4 Phone the chump and get him to walk into the trap by telling him "Tommy" has a new set of kitten's, or that the radio needs fixing.
(As a last resort, tell him the family has gone to the movies)

5 When he arrives, 30 minutes late, grab his hat and hide it, then tell him you simply l-o-o-o-v-e" men who do unexpected things, and you adore waiting for him.
(The hat business is the catch. Only a terrific shock would cause him to leave without it. In books they always grab their hat——remember?)

6 Turn down all the lights and corner him on the divan. Give him a little while to soak up a little romantic feeling.
(Now's the time to feed him the taffy.)

7 Tell him all the hooey you can think of—about sunsets—and. moonlight—and mountains by the sea—a cottage in the hills—a cozy breakfast nook—and baby makes three . . . . go on, we started it.
If you read "True Stories," this will probably last some time.)

8 Grab him around the neck and gaze "soulfully" into his eyes. Register emotion . . . . or something.
(Don't go at this too vigorously, or he'll think you're having a fit.)

9 By this time the victim will be so completely unconscious that anything could be put over on him. If you can still talk—ask him if he eats crackers in bed!
(That one should "get" anyone!)

10 If you have carefully followed these rules, he wouldn't marry you if you were the Queen of Sheba, so grab his hand (and his hat) and drag him over to

The Tarkio Theatre to see Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans in the leap-year romantic hit, "Lovers Courageous. It's about two kids in love . . . . and their game fight for happiness. Sunday and Monday, February 14-15. Midnight Preview Saturday at 11:15! (Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy will be there, too!)

P. S.—Which is exactly what we wanted you to do when we started all this.

The best part of this stunt is that it can work with any picture and not necessarily tied to "LOVERS' COURAGE." It's a good gag, and while we haven't read the results of it, we are sure it did the trick.

To the right is a reproduction of a herald and ad used in conjunction with a local trading campaign engineered by Hillyer. This will be described in detail at a future date.

POSTER ART WORK FOR THE THEATRE!

Here is another poster from James B. Watson of the Capitol Theatre in Pottsville, Pa., and further proof of the ability of this artist to inject eye-arresting showmanship into his fine art work.

It is not difficult to visualize this poster in full size and colors. As a matter of fact we can picture it now either in his three sheet frame with an attractive surrounding mat in a cool pastel shade, or set up separately on an easel and illuminated from baby spots concealed from the patrons' view.

Watson has already contributed some unusually fine posters and besides the one pictured here we have several others to follow shortly. Incidentally, we are immensely gratified with the fine response to our recent request for additional posters from new contributors and we have some twenty new ones all received within the past ten days. These will be reproduced at the rate of two or more a week until we are right up to date.

IT'S LEAP YEAR AND HERE'S A GOOD STUNT FROM JOHN B. GOODWIN

A leap year stunt that turned out to be a most successful one for the plugging of a current attraction was tried out not long ago by John B. Goodwin, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Newport, R. I.

He tied in with a local newspaper; the newspaper in turn publishing a story about the stunt. The gist of the story was that the girls were to ask their boy friends to accompany them to see the picture, and the girls paying the "freight." The girls paid the regular admission charge for their own ticket and then received another one for their boy friend by paying an additional ten cents for a service guest ticket. At time of purchasing ticket, the girls were to say, "I've brought a friend with me!"

This stunt created plenty of gossip about town; girls were asking each other if they were going to bring a boy friend and which one and countless other questions which all helped to publicize the picture at the Paramount.

It's still leap year and will be until midnight, Dec. 31, hence we're passing along Goodwin's gag. There are lots of other stunts which can be adapted to the occasion, such as leap year weddings, etc., and these have already been discussed in past issues. One or more of them might turn out to be a pleasing deviation from regular run of effort.

A CHURCH BULLETIN PLUGGED A PICTURE FOR SMALLEY HOUSE

The following quotation from the bulletin of a church in Hamilton, N. Y., received front page mention a conservative upper New York state newspaper. It appears to be an excellent example of what can be accomplished in the way of free publicity on pictures of "Broken Lullaby" type. George Miller is manager of Smalley's Hamilton.

"Another way in which peace lovers may help develop peace is to urge their friends to see "Broken Lullaby," recently renamed from "The Man I Killed" (coming soon to Smalley's Hamilton Theatre). This powerful picture presents not so much the physical as the spiritual tragedy of war, the curse that armed combat puts upon a sensitive man's soul. It will increase anyone's hate for war, the supreme enemy of mankind, to quote the 1924 Methodist Discipline."

All local clergymen and prominent educators were invited to view the picture when it was presented.

KENNEDY STILL USES NEWSPAPER TIE-UPS TO INCREASE TRADE

We note that Richard M. Kennedy, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., is still making his tie-ups with local newspapers, this time a deal with one of them for the classified ad page.

In a long, two column display ad the newspaper offered a pair of guest tickets to those inserting classified ads to run a period of seven days. Space in the ad was split between offer by the newspaper and current attraction at the theatre. Apparently the theatre gave the tickets in exchange for the space, or perhaps sold them at reduced rates.

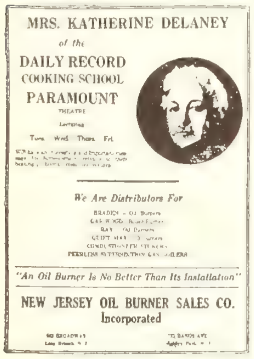
THIRD SUCCESSFUL COOKING STUNT PUT OVER BY TOM PHELAN



MRS. KATHERINE DELANEY

"An Oil Burner Is No Better Than Its Installation"

NEW JERSEY OIL BURNER SALES CO.

We're a trifle tardy in telling Club members that Thomas Phelan, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Long Branch, N. J., promoted his Third Semi-Annual Cooking School stunt, but he put it over again, and after a glance through a number of copies of a leading local newspaper, we're forced to the conclusion that when better cooking schools are promoted, Phelan will promote them.

We've told you all about this cooking school in past issues of this publication, but in order to keep alive interest in one of the best of institutional stunts, we again call attention to the fact that this deal was put over with the co-operation of a local newspaper. Aside from the fact that the name of Paramount is slammed at readers on page after page, the stunt is instrumental in bringing into the theatre many women who are not theatre-goers.

Samples of two ads secured absolutely free of charge by Phelan are herewith reproduced. One is a full page given him by the cooperating newspaper to push "Man Who Played God," with just a few lines of credit taken at bottom portion by newspaper to mention the cooking school tie-up.

The other small reproduction is an excellent example of how the name Paramount appeared in the many cooperative ads secured from local firms for the occasion.

In just one issue of the newspaper we note that the Paramount was mentioned in 17 advertisements, an editorial on the cooking school, 2 front page stories, 2 readers, and the full page co-op ad. One of the front page stories carried a two-column head reading, "1,000 Housewives Jam Theatre for Second Record-Homemakers School." The day before there was another story which stated that 700 women attended the school. "Record" is the name of the paper which sponsors the deal. "Homemakers" is the DeBoth Homemakers School, presided over by the Mrs. Delaney, mentioned in the ads and stories.

Before we sign off with a reminder to give serious thought to promotion of a cooking school such as Phelan has under way, let us tell you about a gag that he pulled some time ago when playing "Shanghai Express." Tommie has a stand-in with a Chinee laundryman down in his town, and prevailed upon him to design an original poster to provide some bonafide atmosphere. His friend came through and the gag was good for a story on the amusement page.

But to return to the subject of cooking school tie-ups. Seriously, we believe that Phelan has a corking scheme under way in his town for the building of patronage and good will for his theatre. Its greatest value, however, lies in the fact that every reader of the newspaper is made Paramount-minded while the tie-up is in force.

COOLING SYSTEM TRAILERS!

There probably isn't an exhibitor who has a Cooling System in his theatre that doesn't realize that the temperature of his theatre is his outstanding asset during the summer months. In fact, quite often it is even more valuable than the program itself . . . this is a proven fact . . . thousands and thousands of patrons during the hot summer months and especially during real hot spells seek shelter in your theatre where they obtain temporary relief from the broiling sun and scorching heat of the streets.

The average theater has a lot of money invested in their Cooling System. When they first put it in, while it was new to them, they got behind it . . . plugged it . . . it is just as essential to do this now as it was before, because like the iceman, when the weather is hot, you have got something to shout about . . . you have something that there is a demand for . . . you may not always be able to get the best of pictures which you can sell without cooling and relief from the heat . . . and don't forget this cannot be done with a trailer on your screen this week, a little notice in your ad and your program. You have got to keep it before them every single day so as to preclude the possibility of their forgetting about it.

Utilize any and every means at your disposal . . . programs . . . newspapers . . . lobby and most of all your screen because of your screen you can utilize a trailer that will sell your cooling system in the most effective manner.

Prepare a series of five cooling system trailers. Tell about the comfort and relief that your theatre has in store for them which can be used prior to the starting of your cooling system and the others remind your patrons of the fact that your cooling system is in operation and how delightful and pleasant it makes your theatre.

When you sell your patrons you are going just a step further than that, because if they are sold on the idea that your theatre has a wonderful cooling system . . . it is a cool and delightful spot to go to in the summer time and if you get them thoroughly sold on it, they are going out and sell the idea to others. The word of mouth advertising that can be gained in this respect is tremendous.

Don't wait until the hot weather hits you . . . start now . . . institute a regular campaign to sell the outstanding attraction that you have to offer your patrons during the summer months.

Utilize your screen . . . newspapers . . . programs . . . lobby displays . . . make your theatre look cool . . . remember now is the time to plug your Cooling System . . . don't wait until it is too late.

GROVE PROMOTING CO-OP ADS AMONG LOCAL MERCHANTS

Here is a reproduction of one of two co-operative ads promoted not long ago by H. D. Grove, manager of the Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Ill. The half-page was entirely paid for by a dairy concern and the stunt celebrated a nickel matinee. One cap from a bottle of the advertised milk and five cents entitled a youngster to admittance to the show any time before 6 P. M. on Saturday. In addition to the splendid break received by the theatre or space, note mention of attraction in box in upper portion of the ad.

The other free ad was a three column affair a half page in depth secured through a tie-up with the local street car company. This ad was headed, "It's Good Business and Real Pleasure to—Go By Trolley—Ride the street car when you go to see Will Rogers in Business and Pleasure at the Fort Theatre." As in the ad described in the preceding paragraph, picture and theatre again predominated.

That was nice work on the part of Grove and there's plenty of evidence in the two ads of his sales ability. Grabbing the large end of cost free ads appears to be one of this Round Tabler's specialties.

ROUND TABLE BIOGRAPHIES

Starr A. Duell was born in Chicago, Ill., August 22, 1906, which makes him 25 years old at this writing. Apparently he migrated to California at an early age, for at 15 we find him in Alhambra, Calif., attending high school and ushering at the Alhambra Theatre.

Stan A. Duell

Later on in life he went to San Francisco and ushered for a Publix house, until he was made assistant manager of the St. Francis Theatre. He also acted as treasurer for both California and Grenada Theatres, and after taking a short leave of absence was assigned to the Paramount Theatre in Seattle, Wash., as assistant manager. He was later transferred to the Paramount Theatre, in Portland, Ore., and again returned to the Metropolitan in Seattle, remaining there until the house was closed in 1930.

Duell has managed two theatres during his career in show business—the Metropolitan in Seattle and the Paramount in Provo, Utah. He is at present located at the latter named house and, according to his statement, expects to remain in the show selling game for the rest of his life.

Many of our members located in communities similar to Hayman's are putting monthly calendars to good use in the outlying and rural districts and find little difficulty in finding places to hang them up. This one appears to be strictly a piece of theatre advertising, no ads being carried to offset cost of printing and distributing. We believe it is distinctive because of legibility of all copy.

TRUCK PLUGGED SHORT

Picture above shows one of the 18 trucks promoted by Charles Smakwitz, Warner showman in Albany, N. Y., to plug Babe Ruth shorts for a full week. The deal was made with a popular local newspaper and in return the theatre gave the paper screen publicity.

R. B. SMITH has purchased the Lake Theatre, Lake Providence, La., from Ira McCaskell. Eugene Johnson has taken over operation of the Princess Theatre, Roseau, Minn.

"WAKE UP, MANAGERS"

Ted Toddy, of Atlanta, Offers Some Excellent Suggestions to Showmen Going Haywire!

THE old cry of the weaklings must stop. The self-pity and bunch of hoke that goes along with it must stop. Exhibitors and managers must awaken to the fact that they have pictures to sell. Either they must become wide awake and join the ranks of live wire managers or some hundreds will join the line of job seekers. The tip-off is given to you now. Straight from the shoulder and based on observation and pure logic. Either take it, obey it, or suffer the consequences.

The most radical change in the history of motion pictures, a change that concerns every individual connected with the industry, from porter to chief executives, will be in effect before very long. This change has been due for some time and, regardless of what one might say, is of absolute necessity.

Manpower. Manpower, is in demand. Theatres must be run by human individuals, human brains and human action. The success of the theatre, from the 100 seat house to the 5,000 seat house, is dependent upon and solely left to the responsibility of the manager. Every theatre in the country, every employee of the theatre, and every manager is on the spot. Theatres are not coming out of the red. Something is wrong, and a 100 to 1 shot, it is the fellow who is asleep in the beautiful chair in the manager's office.

Go After Business!

A successful manager of a theatre must employ the same practice as the successful manager of a haberdashery store, grocery store, or what have you. Go after business. Get out and do something. Watch your house. Holler, exploit, advertise—let the town know that you are operating a theatre and offering entertainment inside of that theatre. What in the thunder are you there for? Your secretary can take care of your office; never mind your office work. Get out and stir up some business. You are selling pictures. Well, sell them. Don't play golf or go swimming or try to be a politician. You are paid to run a house, not to ramble on the golf greens or chew a politician's cigar. Don't leave everything to your assistants. Work with them. Help them. Study your attractions. Read your press books, and carry on yourself.

Merchandising—Always!

The success of the motion picture theatre is based solely and only on exploitation, publicity and advertising. Every manager should know every phase of publicity and advertising, or stop managing a theatre. Titles are the bunk, as well as so-called office hours. Director of this or director of that means nothing. Stop being called Mr. So-and-So, forget you are the manager of the house, and then you will get somewhere. How well do you know your newspaper editor? Who is the manager of the classified page? Who is the radio announcer in your town? Do you know the heads of societies in your town? How well do you know this or that? You get my point, don't you?

Spend To Make Money!

For a long time you have been told and shown that in order to make money you must spend money. The war is not over. It is necessary to fight for your audience. Go out and spend some dough. Take some space in newspapers, take a large space, bring out the old bally truck, plaster your town with 24 sheets, 3's and singles. Work in your local tieups. Contact your societies and local organizations and keep those contacts tiptop all the time. Become a regular fellow. Work every angle you can . . . then watch your house turn to the good old black side of the ledger.

How many managers keep posted on advertising and exploitation stunts that have been pulled by some other town? How many managers follow the trend of theatres . . . why some are a success and others failures? This material has been on your desk almost since your house was built. Every trade paper carries this news and information. Every press book gives you all the assistance necessary. Yet you'll ask how it can be done. Forget some of those individual, outstanding ideas of yours, if you are doubtful. Just get the old stunt book out, the press book dusted off . . . and go to work. You have a mine of stunts for your own town . . . already prepared and tested.

Managers Who Manage!

Another thing, the most vital one of them all. Every manager is employed for the sole purpose of managing A THEATRE, not to manage himself. Spend every minute of your day, every line of publicity, every story on your picture and theatre, not on yourself. That's common sense. Your public comes in to see your picture and theatre and not to pay you a social call. A good fellow is a great help to the success of the theatre, but at the same time, your house must get all the breaks in every way.

Stop here, consider and study. Take your own house, the very house you manage. Study it thoroughly, and whatever you do, use pure common sense and thought of every day logic. Lo and behold, you will see the way out. Don't kid yourself now. By doing so, you are only kidding your job, because theatre owners, both independent and chain, are all fed up on the old bunk. Either do or get out. If you don't want to get out, then get busy and do it NOW.

Gurnette on the Job

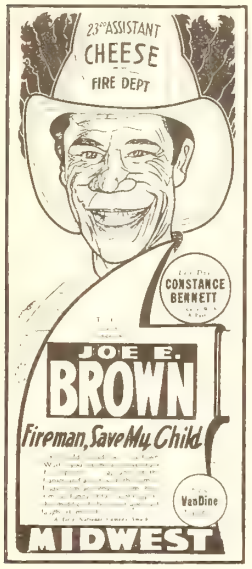
Judging from the appearance of the amusement page of a Santa Rosa, Calif., newspaper, Barney Gurnette, manager of the California Theatre in that city, still has his health and knack of dropping around to see his editor friends. A tear sheet we have at hand, half of which is devoted to theatrical news, is fully 90 per cent Gurnett-California readers. All of which must mean something.

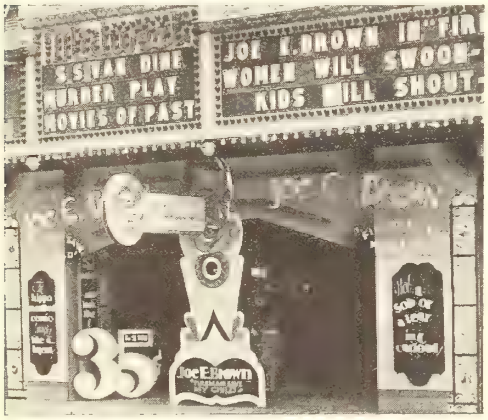
SCHOEPPEL OBTAINED GOOD RESULTS WHEN SELLING BROWN FILM



Following is John E. Schoeppel's contribution to the prize contest being conducted by Warner Bros. for best campaigns on "Fireman, Save My Child." Schoeppel manages the Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., and when selling this picture he kept in mind that good old formula of maximum results at minimum expense. A variety of routine and novel exploitation and advertising produced excellent results. Zone Manager George Henger and the entire local Warner organization put their shoulders to the wheel.

Practically all ideas used in this campaign originated from within the local group of showmen, as is indicated in advance newspaper copy. Pepper Martin, world series baseball hero, makes his home in Oklahoma City and the baseball angle was immediately tied up with him. All newspaper advertising at that time and a portion of lobby ads hammered home—"Meet the Only Guy Who can Make Pepper Martin Look like a Boob." A seven-foot cutout of Brown in the lobby carried the same copy front and back. The idea behind the copy was to attract masculine and kiddie trade.

Loan of an old-fashioned firebell and a siren from the local department greatly helped with the presentation of a novel trailer. As it hit the screen ushers behind the curtain hammered on the bell while others turned the crank of the siren. This produced a startling effect in the theatre. As soon as sound hit the screen noise was silenced, but a final round given after Brown had finished dialogue and trailer faded out.



Two of the photos on this page show outer and inner lobby displays built by the art department of the Midwest. The one at entrance to lobby was used during run of picture and the other will show how accompanying copy was given a local slant. Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray refers to "ringing the fire bells" and copy on hat applied to a suburban community which is the butt of many jokes. The small photo shows a sample of original newspaper advertising that carries out the same idea.

Bachelors!

The staff of the New Missourian theatre in Columbia, Mo., is boasting, and apparently, with good reason. They claim to be the best educated individual outfit in the business, with eight candidates for college degrees, a former high school principal and one man due for his third degree numbered among them. The University of Missouri is the education-dispenser for the lot. The manager, Rex P. Barrett, holds an A.B. and M.A. with a Ph.D. due this year. The head usher, the ticket seller and two others receive A.B.'s at next spring's commencement; another usher is set for his Bachelor of Journalism degree in January and the projectionists divide their time between the booth and the schools of Journalism and Engineering, respectively. At any rate, they all have the same Alma Mater.

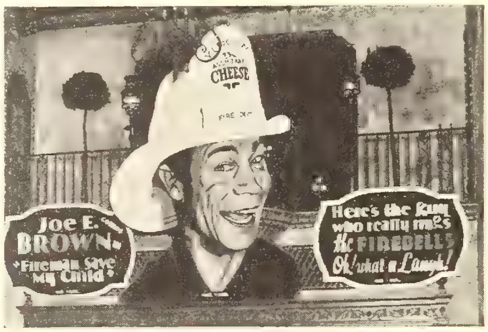
Again using the Pepper Martin angle, a tie-up was made with the local A. G. Spalding branch for a special window that displayed baseball accessories and Joe E. Brown copy. Two other special windows were secured with a hardware firm and another store.

Another advance stunt pulled six days before opening was a preview for the younger element for the dual purpose of attracting revenue and word-of-mouth comment. This also attracted out-of-town visitors in search of week-end entertainment. The following Saturday night, or during run of picture, another special midnight show was held. Both were highly successful.



There can be no doubt that Schoeppel and his crew put over a corking campaign on this picture, which makes him eligible as one of the contenders for serious money in the current race for honors on "Fireman." Many of his ideas will be useful to other members of this Club and we are glad of the opportunity to pass them along. Incidentally, we'd like to have some examples of the attractive art work being turned out by the Midwest's art department. We can clearly see from photos that the boys who are creating this work are right on the job. That front must have been a corker and we'd like some close-ups of other work. Shoot some along, Postermen, so we can show the rest of the gang what you are doing.

HERE'S SOME STUNTS LOUIS COLLINS USED TO BOOST BOX OFFICE

One of our recently elected members, Louis V. Collins, manager of the Illinois Theatre, Metropolis, Ill., has been boosting mid-week slump in trade by tying up with local merchants for a "Merchants' Night." He holds these shows on Wednesdays and Thursdays and each merchant donates $5 to the expense fund. It's really a two-for-one stunt, as the tickets given out by the merchants with each 35c purchase entitle the holder to a free admission if accompanied by another paid admission, but it's the kind of a two-for-one that the merchant, not the theatre, pays for. Thus, in addition to being paid for the tickets, the theatre comes in for much boosting and advertising from the several merchants.

While Collins has a limited amount of talent to draw upon in his town for Amateur Nights he has tried these affairs out and found the move a good one for stimulating summer trade. He arranged with a merchant for the give-away of a radio for the first show and since then has handled other give-aways, in the usual fashion, at various times. It took him four days to sell a baker the idea of furnishing the first radio but the baker came around later on and wanted to know when he could get in on another show, stating that his trade had been increased 35 per cent through customers saving the wrappers on the bread.

Collins also works in with the local high school and United Charities. Each year he holds a benefit for the school club and after expenses are taken out for the show the students receive 50 per cent for selling tickets. Last Fall he held a toy matinee for the benefit of the local charity group and as the result a truckload of toys was hauled away and distributed to poor children. The show did hurt the night trade, he states, but figures that the theatre was repaid a hundredfold in creation of good will.

To know his townspeople and those in neighboring towns is one of Collins' pet theories for getting somewhere in show-business and it's easy to see that he puts action behind this idea. All of which is in line with this Club's stand that managers who are making good should be left alone and not moved off to some strange city. Don't wake us up, Louis, let us dream on . . . maybe the big shots will some day come to realize this fact.

GOLD IS BUSY WITH BIG JUNE FESTIVAL; MORE DETAILS LATER

Erwin Gold, supervisor of Randforce theatres in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn, N. Y., is very active these days with his June Festival, which holds promise of being one of the most elaborate affairs of its kind ever held in the community. A King and Queen of the Festival are to be elected, motion pictures of the ceremonies taken, with all expenses paid by participating merchants.

His recent activities also included the booking of five benefit theatre parties, the successful appearance of "Uncle Robert," a Boy Scout Parade and special evenings set aside for give-aways by merchants.

Gold is an enthusiastic showman and one of the live wires on the Randforce circuit. We are sure that Club members will be interested in hearing details of his June Festival.

WHY DELAY ANY LONGER—JOIN NOW!

LOUIS HELLBORN'S name will have a familiar ring to the ears of many showman-members of this Club. He's the manager of the RKO Hollywood Theatre down in Fort Worth, Texas, and we're taking this opportunity to inform his fellow managers that Hellborn is now a regular Round Tabler and that they may expect to hear what methods he is using to sell shows in his town. The Hollywood is a 2,000-seater operating on first run with changes Saturday and Wednesdays, enough to keep any man on the job. Now that you're one of the gang, Louis, don't shirk the responsibility of your membership. Let the Club hear from you regularly.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

HENRY H. ZEIDEL is holding down the job of assisting R. Pearson with the management of the New American Theatre, San Jose, Calif. He is an old time showman, at one time in charge of a theatre on the West Coast Circuit, but has been away from the game for several years and is starting in again as assistant. He likes our department, and since he's to do publicity work for Pearson, hopes to be able to contribute some interesting information for us to pass along to other Club members. We're happy to acknowledge his application and want him to do his bit. We know he'll regain that rung of the ladder in due time.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

LORING MOOTH is the manager of the Studio Theatre, Hollywood, Calif., and a recent letter from this new Club member advises us that he was promoted to this post a short time ago from the rank of assitant manager. Good work, Loring, and we're very glad to include your name on the roster. Your house is described as "Hollywood's most Unique Theatre." What's so unique about it? Next time you drop us a line tell us the story. And don't get cold feet just because, as you state, your house is subsequent run. Shoot along an account of whatever you may do in the business of show-selling. Your fellow members will be interested.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

RAY MEYER hails from the good old city of Philadelphia, Pa., where he manages the Northwestern Theatre, and we're taking this opportunity to acknowledge his application for membership in the Round Table Club. There are a lot of live showmen down in his city and this department has been extremely fortunate in the past in being able to pass along many excellent suggestions from Quaker City representatives. There's no reason to even harbor a thought that Ray will not strive his level best to live up to the good reputation set by his neighbors. So shoot an account of what you've been doing, Meyer, and we'll do the rest.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

ROBERT V. JACKSON is located up in Buffalo, N. Y., where he is holding down the job of house manager for George McKenna, director of the New Lafayette Theatre. George started in this business as an usher at the Rivoli, Main stem, New York City, and subsequently took a course in the Publix Managers' Training School. He met up with George McKenna out in Salt Lake City, where he served as assistant manager to Mack for one year. We're mighty glad to have Jackson with us and hope he'll do his bit for the Club. Incidentally, Bob, pass along our best regards to your chief and ask him to drop the Club a line whenever he can spare the time.

ARCHIE E. CONNOLLY is the assistant manager and treasurer of the RKO Greenpoint Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., and we're also glad to have the opportunity of listing his name among the assistant managers in this organization. When not counting up the shekels, Archie is right on the job helping John Sheridan manage the house, and with these two new members, plus other Round Tablers over in Greenpoint, our Club should not suffer for news from this section of the city. Keep in touch with headquarters, Archie.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

BOB WATSON is the manager of the Cozy Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., and he's still another new member of this organization to be accounted for. Four years ago, before migrating to the film capital, Watson was associated with the Gumbiner Brothers and Orenstein and Wells, Chicago, and we're sure his former showman-friends in the latter city will be glad to know that he still has his health and is getting along famously out on the coast. Glad to have you with us, Bob, and now let's have your word that you'll become a regular contributor to these pages.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

JOE C. GREENFIELD operates the Franklin Theatre in New York City for RKO, a 3,000-seater up on Prospect Avenue, and we're glad of the opportunity to introduce this experienced showman to his fellow Round Tablers. Before going with the RKO Circuit he spent six years with Publix in Des Moines and the Publix-Balaban-Katz group of theatres in Chicago. Without a doubt Joe has a good show selling stunt up hih sleeve and if we can just get that writing arm of his working it's a foregone conclusion that this department will be the gainer.

R. W. THAYER'S name is another one which will be familiar to many members of this organization. He's another RKO man to join the Round Table Club and we're glad of the opportunity to acknowledge his application for membership. He manages the 2,600-seat Riverside Theatre out in Milwaukee, home of many Club representatives, and addition of his name to our ever-increasing list is further indication that Milwaukee will always have mention of her showmen among the yarns in this department. Now that you're one of us, Thayer, do your level best to let the rest of the gang know what's going on at your house.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

THOMAS O. DAVIS has charge of the RKO Palace, Columbus, Ohio, and with his name to add to this constantly growing organization of showmen, the RKO contingent continues to expand its ranks. We've already informed readers that Arden Strang, RKO publicity and advertising man in Columbus, is a Club member, and now that the Round Table has two enterprising representatives at the Palace, this department should not suffer from lack of news. Get the spirit, Tom, and shoot along a few show-selling ideas that we can hand out to your fellow members.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

EDWARD P. KENNELLY is another RKO man to hook up with the Round Table Club, and now's the time to introduce him to his fellow showmen. Kennelly has charge of the RKO Regent Theatre out in Grand Rapids, Mich., a 1,800-seater, devoted to straight picture policy. We're mighty glad to list his name along with the many live-wire showmen in this organization and sincerely hope that he will find time to keep us all informed on what is going on in show-business out his way. Just a short account now and then about your campaign, Ed, and your duty will have been fulfilled.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

W. F. FREIDAY hails from over in Portland, Maine, where he manages the Keith's Theatre for RKO. His is a 1,900-seat house operating on pictures and vaudeville the first half of the week and double features the last half. The Club has a number of representatives up in Freiday's section of the country and we're glad to add his name to the list. We'd like to hear further from this newly-selected member on what methods he's using to sell his shows.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

ARDEN R. STRANG has charge of advertising and publicity for the RKO Palace and Majestic Theatres, Columbus, Ohio, and now that he's on our list of new Club members, maybe we'll have an opportunity to find out what's going on in showbusiness out his way. He has plenty to do in looking after the filling of over 3,000 seats, but we're going to hope there will be sufficient time for this newly elected Round Tabler to contribute some helpful suggestions to this department. We trust Strang will keep this thought in mind.

—Wear Your Club Pin! ! !—

CLYDE E. ELLIOTT is the managing director of the Melrose Park Theatre, Melrose Park, Ill., and he's still another showman in line for introduction to this big army of Round Tablers. We've just received his application for membership in this Club and will take it for granted that he proposes to become a regular contributor to these pages. What was that last stunt you used to boost the good old box office, Elliott? Send along an account of it so we can pass the information along to the rest of our outfit.

STAGE ATTRACTIONS
FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Buddy Rogers and Orchestra
New York Palace

Using a microphone, Buddy announces that the band will play "That's Why Darkies Were Born," after which the former screen star introduces his band in a novel manner. The band then goes into a chorus of "Somebody Stole My Gal," with the xylophone taking the lead and Rogers at the drums. Raymond Baer, saxophone player, offers a clarinet solo, esthusiastically received. Two boys each sing a vocal chorus of "Sweet Sue" and "Lullaby of the Leaves," after which Buddy offers "You Can Make my Life a Bed of Roses," from "Hot-Cha." Two others join Rogers in singing "All of a Sudden," and for a finale Buddy proves his versatility by playing the trumpet, oboe, drums, piano, trombone and the accordion in succession. For an encore Buddy shows how movies are made, the orchestra clowning throughout. Rogers got a great big hand.—H. P.

Benny Ross (2)
Brooklyn Madison

A young man with personality plus and a voice that is most outstanding, offers among his accomplishments a singing routine of impersonations, of many well known stars, winning the audience for the entire 17 minutes. He is full of pep, an excellent showman and an entertaining performer. In decided contrast to Ross' snappy work, is his beautiful feminine assistant, Maxine, who languidly does a high-kick and turnover split routine and acts as foil for his laughable gags. Maxine does her work well, and with a slow-going easiness that accentuates Ross' speedy deliveries. The act as a whole is clean, entertaining and a show-stopper for any billl.—E. D.

Duke Ellington Orchestra (21)
Cincinnati Albee

This organization of colored musicians, singers and hoofers headlined and occupy the normal running time of two regular acts. "Hot" syncopated dance tunes in brass are featured in the characteristic rapid tempo for which the race is famous, and they are done in a manner indicating talent that is inherent. "Mood Indigo," a lively, fast-moving number, is one of the highlights. In the company are Ivy Anderson, Kid Charleston and the Four Step Brothers, who respectively feature blues songs and dancing.

Lynn Cowan & Co. (5)
Milwaukee Wisconsin

Here's an act with plenty of snap. Cowan is a good singer and adept at wisecracks. He sings "Whistle Your Blues Away" and "Waiting for You" with pep, accompanied by his pianist. Included in his company is a jolly young woman who sings "Too Many Tears" in a deep bass, and two comedy tap dancers who are also good for several laughs. The act opens with Cowan singing "Whistle Your Blues Away" and closes with the troupe singing the same number.

First Radio City Broadcast Starts Work on New Building

The National Broadcasting Company on July 2 will broadcast over a Coast-to-Coast network the first air program from Radio City in New York. The broadcast will mark the laying of the cornerstone for the British Empire Building, a unit in the center.

Lord Southborough, heading the syndicate which has taken a long lease on the building, and H. H. Stevens, Canadian minister of trade and commerce, will be the principal speakers. The program will be sent via short-wave to England, there to be re-broadcast by the British Broadcasting Company.

"Rio Rita" Version to Play Full Year in Major Cities

The rather lengthy version of "Rio Rita," musical success of several years ago, which played last week at the Capitol in New York, has been routed for a full year, until June, 1933, to play the country's key cities, according to Louis K. Sidney, production manager at the Capitol.

The present version of the show contains a cast of 80, including Kitty Carlisle, Allan Waterous, Dave Mallen and Earle Hampton in the principal roles. Others are Alberto Carillo, Joyce White, Caryl Bergman, Charles Mast, Charles Pittinger and an ensemble of 56. The original musical score is retained.

Belgium Composers Society Sets New Music Tariff Rates

The Society of Authors and Composers of Belgium has established new tariffs on musical authors' rights in the country, it was announced at the recent annual convention of the Belgium Exhibitors' Association, according to George R. Canty, American trade commissioner in Berlin.

The tariff, effective April 1, provides for tax of one per cent for silent films where the net weekly receipts are from 1,000 to 40,000 Belgium francs, and 1.5 per cent for receipts over 40,000 francs. On sound films, the tax is according to a graduated scale, ranging from one per cent to 2.5 per cent, depending upon weekly receipts.

Crosby in Paramount Film

Bing Crosby has arrived at the Paramount Coast studio for appearance in "The Big Broadcast," radio film, following a series of personal appearances. With Crosby in the film will be the Mills Brothers, Burns and Allen, the Boswell Sisters, Cab Calloway, Arthur Tracy, Donald Novis.

REVUES

Paul Whiteman and Orchestra
New York Paramount

The not-so-rotund "King of Jazz" appears on the stage at the opening strains of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" in which the pianist does a solo. "Sylvia" then is played by a violin quartet with a vocal chorus by Jack Fulton. The Rhythm Boys then offer a hot rendition of "Jig Time," after which three pianos do "Birmingham Bertha," in a hot arrangement finally modulating into "Lovable," as an accompaniment for the famous "Red" McKenzie, whose efforts drew a big hand. Whiteman then renders an effective violin solo "When Day Is Done," accompanied by a violin quartet, receiving a fine reception. After a torrid rendition of "Wabash Blues" by the banjoist, the entire orchestra plays "Dark Eyes," after which "Goldy," the hot cornet player, offers a solo of "Bend Down Sister," sings a chorus and then does a tap dance, providing comedy throughout. Whiteman introduces Sylvia Froos, radio star, who sings "Whistle and Blow Your Blues Away," "If It Ain't Love" and a medley consisting of "Happy-Go-Lucky You," "My Silent Love" and "Lullaby of the Leaves," earning a fine reception. For a finale, the orchestra plays a version of "St. Louis Blues," during which a girl and boy danced in true Harlem fashion. The entire bill was enthusiastically received.—H. P.

Vogues of 1932 (4)
Detroit Hollywood

Curry and DeSylvia, Lillian Lorraine and Eddie Jewell have a combination of talents that makes this a well balanced act. Curry and DeSylvia open with an acrobatic waltz. Following this a girl in blue flimsies offers a dance interpretation of "Rhapsody in Blue" and "St. Louis Blues." A baritone who sings "Lawd, You Made the Night Too Long," varies his tempo in a manner that is effective but difficult for an orchestra to follow. A spotlighted rhapsodic Oriental dance by one of the girls wins rapt attention. The two men and one girl offer a song and dance version of "Who's Your Little Whoozis" to close.

SINGERS

Lillian Shade
New York Palace

This personable young woman starts with "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Smile Darn Ya, Smile," after which she gets a big hand for her interpretation of "Minnie the Moocher." Miss Shade then sings "Satan's Holiday" and closes with "Waitin' for the Robert E. Lee." Her songs were enthusiastically received.—H. P.

Anna Chang
Detroit Fox

Miss Chang's impersonation of Anna May Wong is long enough to drag, and just a shade too petulant.

REVIEWS OF ACTS FOR PICTURE THEATRES

NOVELTY

Hal LeRoy

Brooklyn Albee

Effectively assisting LeRoy in his first appearance in local vaudeville houses are Jackie Heller, a great little showman, and Doris Groday, a beauteous blonde. Jackie acts as master of ceremonies, stops the show with his own specialty of singing, and works with Hal and the girl in a few laughable blackouts. After the introduction of LeRoy by Heller and a little clowning, Hal and Doris offer an entertaining eccentric rhythm routine, meeting with great response. Jackie is on next with his specialty and sings "Lawd, You Made the Night Too Long," stopping the show with it. This young fellow is a great performer. Doris in a throaty voice sings a popular tune and follows it with a snappily done rhythm tap routine, which earns her a good reception.

LeRoy, the wizard of "legmania," for his specialty first offers the original eccentric dance routine he first presented in the "Follies," following with another original soft-shoe routine which also gets a great amount of applause. Jackie and Doris join him to close. As the show caught, audience applauded until Jackie and Hal encored with a song and dance.—E. D.

Maidie and Ray

New York Capitol

Maidie and Ray, dressed as cowgirl and cowboy, offer a routine of clever work with the lariat. Opening with a stunt made famous by Will Rogers, Ray then twirls seven loops simultaneously, using his hips, hands and lips. Maidie does a roll across the stage, at the same time, looping the lariat. This act was well received.—H. P.

Dorothy Lee & Tom Waring

Brooklyn Madison

Tom Waring, one of the famous Waring boys, acts as master of ceremonies and accompanist for the vivacious and beautiful motion picture star, Dorothy Lee. The pert little Miss Lee radiates the youth and friendliness that have so rapidly made her a favorite with film fans. As her share she entertains the audience with a number of the songs she has sung in pictures, a well done eccentric rhythm tap dance and a vocal duet and dance with Waring for closing. Tom comes in for his share of applause for his renditions of two vocal numbers of one of which he is co-composer.

This team offers twenty-three minutes of entertainment.—E. D.

Snoozer, Jr.

New York Palace

Snoozer, Jr., is a canine, who goes through a routine of stunts to prove his intelligence. His trainer, Mr. M. E. Meredith, has Snoozer, Jr., get props, fight or play with a cat, do a clever blindfold trick, and asks the dog to remember a number suggested early in the performance by the audience. At the finale Snoozer barks the number given. This act is quite different and was duly appreciated.—H. P.

Sam Hearn

Philadelphia Fox

Sam Hearn, dressed as an old soldier, has a line of clever rapid-fire patter that makes a decided hit. He follows this with a dramatic story with musical effects by the orchestra that is most unusual.

Tom and Betty Wonder (2)

Detroit Fisher

These two open like a couple of irrepressible high school kids, doing a song and dance with "Aw, Come On; Let's Get Friendly," which is clipped into a fast specialty. The high spot in the act is Tom's top-hat-and-stick strut to "St. Louis Blues." Betty's lunacy antics in her "Minnie the Moocher" brought mixed reaction. Tom's dance with a life-size dummy attached to his wrists and ankles is a clever novelty.

Jean Granese

Brooklyn Albee

Miss Granese effectively displays her talent for singing, but the important part of this act is the comedy in "wop" dialect offered by her brother Charles and Tito DeFiore, her accompanist. The opening of the act is the "straight" singing of the popular "Sing a New Song," by Miss Granese. Interruptions by Charles and Tito from the front part of the orchestra came as a distinct surprise and proved highly entertaining.

After a few minutes of crossfire talk, both boys join Jean, with Charles singing a bit from "Pagliacci," and is followed by Jean, who sings another popular number with Tito accompanying her at the piano. The trio then harmonize their voices on an Italian song, following it with a popular American number for finish. Their voices harmonize very well. Audience reaction is very favorable.—E. D.

Scooter Lowry

New York Palace

Scooter Lowry of the famous "Our Gang" comedies, has been in vaude these past six years and has acquired a winning stage personality. He opens, dressed as a street urchin and tells a few gags, then goes into a buck and wing. Changing into a full dress, he sings, "There's Nothin' Too Good for My Baby," getting a nice hand. For a finale, Scooter offers a rhythm tap dance which was well received.—H. P.

SINGERS

Roxy Theatre Ensemble (11)

New York Palace

This mixed ensemble of eleven voices opens with "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," in a setting depicting a cotton field. A girl sings "Chloe," followed by a male duo in "Ole Man River," with the second chorus ensemble. A boy and girl sing "Play Gypsies, Dance Gypsies" and "Sweetheart," closing with all voices. In the finale the group don Bavarian costumes and offer a German novelty song. The audience liked this one.—H. P.

Oklahoma Bob Albright

Detroit Hollywood

Albright opens with an impersonation of Jules Bledsoe singing "Old Man River." As a baritone he is fair, but fakes plenty of melody. His patter is aged and poor. The girl, a blond pianist, offers breathless jazz to contrast with Albright's oldtime numbers. This is no act for an exacting audience.

Consuelo Gonzales

Detroit Fox

This dark-skinned creature apes the fiery, lightning changing manner of Lupe Velez with Mexican songs and gestures. Given the opportunity she could stop the show.

DANCERS

Adler and Bradford

Brooklyn Albee

Miss Adler opens the performance with an aesthetic toe dance, done on darkened stage. Effective lighting enhanced her display of gracefulness. At Teddy Bradford's appearance the team go into an adagio routine that is done with the precision of clockwork. Their work is done with the best of ease and grace and to an appreciative audience. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. D.

Falls, Reading and Boyce

New York Palace

This trio, two boys and a girl, open with a tap dance, after which the girl gets a nice hand for an acrobatic dance. Then the boys offer a difficult bit in which one does a flip and lands on his partner's hands, retaining balance throughout. For a finale the trio do an acrobatic flash. The audience liked this.—H. P.

Frances Lee

Jersey City Stanley

This little ingenue of picture fame pleases the audience with her singing and dancing. Though she formerly was a comedienne in pictures, she plays the ingenue in this show. She is personable, a good performer, and proved pleasing to this audience.—E. D.

Allen and Kent

New York Capitol

These two boys offer a routine of tap dancing, including several specialty bits, for which they were rewarded generously. Lack of time, due to a long show, prevented this team from doing a complete performance.—H. P.

Carrie & Eddy (4)

Brooklyn Metropolitan

A novelty dancing act with plenty flash. Presented in three scenes with an unbilled chap and girl doing fill-ins between scenes. The principals offered first, an adagio routine, with Miss Carrie featuring toe work between stunts. The unbilled man act as m. c. throughout the act and does, as his share, introductory singing, an introductory skit, song and dance to the "Dracula" dance of Carrie and Eddy, and a good drunk routine. The unbilled young lady fills in with singing "Human Thing to Do," and in the finale. This young lady has loads of personality which make up somewhat for her lack of ability to sing.—E. D.

Dorothy June

Detroit Fox

This fascinating young woman is described as the "Sweetheart of Cocoanut Grove." Her work consists of acrobatic dancing, with an especially clever variety of somersaults.

Marietta

Detroit Fox

Here is an Earl Carroll girl doing a dance interpretation of "Rhapsody in Blue" that is a genuine delicacy. Her performance fairly throbs with the rhythm and seething excitation of the Gershwin music. By contrast, the Fanchon and Marco Beauties supporting her are devoid of lustre.

Laurell and Ted

Philadelphia Fox

Posing as statues, in white against a crimson light, Laurell and Ted make a striking entrance for their esthetic and adagio dancing.

REVIEWS OF STAGE ACTS

ACROBATICS

Joe Fanton & Co. (3)

Brooklyn Madison

This male acrobatic team offer unusual feats in their five-minute appearance at this house. The short time they were on was due to an earlier injury to one of them.

Fanton does the main tricks, such as feats of strength, trapeze work while blindfolded, and a springboard stunt in which he is shot into the air catching himself by his toes on the hanging trapeze for a sensational closing.

This act is among the most outstanding of its kind and all the applause it received was merited.—E. D.

Luzied Arabs (12)

New York Palace

Here is a flash acrobatic act in which a dozen big and little Arabs either tumble across the stage simultaneously or build human pyramids. In the finale, one of the principals holds the entire company on his shoulders. This different act was well received.—H. P.

Lucky Boys (6)

Jersey City Stanley

The famous Lucky Boys offer routine of rizzly and acrobatic work, interspersed with comedy talk and antics, that get laughs and much applause. Their work is just about the best of its kind offered by any of this type team. It is done in a style both showmanly and sensational.—E. D.

Archie and Gertie Falls

Baltimore Hippodrome

This acrobatic act with comedy went over well. It starts with Gertie doing stunts on single rope held at the base by Archie finishing with a slow slide upside down to stage. The second part has Archie in slap-stick comedy and Gertie in trapeze work.

Four Clovers

Philadelphia Fox

These four tumblers put on a finished tumbling act, jumping from a springboard, turning over in midair and landing in a standing position on the shoulders of the other members of the quartet or in a sitting position in an arm chair balanced on the shoulders of one of them.

COMEDY

Al Trahan

New York Palace

Al Trahan, as a comedian, has always been a favorite of this audience and the reason is obvious. Trahan, clowning at the piano, cannot accompany his blond partner, who insists on rendering operatic selections, and his antics are full of mirth. They finally sing "If You Were the Only Girl," after which the girl starts to sing: "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier," but they wind up with a "wrestling bout" which is uproarious. The act stopped this show.—H. P.

Mel Klee

Brooklyn Albee

Klee, blackface comedian, offers 27 minutes of laughs, gags and songs. Outstanding in this turn is a comedy monologue on marriage and impersonations in song of famous radio stars. The act as a whole is good for any audience.—E. D.

George Beatty

New York Palace

Opening with comedy chatter which is good for laughs, Beatty goes into a song called "Unemployed Gigolo," with some funny choruses. Beatty then sings a parody called "Landlord, Stay Way From My Door," after which he reads a few hilarious telegrams. His impersonation of a drunken sailor proves a novel finale.—H. P.

Fred Lightner and Company (2)

Baltimore Hippodrome

Fred comes on and goes into his familiar comedy hokum and sings Spanish burlesque, followed by comedy dialogue with the girl, and the singing of "Feeling the Way I Do."

Billy Dooley

Jersey City Stanley

Dooley, famous for his "Goofy Gob" comedies, carries on in the same way he formerly did in pictures. In his act he offers comedy antics and routines of comedy dancing, winning the audience.—E. D.

Block and Sully

New York Palace

This boy and girl act opens with comedy dialogue with the girl acting the part of "Dumb Dora," getting plenty of laughs. Then a chorus of "Lovable," more comedy chatter and both sing "You're the One," going into a novelty dance for the finale. There was a round of applause.—H. P.

Jack North

Baltimore Hippodrome

North's comedy monologue and song, "Just Whistle and Blow Your Blues Away," and clever medley of various popular tunes drew good applause.

Seymour and Howard

Loew's Yonkers

This is the proverbial man and wife argument with many good laughs. In several spots the material could be brushed up to obtain better results. However, a night club scene, climaxed by Miss Howard swallowing a whole quart of liquid, gets a good laugh and helps.—H. P.

Judy and Charon

Detroit Fox

A large part of the audience must have been deceived into believing they were actually seeing Laurel and Hardy when this pair appeared. The only objection to their clowning skit is its brevity.

Swor and Goode

Brooklyn Fox

These blackface comedians, dressed in comedy attire, do well with their routine of "Amos 'n Andy" chatter; they do not imitiate those two famous characters but their talk is in the same vein. They open in one, with a card game, offering laughable talk while playing; then one plays a Jew's Harp, while the other does a comedy dance. They close the act with a good comedy dance and earn a good reception. This act is on for 8 minutes and all of it is entertaining.

SPOTS & SHOTS ON BROADWAY

Vaudevillians should find some consolation in the statement issued by Harry Kosch, receiver of the Roxy theatre, to the effect that he intends to spend an additional $4,000 a week for stage attractions.

Ben Bernie, the old "maestro," never is without two miniature Jewish and American flags, going Geo. M. Cohan one better.

Patricia Dawn, who is doing a fine job of her programs via WOR, says that Al Smith's new theme song is "Yeast Side, Wet Side." But Monty Siegel still insists that it's "Bye Bye, Mr. Dry, You're All Wet."

From where we sit it looks as if Cherry Blossom and June Priesser, those talented kids from Dixie, who wowed a Palace audience recently, will do their stuff in Phil Baker's forthcoming show.

Rudy Vallee returns to li'l old N'Yawk to open this week at the Paramount.

Kitty Doner's home at Ossining is over a hundred years old and is located on property which has been owned by the same family for 170 years, the present owner still having in his possession the original deed signed by George the Third of England.

Buddy Valentine, songwriter, showed George Dewey Washington a song entitled "The Whole World Loves a Lover," which for the past three years had lain in the safe at DeSylva, Brown & Henderson. Washington immediately made it the feature of his act and claims that it is the best song since "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Don't call the reserves if your friend insists that he saw snakes on Broadway. The marquee above the Mayfair theatre has been made into a pseudo-jungle to ballyhoo the picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

Vincent Youmans is doing the score for Shubert's Third edition of "Americana." Honest.

Mack Gordon and Harry Revel are writing the scores for a musical comedy and a revue, both slated for Broadway production this fall.

Yasha Bunchuk, celebrating his third year as conductor of the Capitol Grand orchestra, is the proud owner of a 250-year-old Guarneri 'cello, presented to him by General Limoff, commander-in-chief of the Russian Army during the Romanoff regime.

OVERTURES

JOHN CRISPIN (Detroit Michigan) affects elegance here with an overture entitled "Operatic Echoes From The Metropolitan." Don Miller at the console expertly blends in organ notes to add to the volume of the arrangement. The selections are the Prologue from "Pagliacci," Mephistopheles' Arts from "Faust," "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Delilah" and a chorus from "Tannhauser." Crispin, who took Eduard Werner's place here, has the austere manner of a German music master.

---

JACK SPRIGG (Cincinnati Albee), previously assistant conductor, who succeeds Charles Stone as leader of the pit combination, presents "A Night in Venice" as his initial overture. This special arrangement is replete with harmony and rhythm. Although Sprigg is not as long on showmanship as was his predecessor, he nevertheless had his men under perfect control, and had them doing their stuff with their customary verve, which is plenty.

---

WALT ROESNER (San Francisco Fox) and the Fox Concert Orchestra demonstrate that there is a lot to be said for jazz when it is at its best. The program is made up of numbers written since 1920, or recently arranged in jazz tempo. Featured numbers are "In a Little Spanish Town," "Pale Moon," "Three O'clock in the Morning," with light effects, and a substantial part of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." The finale is especially effective and Walt takes several bows, as does also George Wendt, whose trumpet work is outstanding.

---

LOU FORBES (New Orleans Saenger) and the pit orchestra score almost a show stop with an overture that is surefire from beginning to end. The first part is entitled "Black Man's Fantasy," and is a medley splendidly played, orchestrated and lighted. "Lullaby of the Leaves," played by the orchestra and sung by Lee Mason, gives Forbes the chance to do a violin solo. Louis Prima, the former Louis Armstrong trumpeter, here shows he is changing his style, going in for a "sweet" style. The closing number was "Lou for President," with Gordon Kirst singing a rime proposing Forbes as president and the band cheering through megaphones. Forbes' acceptance speech was a riot of fun. This was announced as the final week for Forbes and the orchestra. Both will be missed.

UP AND DOWN THE ALLEY

HELLO EVERYBODY

The music business has gone through a cycle of "holiday" songs, such as "Satan's Holiday," "Lovers' Holiday," "Cupid's Holiday," and now Louis Bernstein, president of Shapiro, Bernstein, and president of M. P. P. A., offers a "Publishers Holiday," the purpose of which, he hopes, will be a solution for the betterment of the music business. . . .

The Gensler, Anthony, Delecorte musical show, "Ballyhoo," has a number of first-class vaudeville acts booked for it, through the Jenie Jacobs agency. . . . Among them are Milt. Charleston, who recently "stooged" for Ken Murray at the New York and Brooklyn Paramount theatres, Paul Draper, clever tap dancer, who recently closed at the Roxy, Guerney and Stillman and Hector and His Pals. . . .

Florence and Her Rhythm Boys, vaudeville band, are now playing over WOR and WMCA under the name Rox-Anne and Her Boys. . . .

The blonde Rox-Anne is a former organist of note. . . . Ken Vincent, musician in Leon Belasco's radio orchestra, is the composer of the popular DeSylva, Brown and Henderson hit, "Hummin' to Myself." . . . Heard Ted Brewer, orchestra leader at Yoeug's Restaurant, played "Heart to Heart" over the Columbia chain in a recent broadcast, and it seems that Keit, Engle, the publishers, have what looks to be a hit song in this number. . . .

The "King of Jazz" is to be complimented on his good revue currently at Publix's ace spot, the Paramount. . . . The "King," though not as rotund as formerly, has lost none of his ability to entertain and "sell" his acts. . . .

One of these days, big things will be heard of that popular associate producer, Charlie "Publix" Schmertz, over at Paramount. . . . Here is a young fellow who has been with the firm for the past seven years. For a fellow only 25 years old, he deserves a lot of credit for the ability he shows in assisting Boris Petroff in producing shows for the New York and Brooklyn Paramounts. . . .

Minor and Root, ballroom dancers, featured in the stage production at the Paramount, Brooklyn, are also appearing nightly at the St. Moritz hotel here in town. . . . His "Hi-De-Hi-ness," Cab Calloway, and His Cotton Club Orchestra have just completed their last appearance in New York until next fall. . . . This famous aggregation are currently at the Jersey Loew's and from there leave on a ten weeks' tour of picture houses throughout the country. . . . Baron Lee and His Blue Rhythm Band, currently playing Loew's vaudeville around town, will succeed the Calloway orchestra at the Cotton Club during the summer. . . .

S'long......ED DAWSON

ORGAN SOLOS

TED CRAWFORD (Phoenix Orpheum) presented a very unique solo built around the sensational song hit, "Paradise." Calling his solo "A Trip to Paradise," Crawford opened with Gershwin's "Stairway to Paradise," went into the old waltz, "Paradise," and then into the crashing chords of the "Ascension" music from Faust. Following this beautifully played music with a whip-like modulation from full organ into a softly played chorus of the popular waltz, "Paradise," a repeat of this chorus in which the audience was asked to whistle brought a terrific hand and an encore.

PULIA DAWN (New Orleans Saenger) completed her engagement here with a request solo that brings several popular numbers into play. She used "Humoresque" to have slides announce that she had received several demands for requests and that she had selected them in the order of their arrival, so as to be fair. "Snuggled in your Arms" followed, nicely played, but falling flat with the audience. The ever popular "Nola" brought life to her program, with some nimble, if not precise, fingering demonstrated by Miss Dawn, and to close, as well as to bid her audience farewell, though no hint of the fact this was her last week was allowed in the solo, she both played and sang "Auf Wiedersehn." The audience received her nicely.

---

GERMAINE "GEE" REEDER (Two Rivers Rivoli), recently presented one of the most outstanding organ novelties ever offered to patrons of this house. Miss Reeder entitled her presentation "Hawaiian Moods," and opened with "Hello Aloha," a medley of popular Polynesian compositions following. The popular organist built up the finale of the solo with her own arrangement of "Don't Say Aloha," and "Aloha Oe," earning applause seldom equaled at the house. Good mention must also be given for the effective lighting and background slide effects.

---

ROBERT G. CLARKE (Detroit Hollywood), under the title, "Opera Guyed," offers a group of popular numbers spaced by classical melodies and slide lines playing on the names of famous composers. "All of Me," "Home" and "Paradise" are a happy selection for the first half of the program. A whistling version of the "Barcarolle" is a pleasant novelty. A parody of "Go Home And Tell Your Mother" tickled the audience, and "Somebody Loves You" roused every voice for the finish.

Now they're "shooting" it on location, too

FOR some time after its announcement, Eastman Super-sensitive Panchromatic Film was used chiefly under artificial light. Now many cameramen are "shooting" it on location, too ...for these reasons: (1) Its speed substantially lengthens the photographic day...(2) It offers special advantages in photographing certain types of scenes and costumes...(3) In all scenes it yields that subtly superior quality which marks the most advanced motion picture photography...(4) It gives the cinematographer a single negative medium for all purposes...a medium which, once fully understood, affords a range of possibilities bounded only by the user's imagination and technical skill. Eastman Kodak Company. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)
